129 LICENSES NEEDED TO BREAK MARRIAGE RECORD

1172 Have Been Issued Thus Far in 1930—Record is 1,300

One hundred twenty-nine marriage licenses during the month of December are needed if the all-time yearly record for the issuance of permits is to be broken at the office of the Clerk of the Circuit court this year. Thus far 1172 have been issued and the record is 1300, made in 1927. That this number would not be reached under ordinary circumstances was pointed out by comparing the number needed with the number for December of other years. Last year 90 were issued. The record for December was made in 1920 when 131 were issued but the average since that time has been less than 100.

Twenty permits were issued during the past week ending Monday at noon. This gave November a total of 112 licenses. Six of those issued were marked "don't publish".

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

By FRANK P. LITSCHERT

One of the facts concerning the recent election most commented on by political writers is the closeness of the vote in many states and in many districts where in a number of instances a corporal's guard of voters could have changed the results by voting differently or where a few more voters going to the polls might have decisively altered the result of the election. Quite often we have heard the so-called sovereign citizen say that he did not intend taking the trouble to go to the polls because his vote would not alter the result in any event.

This closeness of the result in many parts of the country has inspired some writers to delve into the past for examples of where one or two votes might have made decisive changes in the result. Mr. W. H. Smith, writing in the Washington, D. C., Post, has revived the story of the famous de-Kaib County, Indiana, instance, which has often been quoted in the past by politicians in their efforts to get out the vote. As Mr. Smith puts it:

"The vote of one farmer in DeKalb County, Ind., has been credited with bringing on the war with Mexico, with all its tremendous results of giving to the United States the vast empire now composing the states of New Mexico, Oklahoma, Utah, Nevada, and California, and making, first, Gen. Taylor president, and then Franklin Pierce."

According to the story the farmer didn't go to the polls in the morning but remembered late in the afternoon that he had promised his support to one of his friends who was running for the state legislature on the Democratic ticket. Being a man of his word, the farmer mounted his horse and rode to the voting place several miles away where just before the polls closed he deposited his ballot according to his promise, little dreaming of the tremendous influence that ballot would have on the history of the country. The friend for whom he cast his ballot was elected to the Indiana legislature by one vote. He went on his way to the state capitol and in due time came the day for the election of a United States senator. The Democratic candidate was Edward A. Hannegan and he was elected to the United States Senate by one vote, this ballot presumably being cast by the representative from DeKalb County who was elected by the one vote of his farmer friend. Senator Hannegan went to Washington. There was a long and bitter contest over the resolution declaring war on Mexico and for a long time with Senator Hannegan undecided on the resolution, the question of peace or war hung in the balance. Finally Senator Hennegan was induced to vote for the resolution and it was adopted by one vote, and war with Mexico was declared.

This is the story and politicians who dwell on it in their speeches when urging the people to vote, like to assume that the unsuspecting farmer in DeKalb County, Indiana, changed history by the vote he cast just before the polls closed that election evening. At any rate it is a good story and illustrates what it is possible to accomplish with one vote. The facts that the change of less than a thousand votes in New York in 1884 would have elected Blaine instead of Cleveland, and that the change of a few hundred votes in California in 1916 would have elected Hughes instead of Wilson are also frequently cited in appeals to the voters. Still it is hard to get the average voter to think that he individually may have so much influence on his country's destiny and as a result there is usually a big stay-at-home vote. The year 1930 was no exception.

Beyond the County

Hon. James J. Davis, Senator-elect from Pennsylvania, gained his seat in the Senate Tuesday, over a protest from the Nyc investigation committee, the latter claiming that the Senator spent more than half a million dollars for his election. The vote, 57 to 27.

At Washington, Postmaster General Brown recommended to Congress that the first class postage rate be increased from 2 to 2½ cents for each ounce or fraction thereof.

In New York state, recent decisions of the Appellate Courts, divorces granted in Nevada and Mexico are void in the former state.

At Gary, Ind., the bootlegger who sold the liquor to a party of high school boys and girls, which resulted in the assault upon and death of one of the girls, has been held for court under a bond of $100,000, he being charged with first degree murder along with five students who participated in the drinking party.

At Elizabeth, N. J., Orrie Van Helden charges that his pal not only stole his automobile, but also took his wooden leg while he was asleep and sold it to a garage for a dollar's worth of gasoline.

In Baltimore, a bricklayer and his wife, separated 34 years ago by divorce, are going to rewed.

At Silver Springs, Md., after 60 years activity in the cause of labor, "Mother" Jones died Monday at the age of 100. Her activities centered principally in Colorado and West Virginia.

At Washington a bulletin issued by the Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice states that during the month of October there were crimes reported in Baltimore to the number of 1,101; Detroit 2,677; Los Angeles 2,387; Philadelphia 1,430; Cleveland 1,884.

In Washington, a bill will be introduced this Congress providing for 60 million dollars drought aid loan and 5 million loan to states seriously affected by drought for road building.

At Hagerstown, reports from the Elk Ridge section, where forest fires raged during the past summer and fall, indicate that the blazes were the work of moonshiners and a result of a feud among them.

In Scotland, 92 thousand coal miners have struck for higher rate of pay and a seven and a half hour day.

At Atlantic City, the American Gas Association reported that there are at present 80,000 miles of gas line pipes for transportation in the United States, costing, 250 million dollars and that 12,000 additional miles were now under construction.

At Chicago, the American College of Surgeons reported that automobiles kill 35,000 people in the United States, while all fatalities resulting from industrial accidents totals only 24,000.

At Annapolis, a movement was started to have the U. S. Postoffice Department issue a special commemorative stamp in 1932 in connection with the 300th anniversary of the founding of Maryland.

DECEMBER TERM OF COURT WAS CONVENED MONDAY

and that means that liberty which enables a man to live freely, move freely, to conduct his business and to discharge his obligations, with only such restraints as are necessary to enable others to do likewise, and it is because other people are affected by what the individual does or does not do that restraints are placed on his conduct; restraints that interfere with his freedom to some extent, which interfere in a degree with his license, but do not interfere with his real, civil liberty because there can be no civil liberty unless everyone makes some sacrifice. For instance, there is nothing morally wrong about a man driving an automobile at a hundred miles an hour if he has a car capable of running at such speed. Ordinarily he would be free to do that, but there are other people who want to use the road and for that reason he must restrain himself—he must bring his speed within a reasonably safe limit, that will make it possible for other people to use the highways as well as he. So too, there is nothing morally wrong about going up a hill and passing another car to the left as you reach the summit of the hill, if it were not for the danger to someone coming down the hill, whose car might be struck. So you have to sacrifice your right to do that sort of thing for the benefit of your neighbor and for the good of society generally. That is what I mean by civil liberty, and as the country becomes more and more thickly populated there are bound to be more restraints and sometimes the more restraints placed upon society the more real liberty we have. Liberty is not license, and therefore we have certain laws to restrain people from doing many things which are not in themselves wrong, but they are wrong because in their doing the rights of other people are affected.

Just at this time the newspapers are discussing with a great deal of interest and a great deal of vehemence the question of prohibition, of the Eighteenth Amendment and the act passed by Congress for the enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment, but I want to say to you now that we in this court are not in any way concerned with the Eighteenth Amendment and we are in no way concerned with the so-called Volstead Act. Garrett county has had a local liquor law for many years, and the one we are acting under now is an Act passed in 1914, supplemented by a more recent Act passed two or three years ago. These acts were passed without any reference to the national law. They are on the statute books, they constitute the law of this county and it doesn't make any difference whether you are a believer in the 18th Amendment or the prohibition law generally, or not. We are here to enforce the laws as they exist. We are not members of the Legislature. We have nothing to do with the propriety of any statute that is passed by the Legislature. No judge and no grand jury may have any opinion as to the wisdom of the prohibition amendment, the Volstead Act, or of the Act of 1914 so far as its enforcement as law is concerned, whether they are good laws or bad laws. You and I are here for the purpose of enforcing the laws as they stand on the statute books. If we fail in that we are not diligent and upright and faithful public servants. We are here only as servants of the people for the purpose of enforcing and maintaining the integrity of the law throughout the county, so that when any question comes before this grand jury involving the liquor license law or the prohibition law of this county only one question must present itself for your consideration and only one. That question is, Has the law been violated and has it been violated by the party charged? If the testimony presented convinces you that it has been so violated you have but one duty and that is to bring in an indictment. If the evidence does not satisfy you that the law has been violated, then of course there should be no indictment, and that applies not only to the liquor law but it applies to every matter that may be brought before you by the State's Attorney. Of course we can not expect this grand jury to reach out and cover every crime that may have been committed in the county, but in every instance of law violation wherein substantial evidence has been presented before you indicating that a crime has been committed and that the person accused is prima facie the one guilty, then it is your duty to return an indictment.

At every session of the grand jury the court is required by law to call to your attention certain offenses. One of these is the crime of abortion. Abortion is a crime against society and against the race. It is one of the most heinous crimes known to the law and yet it is one of the most difficult crimes about which to obtain testimony. If you know of any such violations and are able to find evidence sufficient to justify an indictment—prima facie evidence sufficient to support a conviction—it will be your duty to indict.

It will be your duty to inquire whether the officers of this county, the sheriff, clerk of court, the register of wills and other officers of that character are paying over money due to the county and State required by law and within the required time. The statute in that regard will be laid before you by the State's Attorney. This is a very important matter and the court is required to call it to your attention especially.

We have also in this county and in Allegany county what is known as the Mine law, which is intended to protect the miners of this county and of Allegany county, who are engaged in a very dangerous occupation, and the legislature has seen fit to lay down certain conditions under which these mines may be conducted. It will be your duty to summon before you the two mine inspectors of the county and interrogate them fully and secure all the information you can as to whether that law has been observed because it is intended to promote the safety of the men who are working under the ground, and whose lives and health and limbs are dependent to a great extent upon the maintenance and enforcement of this law. You are therefore asked to give close attention to this question.

The legislature has determined that it is a very serious crime to carry deadly weapons concealed about the person, because experience has shown that the man who carries a dangerous or deadly weapon about his person and who gets into personal difficulties or gets into a high state of excitement, is likely to be led into the commission of homicide or dangerous assault. If evidence is presented before you showing that persons are guilty of this crime, or if you know of instances wherein you have reason to believe that this law is being violated it will be your duty to make full investigation and return indictments wherever the evidence may so justify.

I don't know whether you have any disorderly pool rooms in this county but my experience has been in other counties that many of these pool rooms are schools of crimes and law violations of all kinds. Boys and young men congregate there under conditions whereby there are no restrictions and all kinds of blasphemy, lewdness and crime are hatched in such places. It may be that some of your people know how to run a pool room in a decent and honest way and under such conditions as will not be to the detriment of the youth of your community, but generally that is not the case. I wish, therefore, you would make inquiry as to how the pool rooms of the community are being run and as to whether the law is being violated in that connection.

Another matter which under the law I am required to call to your attention is the sale, handling or giving away of narcotic drugs. Especially since the passage of the Volstead Act it is said that narcotic drugs are being sold and given away in place of intoxicating liquors, to such an extent that some communities may be greatly damaged and injured by the handling of these drugs, to the ruin of the health and morals of the people. I ask you to pay especial attention to that statue and to investigate fully any violations which may come to your attention.

I mentioned the automobile awhile ago. In every county of this state we have had more or less of violations of the automobile laws. The question of the observance of the traffic laws by everyone who drives a car is of the most serious importance to everybody who has occasion to use the roads and highways of the county. We have had numerous cases in Allegany county in the past year where death has resulted from reckless driving, and if death does not result, very often serious injuries occur by reason of violations of this law. Now it is important that the people of this county should understand that the automobile law is going to be enforced strictly.

It will be your duty to examine the jail and the court house and to see whether they are being maintained as they ought to be, particularly the jail, where men and women are sometimes imprisoned when they have not been guilty of any crime. It would seem sometimes to be a very serious defect in our law, yet during our last term of court we had two traversers confined in jail, both charged with the same crime, one of whom was required to stay in jail for the period of eight months because he had no friend who was able or willing to furnish satisfactory bond, and yet who upon trial of his case was acquitted, while the other, who was found guilty, was released under bond during this period. Now we boast of the uniformity and the impartiality of our laws, and yet it does not seem exactly just and fair that one should be imprisoned and held for a long period and the other released, simply because the one does not have a friend who can qualify to go on his bond. I mention this merely to call to your attention the fact that some of these persons so held may not be guilty of any crime, and therefore they are entitled to all the comforts it is reasonably possible to furnish while being so held. They are entitled at least to good, clean, wholesome food, to comfortable quarters and to sufficient warm bed clothing at night, and I wish you to see to it that the jail in particular is being properly maintained and that the persons there held are being properly cared for and maintained.

TRIBUTE TO A PRESIDENT

Once in a while the wandering wind of destiny blows away the mist of surface living and the fog of misunderstanding that obscure a man's soul. When that revelation occurs, especially if the man be in a high place with the eyes of the multitude upon him, he is judged and the judgment is more nearly accurate than the summary of a thousand opinions based on the externals of a lifetime.

So, at the recent White House Child Welfare Conference was disclosed something of the inner being of Herbert Hoover when the plight of unfortunate childhood brought from his heart expressions which, for their wisdom, tenderness and deep humanity, are worthy of perpetuation among the great utterances of America's immortals.

Immediate and generous was the Nation's response. In one vivid flash of understanding the people of the land saw the true greatness of their Chief Executive, and the press, from coast to coast, voiced the acclaim of the millions.

Politics and partisanship were forgotten as a truly United States expressed its pride and confidence in a President who, having the genius to conceive and the power to execute, has also the nobility of soul to endow an organized philanthropic movement with the rich warmth of human kindness.

The man who saved Belgium, the man who refused to let the world vent its hate on thousands of starving German children, has become a prophet to his own people.

A headline in a newspaper stated that the recent cold snap was General. We are in favor of a reduction to the ranks as a Buck Private.

We were criticized some time ago in regard to an item appearing in this column in regard to tampering with the water supply. But the expected has happened. Mountain Lake is short of water. That is, the supply has been curtailed on account of the freezing of the water in the ground. The springs are not being replenished, as had been expected, from the late rain and snow fall. The situation is serious. Notices posted by the water company states that unless the present supply is conserved, we will be short of drinking water within three or four days. Of course, thawing temperatures would help a lot. But at this time of the year, at this altitude, we would not base our hopes on much warmer weather. We can all help. Use only such water as may be necessary. Do not let it run at night. A frozen pipe is better than no drinking water. We understand the water company is prohibited from pumping from the dam for drinking purposes, for the reason that it is not concreted. Therefore, let each consider his neighbor. What affects one affects all.

Pick Out Your Fall Colors

In autumn days, nature, with palette in hand, paints the landscape in gorgeous colors, defying the imitation of the most skillful artist. It is, nevertheless, the high privilege of the home owner, with a taste for the beautiful, to cooperate with nature to the extent that he may surround his habitation with specimens of her art in colors. No other country on the globe is blessed with such profusion of highly colored foliage in tree and shrub as in America, and while one may enjoy this panorama by visiting the wooded areas, a much more satisfactory plan is to transplant some of this beauty to the home grounds.

A most important preliminary step to this end is to mark at this season of the year specimen trees, shrubs, or vines to the woods which show colors that strike the fancy, so that later they may be lacoted and transplanted. One may be reasonably certain that a tree which this fall shows brilliant coloring of foliage will retain those same characteristics in later years.

One of the first trees to show its autumn colors is the tupelo, or black gum. Its mingling of strong reds and crimsons with bright greens compel the attention of the passerby. Its slender, nearly horizontal branches, add to the unique character of a tree which is adapted to rather moist locations.

The sweet gum, with its star-shaped leaves and cork-lined twigs, develops striking effects in purple and crimson tones. It is among the maples, however, that one finds the most startling and brilliant displays in reds and yellows. The sugar or rock maple takes the lead in this regard. It is found in abundance only in the mountain section of Maryland and contrasts beautifully with the deep green of hemlock and rhododendron. On the lower levels, the red or swamp maple gives a bewildering variety of tones. It is notable, too, in having a wider range of delicate tones in early spring. The Norway maple is arrayed mainly in rich yellows. The tulip poplar, hickory and ash also provide good yellow tones.

Some of the smaller growing trees, such as the dogwood and sassafras should not be overlooked.

Among the shrubby forms noted for their color displays are the sumacs. The common forms are stag horn, smooth and dwarf sumacs. These are adapted to dry locations and for strong, bold strokes in red, are unexcelled. The swamp sumac, found usually in rather inaccessible places, should be left strictly alone as it is more poisonous than the three-leaved ivy, which also develops brilliant colors.

The high bush blueberry, in addition to dainty spring effects in leaf and flower, is most brilliant in its display of red tones as it margins the wood. Several other native ericaceous forms are noted for their good fall colors.

The spice bush is especially charming as it lightens up the woods with its rich yellow color. Among the native viburnums, the arrowwood and black haw are common along streams and in thickets and usually develop satisfactory colors.

Among the vines should be mentioned the Virginia creeper and the bitter sweet, the latter, having in addition to good yellow foliage, ornamental fruits of orange scarlet, much sought after for winter decorations.

This is the season of the year for making your selection of fall colors, and for planning to touch up the home grounds with suitable specimens from woods or nursery.

Feed Carefully This Year

The winter of 1930-31 offers some unusual problems in feeding farm animals, says K. A. Clark, Animal Husbandman, College Park, Maryland. Corn is relatively scarce and high in price. Wheat, though much has been sold from farms, is unusually low in price. Cotton seed meal is abundant and of good quality, though cheaper than usual. Hay is scarce and high in price. Beet pulp and oatmeal by-products, feeds which are not generally fed in large amounts in Maryland, have been offered at prices which are fairly attractive. It would seem to be good business to feed only good animals through the winter and to feed them rather liberally if abundant production is expected from them. A careful selection of feeds needs to be made if most economical production is expected. The feeding of common animals on inferior feeds, in small amounts is never likely to result in large profits, even if feeds are cheap. Feeders should make a careful study of the possibility of making good use of oat by-products, cottonseed meal, beet pulp, and any other feeds which may be available on a basis that will permit profit from their use, but should insist upon quality that is in keeping with the price paid for either standard or unusual feeds. It should be remembered always that rations need to suit the needs of the animals to which they are fed if both a good rate of production and economical production are expected. Inadequate rations cause much lack of profit. Parasites, diseases, and accident are much more likely to be disastrous for poorly fed, weak animals than for animals that have the good, strong condition that is associated with a regular consumption of suitable feeds in generous amount. Starvation, complete or partial, will lower rather than raise returns and profits.

Feed for profit this winter.

VOLUME 54. OAKLAND, MARYLAND, DECEMBER 11. 1930. NUMBER 43.

RED CROSS MEMBERS ARE STILL BEING TURNED IN

174 OAKLANDERS LISTED

The funds raised in the annual Red Cross membership drive are rolling in, for people have really responded heroically to this year's special call.

Ninety-seven names have been added to the list during the present week, making the total reported for the year 347, or 53 under the county's quota. Oakland leads the list with 174 names, while Grantsville is next with 42 members and two donations. Accident reported 36; Crellin, 28; Kitzmiller, 23; Mt. Lake Park, 17; Selbysport, 10; Loch Lynn, 9; Deer Park, 8.

The final report is not yet ready for publication because a few of the chairmen have not handed in reports.

Special praise is due to Accident and to Deer Park for a large increase over last year's Red Cross membership. The report of Miss Nina B. Peck, chairman at Accident, shows a 45 per cent increase in contributions and that of Mrs. Edward Helbig at Deer Park a desire to help our unfortunate brothers that is noteworthy.

To the county health nurse, who works hand in hand with Red Cross leaders, contributions have come in, showing a widespread interest in alleviation of suffering.

Through Mr. J. W. Ream the people of Loch Lynn and Mountain Lake Park sent $3.66, the proceeds of an offering taken at the union Thanksgiving service, to Mrs. Fahey for use in charity work. The Cumberland and Allegheny Gas Company, through Mr. Roland Gilbert, has contributed the $10 usually spent in Christmas window decoration, toward charity work in the county.

Although the response to the Red Cross "call" has been encouraging, when we consider subnormal conditions, Garrett county is going to fall short $50 or $75 of the $400 quota so badly needed to keep Red Cross work going this year. Even now it is not too late to join. Anyone who has been "missed" by solicitors or who did not find it convenient to give when he was asked, may help by sending in a contribution, however small, to any Red Cross chairman.

At present the most prominent Red Cross activity is collection and preparation of clothing for pre-school children and those who cannot attend school unless proper clothing is provided. John Fitzwater, school attendance officer, and both the county health nurses have daily demands for assistance along this line. Urgent calls come in which cannot be answered because there is now very little clothing available in the county health nurses' store.

The Red Cross program is this:

1. A committee in charge of Mrs. D. S. Davis will receive and when necessary, make over clothing donated for use of infants, small children and those of school age.

2. Every Saturday afternoon from two to four o'clock this committee will have someone to receive donations of old clothing in its work-room adjoining the Farmers Bank in the McIntire

PRESTON COUNTY JUDGE GIVES D'WITT TEN YEARS

Confesses to Stealing Automobile of Sheriff W. W. Williams

Ten years in the State penitentiary at Moundsville was meted out by Judge A. G. Hughes, of Preston county, W. Va., in the circuit court there Friday afternoon to Dave DeWitt, of Oakland, who confessed to participation in the theft of an automobile belonging to Sheriff W. W. Williams.

Alfred Weimer, also of Oakland, who was with DeWitt at the time, and who has also confessed his part in the crime. was not sentenced, the court taking further time to consider.

When the two men were arraigned last week at which time they entered their confessions, Judge Hughes deferred sentence until a later date. But in the meantime DeWitt, in an attempted jail break, struck George Bolyard, a deputy sheriff, over the ear with a heavy club while the latter was doing some work in the jail.

The latter crime will be held over him during his confinement in the penitentiary, Judge Hughes told him in a lengthy and scathing denouncement, and should his behavior be such as to warrant it, persecution will no doubt follow upon his release from Moundsville.

PLANS MADE FOR CONTEST IN CHRISTMAS LIGHTING

Prizes Totaling $25.00 Will Be Offered—Contestants Must Fill In Entry Blank

JUDGES TO BE ANNOUNCED

Two weeks until Christmas and already many plans have been made by Oakland citizens to beautify both the inside and outside of their homes with colored lights and other decorations. Interest is being manifest in the outdoor Christmas lighting contest being sponsored here by the Rotary Club, and queries are being received about entering the contest for which prizes totaling $25.00 are being offered. Today an entry blank is printed in another part of the paper. Oakland residents who wish to enter their homes in the contest will fill out the blank and return it to this paper as soon as possible.

Judges, who will be announced shortly, will make their rounds m the week between Christmas and New Year's. They will visit every home entered in the contest and will base their final decisions on originality, effectiveness and general appearance of the decorated and lighted homes, along with utilization of possibilities, rather than elaborate display and ornate lighting and decorating schemes.

Many homes here displayed outdoor Christmas lighting and decorttions last year, but this year it is expected that twice as many homes will reflect the true Christmas spirit of good will and cheer by means of the colored lights, twined among evergreen or other decorative effects. This entire section of the state was ablaze with outdoor lighted decorations last year and Oakland did its part in making the scene beautiful. Snow helped the general effect last year. but even without the snow Oakland would have enjoyed its most beautiful Christmas week.

"Make the Outdoors Bright with Christmas Light" was the slogan for the outdoor Christmas lighting movement that swept this section last year, and the same slogan carries the spirit of the Oakland contest this year. Colored lights, arranged about the eaves, porches, shrubbery, and other parts of the home and yard will make the outdoors bright, and a source of cheer for those who pass nightly.

Next week a number of ideas for decorating the outside of the home will be published, along with further details of the contest.

Richard Roy is the editor, Helen Giessman and Mary Lynn McIntire, assistant editors; Harley Dawson, business manager, and Elvin Iman, advertising manager.

All ordained ministers of Garrett county, whether in active pastorates or retired, have received letters inviting them to the coffee shop of the Central Hotel, Oakland, on Monday, December 15, at noon, where they will lunch together and organize a county ministerial association.

"The ministers of Garrett county have long felt a need for such an organization," Rev. C. A. Shilke said, "where they might gather at stated intervals for some much needed social fellowship and also for the study of social and spiritual problems of the community."

It is expected that all ministers of the county will respond to this invitation and be present on Monday

Mr. and Mrs. James Pollock, of Washington, D. C., accompanied Mr. Charles Helbig to Oakland last Sunday In the latter's automobile, returning to Washington the same evening.

J. W. M'CULLOUGH'S PLAN FOR FINANCING HIGHWAYS

Would Issue Bonds Amounting To $2,000,000 With Which To Extend System In County

FAVORS BUILDING 70 MILES

Former State Senator John W. McCullough, of Friendsville, in a communication addressed to The Republican, which was received too late for publication last Thursday, is given space in this issue of The Republican.

Mr. McCullough presents a plan for financing the building of several sections of highway which he specifies in his letter to The Republican, embracing approximately seventy miles of improved roads within the confines of the county. Mr. McCullough's communication follows

To the Editor of The Republican.

Referring to the new road project and the meeting called by the County Commissioners and dinner at the Manhattan Hotel some time ago for the purpose of having Hon. G. Clinton Uhl, chairman of the State Roads Commission, explain what could be done next year in helping the back-lying districts of our county to build at least fifty miles of State roads to let them out to the markets. Mr. Uhl's explanation was very thorough and was given serious thought by a large number of prominent citizens of the county who were present at the dinner.

It developed in the meeting that if the county was to issue bonds and tie up the road appropriations for a number of years, the following roads projects should be considered, namely: The road from Blooming Rose church to the Pennsylvania line near Markleysburg; the road from the top of Little Savage Mountain to the Pennsylvania State line via Finzel; a road from Grantsville via Bittinger to connect with the main highway near McHenry or the Deep Creek Bridge, and a road leading off of this road near Bittinger and running through the North Glade country and connecting with the Kitzmiller road east of Deer Park; a road through District No. 1 to Bloomington and a short connection

Boiling Spring Reported

Fire warden, W. H. Barnard, reports a boiling spring, located one and one-half miles south of Firm Rock church, in Garrett county. When Mr. Barnard visited this spring he found steam and boiling water blowing 10 feet into the air. This action is attributed to an underground fire in a coal vein which has been burning since 1872.

FIRE DESTROYS BARN AND STOCK EARLY WEDNESDAY

Ten Head of Cattle and Two Horses Burn To Death—Eight Cattle Run To Safety

INCENDIARISM IS BLAMED

A barn belonging to Arch Spiker, about three miles south of Oakland, and a number of cattle belonging to Owen Martin, were destroyed by fire about 1 o'clock Wednesday morning. Incendiarism is thought to have been the cause of the blaze.

The fire was discovered by a motorist who happened to be passing at the time, and he notified the Oakland Volunteer Fire department. The blaze had gained too great a headway, however, and the barn had collapsed before the department arrived.

Mr. Martin lost 10 head of cattle, one mare and one colt, valued at more than $500. Eight head of cattle, also in the barn at the time of the fire, escaped.

Several tons of hay, valued at about $200, were consumed, along with a road wagon and some farm machinery. The barn was partly covered by insurance, but the stock and machinery are a total loss.

Claims to Have Brought Down Largest Buck Among Hunters

L. A. Harvey, of Kitzmiller, after reading last week's account of the successful deer hunters, claims to have been the most successful one, insofar as bagging the largest buck is concerned.

Mr. Harvey, in company with W. W. Harvey, also of Kitzmiller, reports that he bagged a twelve point deer on Snaggy mountain on the water's edge of North Glade creek, about 100 yards from the Deep Creek Dam, on Tuesday, the second day of the open season.

The buck, "hog dressed", weighed 187 pounds, and it was estimated that the weight of the buck on foot would have been 250 pounds. He was shot once behind the shoulder and once through the neck. A .32 calibre Winchester rifle was used.

Third Annual Leadership Training School To Close Tomorrow

The third annual Leadership Training school opened last Sunday evening with twenty-six enrolled, the inclement weather and the busy Christmas season keeping away many who would like to have attended.

Delbert Davis, president of the Oakland Community Council of Religious Education, presided at the opening of the school in St. Mark's Lutheran church.

Rev. John A. Wood, Keyser, West Va., gave the principal address and Miss Lillian McCormick, of Baltimore, who is dean of the school, outlined the program to be followed. Immediately after the opening services the classes were organized and went into their first sessions.

The closing session will be held on Friday evening when those working for credits will be given their awards and short addresses will be made. The general public is most cordially invited to attend the closing meeting.

CRIMINAL COURT DOCKET TAKEN UP ON MONDAY

A Number of Cases Have Been Tried With Many Yet To Be Heard—Some Sentenced

December Term of the Circuit Court resumed its session on Monday with Chief Judge D. Lindley Sloan on the bench, at which time the petit jurors reported for duty.

In the appeal case of Greeley O. Janoske, taken to the upper court on an appeal from Justice Teats, the judgment of the lower court was affirmed and a verdict rendered fining Janoske $5 and costs for neglecting to secure a license for his dog.

The appeal case of Austin Tasker charged with assault on Jesse McRobie, was dismissed.

Columbus Mason, of near Swanton, who had been found guilty by Justice West of obstructing a public highway, was tried before a jury and a verdict of guilty was returned. The contention of Mr. Mason was that the alleged highway was a lane leading through some property upon which he was operating a saw mill and that he had his mill set on the lane but provided another way for the contending witnesses to pass. A motion was made for a new trial which will be argued later.

The criminal trial docket, which comprises more than sixty cases, was called Tuesday morning and up to the hour The Republican goes to press the following cases have been disposed of:

Arthur Sweitzer and Lloyd Parish, indicted jointly for the larceny of various house furnishings from the summer home of Cornelius Maloney near Swanton, were tried before the Court, who rendered a verdict of guilty as to Parish and not guilty as to Sweitzer.

George Irvin, indicted for the unlawful manufacture of liquor, entered a plea of guilty when arraigned before the Court.

John B. King, charged with larceny, was tried before a jury and a verdict of not guilty returned.

Clyde Glover, indicted for the theft of lumber alleged as being the property of A. J. Alexander, was tried before the Court and found not guilty. In the trial of the case it was brought out that the lumber alleged to have been unlawfully taken by Mr. Glover was on the land of a Mr. Collier and it was taken away with the consent of the latter. Later Mr. Glover offered to pay Alexander for the lumber or return the same which offer was refused.

James Lee Johnson was found guilty of bastardy and ordered to give bond for the support of the child or in default be confined in the Maryland House of Correction for nine months. Johnson is in jail and will likely go to the House of Correction.

Howard C. Shipp entered a plea of guilty when he was arraigned on the indictment charging him with deserting his family and not supporting his wife and children. A sentence for this breach of the law was suspended for the term of three years provided the traverser be of good behavior and supports his wife and children in the meantime.

Dobey Martin, larceny; plea of guilty confessed.

Paul Sanders, indicted for the possession of liquor, entered a plea of guilty when he was arraigned before the Court on the indictment charging him with the offense.

Lawrence Calhoun, indicted for forgery, confessed his guilt when taken before the Court. Calhoun had passed a number of forged checks on merchants and others.

William H. Lauer, on the charge of desertion and non-support, was tried before the Court and a verdict of not guilty was rendered as the desertion charge and guilty as to the non-support of his child.

Raymond Ream, charged with sodomy, entered a plea of guilty.

Charles "Tinker" Martin, who recently moved from Oakland, indicted for having stolen clothing, etc., the property of William A. Kimmell, was tried before the Court and a verdict of guilty rendered. Martin had been before the Court on a previous occasion and on a like charge when he was found guilty and sentenced to serve 18 months in the House of Correction. At the trial it was brought out that after serving 84 days of the sentence he was paroled.

There remain quite a number of cases yet to be tried and it is possible that court will not adjourn before Saturday.

SCOOP'S COLUMN

By SCOOP—HIMSELF

Every man should keep a fair sized cemetery in which to bury the faults of his friends.

All of which reminds Scoop of a little advice to everyone—never find fault because a newspaper fails to give every scrap of news so long as you take no pains to give the editor information. The average editor isn't a medium or mind reader but must get his news as a few milkmen get their milk—by pumping. (I don't say that ALL milkmen put water in their milk. We get a good supply of cream up at Archibaldson's house).

Scoop hasn't received any dissertations on "Women" in reply to the one on "Men," which appeared in this column last Thursday.

They have removed the radio from Bittner & Stahl's barber shop and have gone back to the great American diversion, that of checkers and conversation (by the barbers). Scoop considered himself a good player after disposing of Neil Liller in a game, but Hervey Bittner stopped the head from any further swelling.

Most of the time this column is given over to comic events which sometimes happen and sometimes don't. Today, however, it is turned into something different.

The following are my own ideas about some of the people of the town and community. I am not getting charitable, either, just because it is Christmas, nor am I printing these with the hope of getting swamped with Christmas presents from these people.

Anyway, here's what I think about them:

George Kerins is one of the big sparks behind the fire department.

Grover Stemple has a lot of energy and he gives it to the municipal affairs of Oakland.

Joseph E. Harned knows more about flowers of this section than anybody else I know and he is always willing to impart information.

George D. Sprague has a wonderful sense of humor if you can dig down under the skin.

George D. Browning has made the county an excellent commissioner for a number of years and I am glad he will continue in the office for another term.

I like to hear Reeves Blandford sing.

If you want facts on history, and want them told in an interesting way, ask Carl Frame.

I've always had a warm spot in my heart for Stuart Hamill ever since he presented Archibaldson and I with a gallon of maple syrup. However, he can't expect us to keep warm forever on one gallon.

If anyone can laugh louder or more heartily than Charles Sprague, let him step up and say so.

Wellington Yutzy is one of the few who can laugh at his own jokes and still tell them so that they are funny to his listeners.

The West Penn Company has a fine good-will builder in the person of A. T. (Slim) Shaw.

H. C. Sincell still says, "Sho', sho'; ain't dat sumpin'."

Stanley Bond is all right, but he thinks his radio is better than the one I listen to at Archibaldson's.

Mrs. George Thayer, one of the women readers of this column, says she still reads it. It's hard to break a bad habit.

Silas O. Wiley says he likes it, too. That's two on my side.

G. A. Fraley knows how to operate a bank so that it pays good dividends to its stockholders and is liberal in its dealings with its customers.

Dr. Henry W. McComas is an interesting talker, but he isn't always easy to get started.

If Bill Butt ever had a grouch on nobody ever told me about it.

Bob Hoffman forgets everythhing

Bob Hoffman forgets everything but dancing when he is dancing with a good stepper.

Joe Gonder makes a good Legion commander.

Henry Lauer has given his support to more civic enterprises than anyone else in town in the last twenty-five years.

Bill Gibson would run a close second to Joe E. Brown, of movie fame. And Bill has been reminded of this fact on numerous occasions.

Delbert Davis will tell you what he thinks, and right to your face, too.

Mike Liller knows how to operate a bugle to perfection.

Wade Hinebaugh is the only man who ever scared me by objecting to a write-up in this column, and I finally learned he was only kidding.

Neil Fraley certainly knows how to argue politics.

Walter Dawson is a man of action.

Charley Ream would make any town an excellent citizen.

Superintendent Rathbun makes a good superintendent of schools but he sure knows how to wiggle out of a situation any time he wants.

Roland Gilbert has worked as hard during the past three years in teaching the boys how to play musical instruments as he has at his regular job. He spends no less than three nights each week with them.

Then there's the boss editor and Col. Bell; but you know what I think of them. The boss editor hands me my Russian Rubles every two weeks and Col. Bell takes all my pictures for this column.

Berne Teter is a likeable fellow, even if he does come from West Virginia. He won 50 cents from me though on the football coaching controversy at the West Virginia University, and I still hold that against him.

Now, who is the person who has devoted his time and efforts to get a basketball hall for the High School students, exclusive of the principal? That's just the trouble—nobody.

And then there are a lot of other people around town too numerous to mention. Sometime, maybe, but not now.

Merry Christmas!

COUNTY AGENT'S COLUMN

J. H. CARTER,
Resident County Agent,
Oakland, Maryland

If you want to winter your livestock on the minimum amount of feed to keep up the growth and production it is very important that the animals are housed in comfortable quarters. Any animal exposed to cold weather, having only ice water to drink must have enough feed to keep up the animal heat in excess of the amount it takes for body maintenance and production.

Just a little labor and a few boards may make your barns, hog houses, and poultry houses a few degrees warmer. After you have made your quarters comfortable try and find room inside for all your stock especially during cold, rainy days. You will be repaid when you balance your account with your feed bill next spring.

State Places Winners in 4-H Club Contests

Margaret Loar, Allegany county, was awarded a prize of $12.00 for winning first place with her entry in the Cotton School Dress Contest, sponsored by the 4-H Club Congress, which met in Chicago from November 28 to December 5, it is announced by Miss Dorothy Emerson, Girls' Club Agent of Maryland. Miss Loar competed with entries from twenty-one other states.

In addition, three other Maryland 4-H Club girls won places at the Congress.

Ethel Gorsuch, Carroll county, was given second place and a prize of $15 for her exhibit in the Children's Garments Class in which there were ten other State entries.

Anna Myers, Carroll county, won $12.50 and second honors in the Canned Vegetable Class in competition with exhibits from twelve other states.

Seventh position and honorable mention in the Canned Fruits Class went to Blanche Wilson, of Wicomico county. Fourteen other states had entries in this class.

Four corn exhibits, sent by as many Maryland farmers to the International Grain and Hay Show, held in Chicago from November 29 to December 6, won placings and prizes, according to F. W. Oldenburg, agronomy specialist for the University of Maryland Extension Servicce.

In the Yellow Dent Corn Class, the exhibit of ten ears sent in by M. P. Prough, Carroll county, won thirteenth place and a prize of three dollars. E. B. Prough's entry from the same county and in the same class won seventeenth place and three dollars.

The exhibit of ten ears of White Dent Corn of Fred Jones, Howard county, won sixteenth position and three dollars, and another in the same class sent in by Matt Harding, Dorchester county, placed seventeenth, recciving a three dollar award also.

Mr. Oldenburg declares that in all probabilities this corn will be shown at the Maryland State Corn Show in Baltimore, January 6 to 8.

BITTINGER

The three-day open season for deer afforded the nimrods of this neighborhood much sport but yielded little venison. Those who are addicted to the hunting habit spent all of the three days on the mountains and report having seen many tracks and a few deer, but no one in this immediate section was successful in shooting one. One enthusiastic young fellow reports having had three shots at good sized bucks, at close range, but concluded that "the dog-goned gun was no good." Another saw a deer and leveled his gun for a shot but did not fire, and when asked why he did not shoot, replied: "I didn't shoot 'cause I was afraid I might miss the fool thing."

One deer, taken by John Frickey, required twelve shots in the killing and some are not sure whether it was shot or frightened to death.

It is reported that Harvey Durst, Jerry Durst and Richard Durst, of Negro Mountain, each succeeded in getting their deer. So the fun is over and still there are some deer left for another season.

Deputy Sheriffs Joy Griffith and Richard West, of Oakland, passed through this village last Sunday afternoon on official business.

Mr. and Mrs. Rex Buckle are the very happy parents of a daughter, born to them last Friday night. Now sit up and take notice how Rex lets that Ford ramble.

Victor Wiley, aged about thirty years, who had been an invalid for a long time, died at his home near this village last Thursday morning. The deceased was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. George Wiley. Funeral services and interment occurred last Sunday afternoon from the Lutheran church In Bittinger, the services being conducted by the Rev. E. E. Campbell.

The extremely heavy sleet which formed last Saturday occasioned much damage to telephone lines, to fruit trees and timber of all kinds, as the weight of the accumulated ice broke many trees entirely down and stripped others of almost all their limbs.

Lawrence Fortney is making preparations to begin operating the coal mine on his farm near this village and will soon be ready to supply the public with very excellent coal at a rasonable price.

Amber Marmalade

One orange, weighing about 7 ounces; 1 grapefruit, weighing about 1 pound and 3 ounces; 1 lemon, weighing about 3 ounces.

Select especially tender, clean, yellow, smooth, thick-skinned fruit free from all blemishes. Fruit with thin, tough peel is not so satisfactory for making marmalade because such peel is likely to become still tougher after cooking with sugar and acid.

Remove the peel and slice it very thin. Parboil the sliced peel three times in the following way: Add 1 quart of cold water, bring to the boil, cook for five minutes, and discard the water after each cooking.

Cut the fruit pulp into thin slices, remove seeds and "rag". Combine this sliced pulp with the drained, parboiled skins. To each weight or measure of this mixed pulp and parboiled skins, add three times the weight or measure of water and boil rapidly for 40 minutes. Again measure the fruit mixture and to it add an equal weight or measure of sugar. Boil this mixture rapidly for 25 minutes longer or until the jelly stage is reached. If a thick marmalade is desired, boil longer, but watch it carefully lest it stick and scorch as it cook down. Let the marmalade stand over night in the kettle. In the morning reheat and put it into scalded jelly glasses. If put into the Glasses immediately after the first cooking, the sliced peel is likely to rise to the top, leaving the clear jelly at the bottom. When cold, cover with paraffine and store in a cool, dry place. The quantities of ingredients given in this receipt should yield about 5 pints of marmalade, 12 to 14 glasses.

Orange Marmalade

Six oranges, 1 lemon.

Wash fruit first. Cut fruit into quarters, discard seed, and slice fruit pulp as thinly as possible, or put fruit through a meat chopper. Weigh the prepared fruit and to one pound add 3 pints of cold water—let stand two hours. Put in preserving kettle, and boil gently until rind is quite tender. Measure material and to one pound add one pint of sugar. Let cook until mixture thickens slightly when tried on cold dish. Put in tumblers and cover with paraffine.

Orange and Lemon Marmalade

Three oranges, 2 lemons, 5 cups water, 5 cups sugar.

Wipe fruit, and cut, crosswise, in as thin slices as possible, removing seeds. Put into preserving kettle, add water, and let stand thirty-six hours. Place on range, bring to boiling point, and let boil (not simmer) two hours. Add sugar, and boil one hour. Turn into sterile glasses, let stand until firm, and cover with melted paraffine.

Roads That Won't "eat their heads off"

WHAT farmer will knowingly buy a lame horse in order to save money? Low first cost, yes, but any "saving" is spent in upkeep, without return.

It's the same with "cheap" roads. A few additional miles at the start look inviting to the farmers who use them. But what happens?

Soon, the high upkeep costs get the lion's share of the paving fund. Later they get it all! No more roads can be built.

That's why so many counties are building single track roads of portland cement concrete. A mile or two less road the first year or two, perhaps, but every year more miles because with concrete roads there is practically no maintenance.

A single track concrete road, with pavement on right hand side in direction of the heaviest traffic.

ECONOMIC BUNK.

As we understand a lot of current economic thoughts, business depression is caused by working too hard, adopting too much ingenious labor-saving machinery, producing too much and accumulating too large a volume of goods and money. In short, by using thrift, energy and intelligence in the pursuit of comfort, security and wealth.

The remedy preached by this school of thinkers is to ease up, slack on the job, shorten hours, make less and spend more. We have all got behind by getting ahead; now we'll reverse the process and get ahead by getting behind.

Which, as anyone can see who uses common sense, is the bunk. A little spell of business stagnation can't change the moral and intellectual character of the universe all at once, turning virtue into vice and vice into virtue. We won't gain anything by being lazy and dumb instead of industrious and intelligent.

We simply haven't got the knack yet of keeping the machinery running smoothly. It's so new! We don't oil it right, or don't feed it right, or don't make quite the right adjustments. Particularly we have not learned the trick of adapting production to consumption.

Suppose industry were war. Wouldn't we have generals keeping a careful eye on the operations as a whole, and shifting materials, equipment and men from moment to moment and place to place as they were needed?

Some time peaceful industrial society will have such generals continually adjusting money, workers, machinery and finished products.

And it needn't be Socialism or Fascism, either. We could do it in this country right now if we had the mass nerve and unselfishness. As a matter of fact, we're rapidly drifting toward such super-management of our industries, probably by private enterprise, with a little benevolent attention from the government.

IN DAYS OF OLD

FORTY YEARS AGO

Mr. R. I. Anderson informs us that he has now employed at the works of the Oakland Coal and Coke company 150 men and that a new contract has been let for the erection of 50 more coke ovens.

Ice, snow, coasting, sleighing parties, Old Boreas got there at last.

Thomas Rowan, who had his right foot crushed at Altamont in October while opening the switch for a helper, had to submit to the amputation of his leg. Dr. J. Lee McComas performed the operation and was assisted by Dr. Henry W. McComas.

The boiler of the engine at Lee's sawmill, south of Mt. Lake, exploded instantly killing Salem King and probably fatally injuring Key Lee and John W. Ours. James Leese was slightly hurt. King was blown against the wheels of a lumber wagon.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

Prizes were awarded to Garrett countians at the meetinfi of the Maryland State horticultural society, at Baltimore as follows: Ridder brothers for Tompkins King apples; Thomas E. Bishoff for yellow corn, spring oats, beardless and spring barley, and buckwheat; William T, Stanton, Grantsville, for yellow corn and spring oats; J. A. Shaffer, for buckwheat.

Mr. Jonas Yutzy was named foreman of the grand jury for the December term.

Mr. P. T. Lipscomb, Loch Lynn, was accidentally shot in the leg with a .22 calibre rifle while in the woods last Saturday in company with Marvin Harson, a youth. There is little danger of serious consequences.

The machinery for the Oakland creamery has been received from the factory and hauled to the site of the proposed buildings on Third street.

Just received, a car load of sleighs, at Naylor's.

J. W. M'CULLOUGH'S PLAN FOR FINANCING HIGHWAYS

of road from Deer Park to Mountain Lake Park and the completion of the road from White Church to Gorman.

I do not know the exact distances of these roads, but I believe that seventy miles will cover all the projects by actual survey.

Now if the people of the county want to build these roads under Mr. Uhl's plan by a bond issue, such as Kent county bonded under and built 50 miles of State road last year, and the Postroad fund (the State puts up an equal amount), with the gasoline tax to pay it off in full, Mr. Uhl says our allotment should run from these funds at least $250,000 yearly in Garrett county. Kent county pays all of the interest on its bond issue, the bill providing that all of the money is paid through the County Treasurer.

I feel that if our county is going to try to build all these roads next year, we should bond our county for $2,000,000, and with the money we receive from the State this year we could build all of the roads with a new provision in the bill to allow the Treasurer to pay part of the interest from the fund as per schedule below:

		State Interest	County Interest
Bond issue	$2,000,000.00	$50,000,00	$50,000.00
First year's payment	200,000.00
	1,800,000.00	50,000.00	40,000.00
Second year's payment	200,000.00
	1,600,000.00	50,000.00	30,000.00
Third year's payment	200,000.00
	1,400,000.00	50,000.00	20,000.00
Fourth year's payment	200,000.00
	1,200,000.00	50,000.00	10,000.00
Fifth year's payment	200.000.00		$150,000.00
	1,000,000.00	50,000.00
Sixth year's payment	200,000.00
	800,000.00	40,000.00
Seventh year's payment	210,000.00
	590,000.00	29,500.00
Eighth year's payment	220,500.00
	369,500.00	18,475.00
Ninth year's payment	231,525.00
	137,975.00	6,898.75
Tenth year's payment	243.101.25
		$394,873.75
Credit balance	$105,126.25

The State would pay $50,000 a year for five years and it pays all the interest then to the completion. The county would pay $150,000 interest in four years and that would be all the county would pay, and in ten years the entire indebtedness would be liquidated and our county would have $105,126.25 to its credit in the State Roads Commission.

If this can be done legally, I would approve of the plan. This would do more to harmonize the feeling of the people generally in our county than any other thing that could be done.

Some of the districts have been trying hard yearly for some twenty years to get a road and something should be done, and at this time when money is cheap and no employment think what this would do to relieve the depression in our county next year. It would put at least $1,000,000 in circulation from pay rolls alone; it would relieve the County Commissioners in a five year period of all the money they spend in interest to keep up the roads the State takes over.

I feel that all the hard surfaced roads we have in our county have paid for themselves in five years in the benefit the public receives in quick transportation, saving of machinery and by being able to get over the roads at all seasons of the year and do their shopping when they cannot work on their farms.

The people who are so fortunate as to have a State road past their door should help put their neighbor on an equal basis with a project of this kind, and the people of the county who feel that they have not been benefitted directly by this project should help put it over as without a question the roads named will be the first roads built in the county under any plan, and they will get the benefit of these roads and get a hard-surfaced road just as quickly and possibly sooner than if they put up a protest.

I feel that this project will be a great relief to our county as a whole and it is bound to benefit the whole population.

Respectfully submitted,
J. W. M'CULLOUGH.

An Interesting Fact

A MARYLAND TEA PARTY

Burning of the Peggy Stewart

The reception of the Stamp Act by the American Colonists seems to have impressed British statesmen as a mere gesture, without special significance. They sought to cajole Maryland by removing the tax on all articles except tea and allowing a drawback to the East India Company on the import duties paid in England on that article shipped to America, thus enabling the company to sell tea at a particularly low rate to the Colonists.

The British ministry evidently thought that by cheapening the article, so the tax would not be felt, the Colonists would be blinded to the fact that England had re-asserted the principle of the right of taxation. But the Colonists were not caught napping. The principle for which they had and were contending, the right of local self-government, was bigger than the shilling or the pound.

On June 20, 1769, were formed non-importation associations whereby nearly one hundred articles were excluded from the colonies and providing that those who violated the provisions of the agreements were to be boycotted. In 1774, June 20, deputies from all the colonies assembled in Annapolis and other provisions were added to the non-importation agreements already existing. The fight was on.

On October 15, 1774, the Peggy Stewart arrived at Annapolis, carrying a cargo of over 2000 pounds of East India tea. The vessel was Maryland built. The tea was consigned to two merchant traders at Annapolis, and the duty had been secured to be paid by Mr. Anthony Stewart, the majority owner of the vessel.

Passing over many of the incidents connected with this noted and far-reaching affair, we briefly hurry to the conclusion of the dramatic incident, which in our opinion more clearly than any other pre-revolutionary event shows that the colonists had definitely and finally decided that the principle of self-government, as well as the letter and spirit of the charter, must be maintained at all hazards.

The crowd had gathered at the house of Mr. Stewart. Some had suggested that he be given a coat of tar and feathers. It is stated that a gallows had been set up in front of Stewart's house and he was given the choice of burning the vessel or of being hanged.

Mr. Stewart, togther with the consigness, had theretofore acknowledged that "we have committed a most daring insult and act of most pernicious tendency to the liberties of America," and offered to "commit to flames or othewise destroy, as the people may choose, the detestable article which has been the cause of our misconduct." But this was not satisfactory to a minority, at least, to the inflamed citizens. A small number continued to threaten to do violence to Mr. Stewart or to his house and family.

Finally, Mr. Stewart, fearing that the discontented minority would burn his house, yielded, and together with the Williams brothers, set fire to the tea, cargo and vessel so that every article therein was consumed with the ship, which burned to the water's edge.

At the time of the burning of the Peggy Stewart, Anthony Stewart was but 36 years of age. In 1775 he fled the Province and during the Revolution his property was declared confiscated.

To fully appreciate, however, the significance of this incident, one should carefully study the account as given by Mr. Matthew Page Andrews in his excellent book of Maryland.

To Repair Broken Toys And Distribute to the Needy

Due to the general business depression there are numbers of children who will be without Christmas this year. Everyone can help bring Christmas to some of these children by sharing toys or other articles that are no longer used by your children.

If you have toys that are broken, need painting, or need other small repairs, bring them to the office of the public health nurse and they will be repaired by two gentlemen who have offered their services, and distributed where needed.

Be sure and bring all parts belonging to broken articles if you have them as this will reduce cost and labor in repair work.

What About Next Year?

NOW when you first realize the joys of money saved, now when you receive that check for the past year's savings, and you are able to do with it those things you have wanted to do for a whole year, now is the time to start saving for the next Christmas.

ETIQUETTE FOR LADIES IN 1854

Certain quotations in the London Spectator from a book with the above name will amuse even elderly readers 76 years later and will perhaps be found screamingly funny by the girls of 1930. The young things of 1854 were exhorted to cultivate a calm and serene manner; "bow with slow and emasured grace, never too hastily," and, above all, "do not beat the devil's tattoo by drumming with your fingers on a table."

A young lady was expected to watch her step particularly in a ball room: "When you are dancing you will consider yourself engaged to your partner, therefore not at liberty to hold a flirtation between the figures with other gentlemen." But there could not have been any languishing glances over her partner's shoulder in a ball room devoted exclusively to "square" dances, and no doubt the subdued light of the conservatory or the garden was preferred by the flirtatious in 1854 as well as 1930.

The reference to cards suggests that there must have been more tense excitement and violence of disagreement among players than there is in these times, bringing temptation to depart from the calm and serene manner so much admired by the author of "Etiquette for Ladies."

The young would-be belle of the 1850's was solemnly warned against the card table, not because she might lose too much money there but because "she who wishes to win a heart or retain one should never permit her admirers to behold her at cards, as the anxiety they produce is as destructive to beauty as to sentiment."

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

By FRANK P. LITSCHERT

Europe continues to be the hotbed for the development of all sorts of political rumors, some of which concern the United States. The past week or two has sent us a new crop and some of them would be rather disturbing if true. So disturbing were the possibilities of some of them that Secretary of State Stimson felt it necessary to issue a firm and vigorous denial. Among the stories sent out from European capitals were tales to the effect that the United States through Ambassador Hugh Gibson, at the Geneva conference had voted the United States into an agreement for preserving certain armament provisions of the Versailles treaty. Another rumor was to the effect that Uncle Sam and the French government, possessing three-fifths of the world's gold supply between them, had formed a financial alliance and would henceforth refuse to lend money to nations which did not agree to disarm. This latter story was evidently directed against Italy, the inference being that Italy, who has been insisting on naval parity with France, would be through French-American cooperation compelled to accept something else. The first story, regarding the Versailles treaty would particularly have affected Germany which still has hopes for changes in comparative military strength.

Both of the rumors turned out to be untrue as nearly everybody, with the exception of a few ultra-internationalists, expected that they would. The story concerning the peace treaty grew out of the fact that Mr. Gibson at Geneva supported a French motion to reassert the integrity of the arms limitations of previous treaties. But Mr. Gibson stated specifically that his action was only governed by his consideration of the London and Washington naval treaties. To gather from such a statement that Uncle Sam would help enforce various clauses of the Versailles treaty, which he even refused to sign, were somewhat far fetched to say the least.

In denying the story that through Mr. Gibson's statement the United States was changing its policies regarding participation in European policies growing out of the Versailles treaty, Secretary Stimson also took occasion to deny another story to the effect that he had informed the German Ambassador at Washington that if the former allied nations failed or refused to reduce their armaments according to existing treaties, this would be no excuse for Germany to disregard treaty obligations and start arming. Mr. Stimson also took occasion at the same time to deny the stories of an economic and financial agreement between the United States and France, and he denied also that he had been approached concerning a $100,000,000 or $150,000,000 loan to Italy. Taking it all in all, it was a good day for sweeping denials and Mr. Stimson made a good job of it.

The American people will be pleased to know that this latest outpouring of European rumors concerning our willingness to mix in European politics is without foundation. The American people do not want our time-honored international policy of attending to our own business changed in the least. They realize that conditions in Europe are more chaotic now than for several years and that an expedition into the maelstrom of European politics would be more dangerous and less conducive of good to ourselves or to Europe, than such an expedition would have been even three or four years ago.

In 1920 the American people voted in tremendous majorities to keep the foreign policy of George Washington and the founders of the republic, and they have voted the same way on various occasions since then, whenever the issue has been paramount in a political campaign. Any politician or statesman who thinks they have changed their minds on this important subject is due for a rude awakening. The denials of Secretary Stimson as noted above were timely and in keeping with American tradition.

NOTICE TO ALL DELINQUENT TAXPAYERS!

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN To all delinquent taxpayers that if the taxes now due and in arrear are not paid on or before the 1st day of January, 1931, next, this office will proceed to collect according to law.

You are respectfully referred to Section 50 of Chapter 566, Acts of the General Assembly of Maryland, which provides as follows:

"Section 50. The Treasurer shall during the first week in December in each and every year give notice to all delinquent taxpayers of said county by advertisement in two newspapers published in said county and by handbills posted in five of the most public places in each Election District of said county, and at the Court House door, warning them that the payment of all taxes then in arrear will be enforced by advertisement and sale unless the same be paid before the first day of January next following."

ALBERT L. LEE.
Treasurer of Garrett County, Md.

TO THE TAXPAYERS OF GARRETT COUNTY, MD.:

The preceding notice is the law by which I am governed.

There comes a time for a final settlement in everything—so it is with our taxes. Without the hearty cooperation of all taxpayers who are in arrears, it will become very humiliating for you and very unpleasant for me.

Don't wait until January 1, 1931, to begin planning to meet this situation, but begin now.

I must get my accounts in shape for a final settlement. To do so, I must be guided by the statute in such case made and provided.

Treasurer of Garrett County Md.

ORAL HYGIENE DIVISION MAKING STEADY PROGRESS

Number of Counties Having Dental Clinics Is Increasing

The division of Oral Hygiene—the youngest section—of the Maryland State Department of Health is a year old this month, and the report of the Chief, Dr. Richard C. Leonard, shows that the youngster has made steady progress. Only three counties had regular dental clinics, and a few others had occasional clinics, in connection with the schools or for preschool children, previous to 1929. The establishment of the Division of Oral Hygiene marked the beginning of State-wide work, and during this first year the number of counties having dental clinics has increased to fifteen. It is hoped that by the end of another year every one of the twenty-three counties in the State will be on this list.

Reviewing the progress made during this first year, Dr. Leonard said: "The outstanding fact is the almost universal demand for the work from every part of the State. Fifteen of the twenty-three counties now have school dental clinics functioning either full time, half time or occasionally. In most counties the facilities offered are, as yet, inadequate to the needs. But the start has been made and in each county there is the promise of enlargement of the program until the goal, "Mouth health for every child in Maryland" may be gained.

"The clinic plan is as follows: All of the children up to and including the sixth grade are given a dental examination and defects are recorded. Parents are appraised of the need of dental corrections by written notice. Parents able to do so are urged to take their children to private practicing dentists. Children whose parents are unable to take them to private practitioners are invited to have the necessary work done in the school clinic, where a small fee (50 cents per operation) is charged, partially covering the cost. The balance of the clinic expense is borne by a local sponsoring group and the Division of Oral Hygiene. The response to this plan has been gratifying.

"County Commissioners, Boards of Education, the American Red Cross, Parent-Teacher Associations and Civis Clubs have all, in various counties, supported the program. Parents have eagerly availed themselves of the opportunity offered their children. The importance of mouth health is appreciated all over Maryland.

"The active support of the dental profession is particularly pleasing. They have not only responded splendidly by caring for the children coming to them because of the examination but have given support to the clinic itself in every phase of its work.

"The Division of Oral Hygiene is one year old. By the end of another year it hopes to see school dental clinics in every county in Maryland."

LOCAL AUTHOR ISSUES NEW BOOK OF POEMS

SARA ROBERTA GETTY

A second volume of verse has recently been published by Sara Roberta Getty, formerly of Grantsville, this county, and correspondent of The Republican, now a member of the editorial staff of the Cumberland Daily News. The book bears the title "Maryland Melodies," and contains one hundred of Mrs. Getty's best poems written since the publication of her first beek six years ago.

The new book is prettily bound in cloth with lettering of gold and has illustrations of local interest. The book has attracted much attention since its publication and is finding ready sale in Cumberland.

MT. LAKE PARK

The venerable Murray White, who should be, but is not, bowed under the weight of 90 winters, has issued his annual weather prognostication for the winter months. Other prophets may tell us that the stripes on the caterpillar (the fact that they are forward, midway or aft,) indicate the character of the weather, others may rely upon the groundhog, and others pin their faith on the lack or abundance of the acorn; but when Murray White, with his years of experience, tells us that we will have 23 snows this winter, why, we just naturally take it for granted and get out the shovel and the hoe. Mr. J. A. Enlow tells us that we have had seven snows thus far this winter. So, figure it out yourself.

At the regular meeting of Oak Lodge No. 8, I. O. O. F., the following officers were elected for the coming term: N. G., J. E. Callis; V. G., R. L. Dotson; F. Sec., R. E. Bittinger; R. Sec., J. W. Ream; Treas., H. C. Leighton; Marshall, D. M. Lower; Trustees, M. E. Lee, C. P. Martin and J. E. Callis. Representative to Grand Lodge, D. M. Lower; alternate, R. E. Bittinger.

On Tuesday a daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Sisk, of Loch Lynn.

The U. B. Sunday school will give a cantata of three acts, Wednesday evening, December 24. The two primary classes will receive a Christmas treat.

A large number of rabbits trapped or shot in the vicinity of the Park are being shipped to commission merchants in Baltimore.

Mrs. Frank M. Murphy returned to her home in Fairmont with Mr. Murphy, who motored here for the week-end.

Mr. Lester Yutzy has our thanks for a piece of venison steak. Not being a deer hunter, the next best thing is to have a friend who is.

Mr. Curtis B. Fleming, who spent Thanksgiving week with his son, Mr. Hugh H. Fleming, has returned to his home in Fairmont.

Mr. John O. Morgan, who is engaged in the timber business in Pendleton county, W. Va., spent Thanksgiving week with his family at the Park.

IMPERIAL ICE CREAM CO. HAS YEAR OF EXPANSION

Declares Dividends from Earnings of Very Active Year

The Imperial Ice Cream Company at a recent directors' meeting declared a 2 percent dividend upon preferred stock, payable December 15, to stockholders of record December 10, 1930.

The declaring of this dividend from earnings follows an active year of construction and a program of expansion throughout its territories. The careful selecting and purchasing of profitable milk and ice cream companies during the past years has shown its effect upon the growth of the business. Wholesale and retail milk business have been established in Clarksburg, Fairmont, Logan and Williamson, West Virginia. During the year a new plant has been completed at Harrisonburg, Virginia, which is looked upon as the most model dairy establishment in the Shenandoah Valley. Capacity of the Fairmont and Clarksburg plants has been doubled. Butter business has been added to all of the Imperial plants, and it is estimated that the product of over 7,000 cows is being purchased daily from dairy farmers.

The Imperial organization now operates plants throughout the state of West Virginia, and also has plants in Ohio, Virginia, Maryland, Kentucky and Pennsylvania. The products dealt in are ice cream, milk, cream, buttermilk, butter, cottage cheese, and eggs. The wholesale jobbing of candy has been extended to all plants.

In view of conditions in general the Imperial company occupies a rather enviable position. Economics have been effected and expenses reduced through wise management, and with the added food lines to its original product, ice cream, but few families in the teritory in which the company operates are not its customers.

Rev. Funk's Congregation To Enjoy Venison Feed

A clipping from a Newport (Ky.) paper was received at The Republican office this morning which says:

There'll be a big venison feed on Thursday night at St. Mark's Lutheran church, Newport, it was announced by Rev. D. M. Funk, pastor.

Each hunter bagged one. The deer will be on display until Thursday at the Becker Bros. meat store, 10th and Monmouth streets, Newport.

RED CROSS MEMBERS ARE STILL BEING TURNED IN

huilding on Alder street. This coming Saturday afternoon, December 13, it is ardently hoped there will be a large amount of fit-to-make-over clothing received—clean, please! It is hard enough a task for the self-sacrificing women on the committee to make over old garments even after they have been through the washer. If a great many garments or considerable material for garments is not received soon much valuable time will be lost by the committee which has planned to get at its work immediately.

3. Careful investigation of cases in various parts of the county will be made by the county health nurses and the school attendance officer before clothing collected and prepared by the Red Cross committee is given to anybody.

4. Citizens are urged to refuse requests of house-to-house beggars for clothing. All such people may be referred to the health nurse, who will investigate their needs and help them if it is advisable to do so.

The following reports from chairmen in various parts of the county showing those who have become members of the Red Cross since the publication of the previous lists have been received at headquarters in Oakland:

ROAD COMMITTEE MEETS TO DISCUSS PROPOSALS

G. Clinton Uhl, Chairman of the State Roads Commission, Unable To Be At Conference

NEED MORE GOOD ROADS

For the purpose of investigating and adopting means and methods for submitting to the people of the county proposals for the construction of improved highways for 1931 and years immediately following, a meeting of the county road committee composed of residents from all parts of the county appointed at the dinner given by the County Commissioners on November 22, was held Saturday afternoon at the Court House in Oakland.

G. Clinton Uhl, chairman of the State Roads Commission, who was to have been present and discuss the matter of funds arising from the gas tax and post roads as these funds become available from 1931 to 1938, and other matters from a financial standpoint, was unable to be in attendance, but letters explaining his proposition were read. The probable amounts available from these sources as set forth in Mr. Uhl's letters are listed at the conclusion of this article.

His letter expressed that both in his opinion and that of the Assistant Attorney General, the suggestion to pass a bond issue and then use some portion of the money thus secured to pay the interest as it accrued, was illegal and out of the question.

In discussing the road situation in Garrett county, Mr. Browning, County Commissioner, stated that there were approximately seven hundred miles of dirt roads in the county. About $29,000 is appropriated annually for the upkeep of these roadways. An additional amount totalling $47,000 for a special road fund which is used for rock roads and permanent improvements on various roads and in addition about $14,000 from the contingent fund, making a total sum of $90,000 per year. Unless some of the roads are hard-surfaced as the result of a bond issue, it will be necessary to spend $125,000 instead of the $90,000 per year, he said. The amount of interest the Commissioners could pay on a bond issue would depend, he said, on how much would have to be paid for other items, including the Board of Education for the operation

A PUBLIC MEETING WITH ASSEMBLYMEN TO BE HELD

Subjects Relating to New Laws, Repeal of Old Ones, etc., May be Presented by Citizens

TO BE HELD JANUARY 3

An open meeting in which citizens will meet with Garrett County members of the General Assembly of 1931, is being planned for Saturday, January 3, 1931, at 10 o'clock a. m., in the grand jury room of the Court House, Oakland.

The purpose of this meeting, it was said, is to present to the members of the Assembly subjects related to any new laws that should be on the statute books of the State, either for the county or for the State, or for any amendment or revision of any present laws or for rescinding any of the present local acts.

The entire day will be given over to interested public officials of the county, such as boards or their representatives, town councils or their representatives, and to any citizen of the county who may have an opportunity for presenting subjects in conformity with the purpose for which the hearing will be held.

This will be the only opportunity for the people of the county to meet the members of the General Assembly before they go to Annapolis, and it is urged by a member of the House that any person wanting any legislation enacted, amended, or repealed, to come before the delegation at that time and present their views for consideration.

A secretary will be present at the meeting who will take complete notes of the proceedings. The meeting will be similar to the one held in December of 1928.

Members of the General Assembly are Senator H. W. McComas, Oakland; Delegates Albert Markley, Oakland; Otho S. Fike, Avilton; A. G. Cullers, of near Gormania.

LARGE SUPPLY OF WATER IS FOUND IN NEW WELL

Test Must Be Sent To Health Department For Analysis Before Being Used

WELL IS 133 FEET DEEP

With the acquisition of what promises to be a very productive well, the starting of another reserve well, and plans for the erection of another reservoir for storage of water, to be used whenever needed, the Mayor and Town Council of Oakland, under the management of its water committee, will eliminate any possibility of a water shortage for years to come, according to Grover C. Stemple, mayor.

A large supply of water was struck in the new well last Friday, at a depth of 133 feet. It is estimated that the well produced more than 10,000 gallons of water per hour, which is more than both wells, now in operation, can send into the reservoir. Water in this well, which has a 6-inch bore, comes within six inches of the surface. To reach the supply it was necessary to drill through 70 feet of solid limestone formation, into a formation of Pocono sand.

In the Pocono sand formation are found the Big Injun sand, the Squaw sand, the Weir sand and the Berea sand, all oil producing formations in West Virginia, a geological book states.

After two or three days pumping a test will be taken and sent to the State health department for analysis, but it is felt by town authorities that the water will be absolutely pure, coming from such a depth.

The digging of the well was undertaken by Mr. Jenkins, of Kingwood, W. Va., after it had been given up at a depth of 74 feet.

Starts on Reserve Well

Mr. Jenkins is starting immediately to dig a reserve well at a point on the town's property, formerly known as the old Bradley farm, about 600 yards northeast of the spring.

If successful here, this well will be used as a reserve.

Plans for an additional reservoir are only tentative at present, according to Mayor Stemple, but the council is expecting to erect one with as much capacity as the one now on Crook Crest, which holds 600,000 gallons.

Oakland's normal daily consumption is approximately 50,000 gallons, it was stated. By conservative use of water by the citizens it has been possible to bring the water supply five feet above the fire reserve level in the reservoir, and it was thought that a few more weeks of care by the people would relieve any danger of a shortage.

MOONSHINE PLANT RAIDED AND LIQUOR CONFISCATED

Plant Found In Laurel Thicket Near Black Hawk School By Local and Federal Officers

LOG STRUCTURE USED

A well equipped moonshine plant, located in a laurel thicket near Black Hawk school near Bittinger, and housed in a specially constructed log building, was found least night by Deputy Sheriffs Joy Griffith and Richard West with Federal Agent Harold B. Hall, of Cumberland.

That the plant was being operated was divulged to the officers on Sunday, but its location was hard to determine in the thick laurel undergrowth of the swamp land surrounding it until the officers caught sight of the structure where they found the reputed owned, Floyd Bittinger, plying his trade over a still of about 30 gallons' capacity. In the building the officers also found fifteen gallons of manufactured liquor and 650 gallons of mash, all of which was destroyed except a sample of the spirits which will be used as evidence against Bittinger at the next term of court.

Bittinger was brought to Oakland following the raid and is now in the Garrett County Jail.

He was convicted in the local court about four years ago after he had been indicted for manufacturing and selling liquor.

DECEMBER TERM OF COURT ENDED TUESDAY EVENING

Conviction In Every Liquor Case Was Secured By The State Represented by Mr. Dawson

DEWEY HARVEY APPEALS

State's Attorney Dawson is being commended generally for the fine work which he did during the recent term of court. Taking office by appointment of the Court about a week before the convening of the grand jury, he succeeded in so preparing and handling his cases that out of a total of thirty-one actually disposed of, the largest number in any recent term of court, only three resulted in acquittals as against 28 convictions and pleas of guilty. Quite a large proportion of the cases were for violation of the local liquor law and convictions were obtained in all of these, the total fines imposed by the Court after conviction of the accused amounting to $3,900.

Mr. Dawson will continue to serve as State's Attorney by appointment of the Court until the end of this month, when he will be sworn in to serve the term for which he was elected in November.

Adjournment of the December Circuit Court was announced by Judge Albert A. Doub Tuesday afternoon a few minutes after the petit jurors had been discharged and those found guilty of breaches of the law since Monday, when Judge Doub went on the bench, had been sentenced.

Judge Sloan, who sat during the first week of the criminal court recessed the term Friday afternoon following the imposition of sentences of those found guilty during the trial of cases heard by Judge Sloan.

Lloyd Parrish, indicted jointly with Arthur Sweitzer of larceny and receiving stolen goods, the property of Cornelius Maloney, was sentenced to two and one-half years in the Maryland Penitentiary. Of the two men Parish was the only one to be declared guilty of the crime.

George Irvin, who entered a plea of guilty of the sale of liquor for which he was indicted at the present term, was fined $400 and costs or 12 months in the House of Correction.

Ashley Bishop and John Brown, indicted and tried for the theft of a number of chicken, were delared innocent and discharged.

Hubert C. Shipp, desertion and non-support of his wife and children, was given a suspended sentence of three years provided he maintain his family during that period.

Dobey Michael, tried and found guilty of stealing, was sentenced to one year in the House of Correction.

Paul Sanders, a youth of perhaps 18 years, was fined $250 or 12 months in the House of Correction, sentence to be suspended until June, 1933, provided he conducts himself properly in the meantime. Sanders was tried and convicted on the charge of violating the local liquor law.

Lawrence Calhoun was given a suspended sentence of five years. He had also been found guilty of the sale of liquor.

Raymond Ream, of near Finzel, three years in the Maryland Penitentiary after being found guilty of the crime of sodomy.

Raymond Ferguson, suspended sentence of three years for larceny.

Charles (Tinker) Martin, two years in the House of Correction. Martin was found guilty of stealing wearing apparel and other property belonging to W. A. Klmmell.

Lavina Keller, sale of liquor, fined $150 and costs.

Marie Hoye, tried before the Court and found guilty of the unlawful sale of liquor, fined $100 and costs with execution of the sentence suspended until March 16 next. In the meantime the girl is to leave this community and not again engage in the unlawful sale or manufacture of spirits.

Charles Madigan, who entered pleas of guilty to two indictments returned against him for the unlawful sale of intoxicants, was fined $150 in one case and $250 in the other, or serve eight months in the Maryland House of Correction.

Charley Pratt, tried before the Court after an indictment charging him with the sale of liquor and found guilty as charged, was fined $150 and costs.

Dewey Harvey Appeals Case.

Dewey Harvey was placed on trial before a jury Monday morning. The indictment found at this term charged

BIRTHS AND DEATHS MUST BE REGISTERED IN STATE

Complete Tally Sheet of Gains and Losses Is Kept

Every newcomer in a certain state is required by law to have his or her arrival duly registered, by a designated section of the state government, within four days after being welcomed into his new abode. In the same way, departure into the great unknown must be registered also, but only twenty-four hours are expected to elapse before this event is recorded. The "certain state" is the Maryland Free State and the law under which these requirements are met—known as the Registration Law—makes the Bureau of Vital Statistics of the State Department of Health the custodian of such records, and holds that Bureau responsible for their collection.

Similar laws are in force in every state in the United States, and their combined records as reported by the United Bureau of the Census give a complete tally sheet of the gains and losses that occur throughout the country.

What is konwn as the Registration Area for deaths was established by the Bureau of the Census in 1880, and only those states whose records met certain rigid requirements of promptness and completeness of registration were admitted to it. At the start, the area include only Massachusetts and New Jersey, with certain cities in other states, but year by year the number has increased until now forty-six of the forty-eight states, the District of Columbia and nine cities in non-registration states—the total comprising 95.7 percent of the population of the United States—are included in the Registration Area for deaths. Maryland has been included in this area since 1906.

In 1915, thirty-five years after the formation of the Registration Area for deaths, the Registration Area for births was established as a means of obtaining more complete and prompter reporting of births. Maryland has been included in this area since 1916.

Outling the registration system in Maryland, Dr. John Collins, Chief of the State Bureau of Vital Statistics, said: "The Maryland Registration Law provides for the division of the twenty-three counties into Registration Districts, and for the appointment of a local Registrar for each district. The local Registrar is responsible for the registration of all births and deaths occurring in that district and for forwarding these records promptly to the Bureau of Vital Statistics of the State Department of Health. The law requires the attendant at a birth to report the birth to the local or Deputy Registrar within four days of its occurrance. A death must be reported to the Registrar within twenty-four hours.

"The registration of births and deaths is frequently referred to as the 'bookkeeping of humanity'. In that sense, it is like the bookkeeping that is done by every carefully conducted business concern. It records and checks up the income and outgo, of the most precious resources of the state, its human capital—its citizens. It is consequently one of the most important functions of the State Department of Health, and its effectiveness depends upon the accurracy, completeness and promptness with which the information is forwarded to, and recorded by, those to whom that duty is entrusted."

Slim Jim and The Force

Feeling the need for something exciting last Saturday night, a number of Oaklanders decided to play a game. They couldn't find any bottles (didn't look very hard) to fix up as door knockers and they didn't want to play Run, Sheep, Run, because it sounded too much like running, so they all decided on Slim Jim, and the Grassville Police Force. (There would have been less running if they had played with the sheep.)

The characters included Dave Walter, as Cap; Bob Hoffman, as Lanky, and Scoop Himself, as Shorty. One character remained to be selected, Slim Jim, but he turned up before very long in front of the Recreation. He had Slim's red sweater on too. The only thing that went wrong with the whole game was that Slim was captured. "Cap" ran true to form and got out of wind. He sounded like a 4400 engine on the B. and O. before we finally knocked on the door to Bill Casteel's apartment house.

He invited us in. Bill's very hospitable that way.

The game was then called on account of darkness and several other reasons.

Candied Orange Peel

Select oranges with bright and thick skin. Peel them and cut the rinds into pieces of uniform size, about 2 and 3 inches long and ¼ inch wide. Put the pieces into a saucepan, cover with cold water and bring almost to boiling point, but do not boil. Pour off the scalding water and repeat this process twice again. Add to the peel its own weight in granulated sugar, cover again with cold water and boil until no syrup shows in the saucepan when it is held to the side. Spread on a buttered platter, and when partly cool, roll in sugar.

SINCELL'S

AND THIS SHALL BE A SIGN

They sought the Babe of Bethlehem, the little uncrowned King,
Those wise men, hastening from the East their loving gifts to bring.
They knew the sign and questioned not, for prophets, learned, of old,
The coming of the infant King had long ago foretold;
They saw the Star and followed it, and lo, it led the way
Unto a lonely manger bed wherein the Christ-Child lay.

The shepherds sought the new-born King, and as their steps they turned
In eagerness to Bethlehem their hearts within them burned
With joy at what the angels told, nor did they question why
A manged bed should shelter Him, whom God sent from on high.
"For this shall be a sign to you," they heard the angel say,
"The Child ye seek, He shall be found upon a bed of hay."

We, too, are seeking for the Christ to be our guiding light,
And we must cast aside vain things and come with hearts contrite.
He does not ask for pomp and show, but this shall be a sign—
Humility and reverence, and sympathy divine.
These shall be ours in fullest part, and when the glad bells ring
We, too, shall sing with glad accord the praises of our King.

THE PRESIDENT'S STATEMENT

President Hoover has issued this statement in regard to unwarranted appropriations by Congress on the public funds:

"I observe that measures have been already introduced in Congress and are having advocacy, which, if passed, would impose an increased expenditure beyond the sum which I have recommended for the present and next fiscal year by a total of nearly $4,500,000,000, and mostly under the guise of giving relief of some kind or another. The gross sums which I have recommended to carry on the essential functions of the Government include the extreme sums which can be applied by the Federal Government in actual emergency employment or relief, and are the maximum which can be financed without increase in taxes.

"No matter how devised, an increase in taxes in the end falls upon the workers and farmers, or alternatively deprives industry of that much ability to give employment and defeats the very purpose of these schemes. For the Government to finance by bond issues deprives industry and agriculture of just that much capital for its own use and for employment. Prosperity cannot be restored by raids upon the public Treasury.

"The leaders of both parties are cooperating to prevent any such event. Some of these schemes are ill considered; some represent enthusiasts, and some represent the desire of individuals to show that they are more generous than the administration or that they are more generous than even the leaders of their own parties. They are playing politics at the expense of human misery.

"Many of these measures are being promoted by organizations and agencies outside of Congress and being pushed upon members of Congress. Some of them are mistaken as to the results they will accomplish and they are all mistaken as to the ability of the Federal Government to undertake such burdens. Some of these outside agencies are also engaged in promoting political purposes. The American people will not be misled by such tactics.

SENATOR DAVIS VINDICATED

A rebuke to the Nye Committee has been administered by the Senate which seated James J. Davis as Senator from Pennsylvania over the objections of the special campaign investigating committee.

In the face of evidence that Mr. Davis, who served as Labor Secretary under three successive Presidents, had expended only $16,000 personally to win the election for the Senate, the Nye committee sought to have him barred on the ground of excessive costs of his campaign.

The committee rested its case on the contention that Mr. Davis headed a complete Republican ticket on behalf of which expenditures exceeded $500,000 and that consequently he was the beneficiary of the total amount expended, although there were some 3,000 other candidates on the ticket with him.

This contention had been raised by such investigating committees in the past, but they succeeded in barring Senators-elect on other grounds, such as improprietics in the election or the receipt of funds from objectionable sources.

There were no such allegations in Mr. Davis' case. There was no intimation that any money had been improperly expended or that any had come from sources that might seek future legislation from the Congress in which the former Labor Secretary would serve.

It was proposed to bar Mr. Davis solely because he handed a ticket on behalf of which half a million dollars was spent. The Senate gave a quick and negative answer to that sort of a proposition.

Two states into which the Nye committee carried its investigation seem to furnish a conclusive answer to this proposition. Pennsylvania has 65 counties and a population of 9,854.000. Delaware has three counties and a population of 244,000. Obviously the cost of distributing even a single piece of literature to the people of Pennsylvania would be some 45 times as great as the distribution of the same piece of literature in Delaware.

SCRUBS VS. PUREBRED

To the Editor of The Republican:—

I do not condemn the use of purebred animals on the farm, but I do advocate the proper attention to all animals, whether purebred or not.

It is only fair that we give our mixed breed (commonly called scrubs) equal attention to our registered stock and then note results. It is only human nature to descriminate between the two, usually because of the initial investment and pride of ownership in registered animals.

As an illustration of what can be accomplished with proper care: I own a common Duroc sow, was bred to O. I. C. and farrowed nine pigs, March 10, 1930, and slaughtered November 24, 1930. Weights of five are as follows: Gross 500, net 421; gross 445, net 377; grass 410, net 343; net weight of two were 371 and 346, respectively.

The last two pigs were raised by my neighbor, A. P. Wotring, and slaughtered December 2. They received practically the same attention and feed as did mine. As for feed: These pigs received part of the skim milk from one cow. Grain feed consisted of ground wheat and oats all the time and last two months what corn they would eat with it. Can any "purebred fans" take a like number of their pigs and beat this record?

The matter of proper attention to our stock leads me to believe that if we would apply more of our time to our stock and farm and less to holding the steering wheel of our automobiles, farm relief would be automatically accomplished.

An Interesting Fact

ANNAPOLIS, CAPITAL OF THE UNITED STATES.

The hearts of the Colonists must have beat with pardonable pride on the 26th day of November, 1783.

For weeks before that date we can imagine the prominent citizens of Annapolis meeting in conference at various homes, or in the tavern, discussing the best means of locating in that town a new enterprise—one that would for all time place the name of their town on the lips of every citizen of the entire country. At least they must have arrived at the conclusion that a committee in the nature of a legislative committee should be appointed, composed of the "go-getters" of the community to induce the General Assembly to get behind their cherished proposition.

The committee was evidently well selected, for we read in Andrews History that the Assembly acted with this group of citizens in urging upon the Congress of the Confederation that it make its permanent abode in Maryland. The resolution adopted by the legislative body set forth the superior claims of Annapolis, urging its advantages in the way of health, accessibility and as the possessor of many springs of excellent water.

The Assembly in its desire to secure the honor sought, offered to present the "State House and the Public Circle in the City of Annapolis (exclusive of school house, loan office, etc.), to the honorable Congress for their use."

Even the Governor's mansion was offered for the use of the President of the Congress, the Assembly further agreeing to build "thirteen dwelling houses and other buildings for the residences of the delegates of each of the thirteen Confederated states" at an expense "not exceeding thirty thousand pounds specie."

This persuasive resolution and generous offer, forwarded to the Maryland delegates in Congress, Daniel Carroll and James McHenry, who, no doubt added their eloquence in urging affirmative action, had he desired effect, at least, partlally, for we find that the Congress decided, temporarily, to avail itself of the hospitality of the Free State.

Accordingly Congress adjourned to meet at Annapolis November 26, 1783, but it was not until December 13 that the necessary quorum was secured, nine states then being represented.

It was during this session of Congress, on December 23, 1783, that George Washington, in the presence of the Governor and other state officials of Maryland and certain military officers and ladies and gentlemen of high standing, resigned his office as Commander-in-Chief of the American Army.

Thus it was that Maryland shares equal honors with Pennsylvania, with which she had been embroiled in a long-drawn out bitter boundary dispute, in having been selected to have located within her borders the Capital of the United States.

Mrs. J. C. Renninger Resigns as Red Cross Treasurer

With extreme regret the Garrett County Chapter of the American Red Cross has accepted the resignation of Mrs. Gertrude S. Renninger as its treasurer. Mrs. Renninger has been its first and only treasurer, elected when the chapter was organized thirteen years ago. Through all these years—including those in which duties were heavy because of the World War—she has served efficiently and with great interest in all phases of the work. Because she has genuine sympathy for all people in distress, she has been recognized as one who could be depended upon to give thought to all problems concerning expenditure of Red Cross money as well as care in keeping the funds and records. Even now Mrs. Renninger's interest in the work is as intense as ever, but she is unable to serve as an officer because from now on she will probably not reside in Garrett county continuously.

Mr. J. M. Jarboe, of the Garrett National Bank, has been appointed to act as Red Cross treasurer.

ROAD COMMITTEE MEETS TO DISCUSS PROPOSALS

of schools, elections, etc.

Those members of the committee present in favor of building the roads pointed out that it wasn't like a bond issue where it was necessary to pay the principal. In this case, they said, we will have the use of the roads and only have to pay the interest on the money used.

The question most discussed related to the increased rate in taxes, and it was felt that if a plan could be worked out in some way to raise the interest without increasing the tax rate, then the people of the county would be heartily in favor of it, but if it was necessary to raise the tax rate, the people would be agalnst it.

As a general rule, people living on or near a good road are against additional roads when built at local expense, and those who are not so situated want the good roads in their communities.

Mr. Browning concluded his remarks by saying: "I do not think that there is a business man in Garrett county who would object to an additional tax rate, but the farmers who have small farms, children to support, send to school and provide for the needs of his family, cannot afford to pay any more taxes than they are paying today; and if we can arrange a way to pay this interest without raising the taxes then I will support this proposed bond issue, but if the taxes have to be raised then I shall oppose it.

"Ever since I have been a Commissioner I have always found that the people who live along or near the State roads always seem to think that those who live 5 miles or more from the good roads should not have anything in hard road improvement. Such an attitude is not becoming and I have no sympthy for them, for they have always been the ones to oppose rural road improvement in Garrett county."

A committee was appointed to confer with Mr. Uhl and the Attorney General on the legality of the proposed ways and means of raising the money for roads, the committee being composed of former Senator J. W. McCullough, George D. Browning, Arthur G. Cullers, Otho S. Fike, Albert Markley, C. N. McIntire and Senator-elect Henry W. McComas.

The following were present at the meeting on Saturday: C. N. McIntire, chairman; A. C. Stanton, William Winterberg, George D. Browning, C. W. Ream, J. B. Emory, C. E. Ellithorp, H. V. Leighton, Carroll Pattison, John W. McCullough, James A. Fitzwater, George W. Harvey, W. O. Davis, secretary; E. A. Browning, H. A. Loraditch and Rev. E. E. Campbell.

The probable income from lateral road gas tax and post roads, both State and Federal, during the years 1931-1938, inclusive, as set forth in Mr. Uhl's letter is as follows:

Year	Amount
1931	$291,131.10
1932	230,711.74
1933	237,876.35
1934	245,470.84
1935	253,520.99
1936	262,054.15
1937	271,099.30
1938	280,686.16
Total	$2,072,550.63

SIMPLICITY IS URGED IN TOWN LIGHTING CONTEST

Smallest Home Can Compete With Largest Mansion for Honors In Rotary Contest

SUGGESTIONS ARE LISTED

Simplicity, above all else, is urged for outdoor lighted Christmas decorations in Oakland this year. Homes entered in the Rotary Club Christmas lighting and decorating contest will be judged from every angle, but gaudy display of lighted decorations will not be a point for the judges' consideration. The Oakland contest is being conducted to interest every resident in making Christmas a brighter and happier season. Points on which decorations will be judged are originality, simplicity, effectiveness, utilization of possibilities, novelty and general appearance.

The smallest home on this basis can compete with the largest mansion in the city, because the humbler homes suit themselves as well to the Yule decorations and lighting as the larger ones. If every possibility for lighting and decorating is utilized, if novelty is shown in choice and design of the decorations, if they show originality of thought and execution, if they carry the message of Christmas cheer and good-will, they are certain to be in the prize competition, a Rotary member stated.

Home decorators will find many possibilities for lighted decorations. Strings of colored Christmas lights are the simplest of all decorations and adapt themselves wonderfully to almost every situation. They can be festooned around the eaves, porch columns or pillars, ove rwindows or doors on the porch or house, through shrubbery and hedges, over lattice work or rose trellises. Some yards have small evergreen trees growing the year round and they are among the favored outdoor lighting decorations.

Any natural shrubbery adapts itself well to Christmas lighting decorations. The small lights can be strung through hedges or in clumps of shrubbery, and the shrubbery and hedges can be floodlighted cheaply by using shiny dishpans or other cheap refleetors. This lighting and decorating idea can be used too for the porch or house, and makes a wonderful effect when the white light reveals laurel or other Christmas greens tied with red or other colored ribbon or berries.

The ordinary ceiling light on the porch can be made to reflect the spirit of Christmas by replacing the usual light with a three-way colored light socket and draping it with evergreen, ribbon or colored paper. Side lamps on many porches are made beautiful by use of soft colored lamps and many homes have reflected cheer thru holly wreaths placed around the fixture. The porch boxes can be made beautiful with colored lights shining among greenery, or by flood-lighting from the inside. Many unique lighting and decorating designs can be worked out on a vine trellis on the porch or in the yard.

Windows can be made to have that "Christmasy" look by affixing real or artificial holly wreaths to the middle sill, inside, and lighting the wreath. Sprigs of holly or mistletoe pinned to the curtain add to the scene.

Hundreds of beautiful and interesting decorations were observed last Christmas on Oakland homes, each one adapting itself to the possibilities of the individual home. Great success was achieved by several of the homes last year by a display of solid color trees. Instead of decorating the trees with lights of many colors, trees were limited to onc color. Green, red, blue, pink, yellow, crystal or white, orange and other colored trees were seen.

An example of a novel decoration was shown in one city last year, where the home owner hollowed out huge blocks of ice and then dropped a string of colored lamps into each block. The amazing rainbow effect obtained through the ice was a novel and original one. Several homes had Biblical scenes, depicting the birth of Christ, painted or cut out and then floodlighted, while Santa was seen going down the chimneys, brought into relief by floodlights.

These are only a few of the countless beautiful decorations that can be used. All would not suit themselves to every home, but some are sure to be fitted for your particular residence. If you feel they aren't, the newest idea is perhaps the most original and best-suited and it, no doubt, is forming in your mind right now.

The Oakland outdoor Christmas lighting and decorating eontest costs nothing to enter and prizes totaling $25.00 are offered to residents here.

Oakland High School News

Several of the home rooms of the Oakland High school are preparing baskets of vegetables, jellies, eanned foods, etc., to be given to some families in need. We hope that these small tokens of kindness will be appreciated and that we may be helping others to have a happier Christmas.

The school paper, "The Acorn", was published December 9, 1930, for the first time this year. The paper proved itself to be a bigger and better paper than the Oakland High school has ever before published. About 75 percent of the student body have subscribed for the paper. "Come on students, let's make this 100 percent."

The second year French class of the Oakland High school had an exhibition "How they eelebrate Christmas in old France", the proceeds of which go to help the poor people celebrate Christmas in America. This exhibit was given Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, the admission being five cents.

On Tuesday at 11 o'clock an unusual assembly will be held. Christmas carols will be sung and other features provided, following which there will be a special program in each home room. Alumni are invited to be present.

TIMOTHY: THE INFLUENCE OF HOME TRAINING

LESSON TEXT—Acts 16:1-3; Philippians 2:19-22; II Timothy 1:1-6; 3:14-16.

GOLDEN TEXT—And that from a child thou hast known the holy scriptures, which are able to make thee wise unto salvation through faith which is in Christ Jesus.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Living for Christ in Our Homes.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Religious Training in the Home.

I. Timothy's Parentage (Acts 16:1).

His father was a Greek and his mother a believing Jewess. On his mother's side, at least, he had n godly ancestry. Frequently the influence of the mother makes the son. A pious mother and a pious grandmother were back of Timothy. How thankful to God ought those to be who have been blessed with a godly ancestry. Christian heredity and training are vital elements which go to make up Christian life.

II. Timothy's Training (I Tim. 1:5; II Tim. 3:14, 15).

His wise and faithful mother and grandmother carefully nurtured him in God's Word. He knew the Scriptures from childhood through their training. The faith which came to him through his grandmother and mother did not come through the laws of heredity, but through careful training and teaching.

Three factors were involved in his training:

1. Godly ancestors. Those who have been blessed with godly ancestors should thank God for them. Those who are to be the parents of the coming generation should see to it that their children are not handicapped by a wrong life and wrong teaching.

2. A Christian home. The young of the human race must remain for the longest period nnder the influence of their parents. Unending existence and exalted destiny demand long and careful training. The goodness and wisdom of God are vitally reflected in this provision for humanity.

3. A diligent study of the Holy Scriptures. Timothy not only was tnught the Scriptures from childhood, but was commanded diligently to stndy them (ch. 2:15). No home training or hereditary influence can possibly take the place of personal stndy of the Bible.

III. Timothy's Call (Acts 16:2, 3).

While on his second missionary journey in company with Silas, Paul fonnd Timothy at Lystra near Derbe. Perhaps he had been converted on Paul's first missionary journey, but hearing n favorable report of him by the brethren, Paul circumcised him so as not to offend the Jews, because his father was a Greek. This was in harmony with the decision of the Jerusalem council. It was a case where conciliation was possible without compromise of truth. From this time to the end of Paul's life, Timothy was his devoted companion.

IV. Timothy's Character.

1. Of a retiring disposition (II Tim. 1:6). He had received a gift from God at the hands of the apostle but it needed to be stirred up; that is, fanned into a flame. Such a temperament would mature in touch with a great personality like Paul. Each Christian has a gift from God's hand. It is highly important that the God-given gift be stirred up.

2. Courageous (II Tim. 2:1-8). Having been stirred up and freed from the spirit of fear, he deliberately identified himself with Paul in his sufferings and trials. Courage is greatly needed in doing the Lord's work.

3. Faithful (Phil. 2:20). Timothy tarried in the difficult field of Ephesus through many years. He was the only man of the proper fidelity to minister to the Philippians. The secret of his faithfulness in such a position was his fidelity to God's word.

V. Timothy's Ministry.

1. As a fellow missionary with Paul (Phil. 2:22). Paul testified that Timothy, as a son with a father, had served with him in the gospel.

2. As pastor of the church at Ephesus (I Tim. 1:3, 4). Here Timothy labored for many years, tactfully meeting the difficulties of that great church. The secret of his ministry, as that of all Christian ministers, was that he had implicit confidence in the Scriptures as God's Word, and that he diligently studied them so as rightly to divide them in meeting the needs of those to whom he ministered. This is the only way to meet the needs which arise in the difficult field of a pastor.

Humility

Hnmility is not only a virtue in itself, but a vessel to contain other virtues—like embers which keep the fire nlive that is hidden under it. It emptieth itself by a modest estimation of its own worth, that Christ may fill it.—Thomas Adams.

Working With God

If I can put one touch of a rosy sunset into the life of any man or woman, I shall feel that I have worked with God.—George Macdonald.

INSTANT POSTUM'S WOOING

Hear the legend of the hunter,
Of the first of Instant Postum,
He who lived in Minnesota,
Ere accountant, banker, merchant,
Yet he learned the ways of commerce
In the Prophylactic forest.
On the shores of Coca-eola,
Dwelt the Moxies in the wigwams,
Old Sapolio the chieftain,
Pebeco, the grizzled prophet,
And the warriors, young and eager,
Then from Multibesto's mountains,
From the heights of Texaco,
Came the young chief, Instant Postum,
Mightiest hunter in the forest,
All superb in strength and beauty.
He it was who trapped the Kodak;
He it was who shot Sears Roebuck,
Shot him with his swift Pierce Arrow,
Eversharp his trusty hatchet,
Every arrow heat a Hot-point.
On him gazed the Moxie maidens,
Nujol poured her glowing glances,
Bold Carbona sought to win him;
But for Musterole yearned Postum,
No Pyrene could quench the ardor
That she kindled in his bosom.
Through the fields of ripe Whcatena
Through the Shredded Wheat they wandered,
To the White Rock by the river,
By the rippling Cuticura;
There beneath Palm Olive shadows,
From the boughs they picked the Grapenuts,
Whispered words of love a-burning.
He told her how he'd trapped the Sealpax,
Told her how he'd slain Bull Durham,
Told her how de'd caught Ampico,
Boasted of his father's tcpee,
With its sides of Mentholatum
With its wings of soft Socony.
To him, Musterole, a-quiver, listened,
And her heart gave answer,
All the warmth of love she gave him,
All her Rubberset affection.
Passed the years in quick succession,
Small Post Toasties came to bless them,
Triplets B. V. D., & Gold Dust twins,
Little Beechnut, Wrigley, Spearmint,
Vici Kid and Pluto Water,
These and other little toasties,
Filled the wigwam with their laughter.

A single track concrete road with pavement in the center, and wide gravel shoulders to permit easy passing.

Money Spent For Upkeep Doesn't Buy New Roads

ROADS that cost less to build cost more to maintain. You can't expect anything else. The first year or two everything's fine—more miles of road are built, because the per mile cost of building is low.

But what happens later on? Maintenance costs eat a hole in the paving fund. Before long, the whole paving fund goes for maintenance. Not so with single track roads of portland cement concrete. Each year the paving fund builds more miles of new road—and keeps on building them indefinitely.

Pave with concrete for most mileage.

GARRETT MAPLE PRODUCTS PLAN FEDERAL INSPECTION

Over 1,800 Gallons Fancy Grade Syrup Offered During Last Year

Extending Federal and State Inspection to all grades of maple syrup as well as cake sugar, will be a reality in Maryland during the spring of 1931, according to plans adopted recently at the annual meeting of the Garrett County Maple Products Association.

The meeting, which was held in Oakland, was well attended and arrangements are being made by J. H. Carter, County Agent for Garrett county, and F. B. Trenk, Forestry specialist for the University of Maryland Extension Service, to have this service carried on by the State Department of Markets.

During the past spring, according to Mr. Trenk, 1,846 gallons of syrup passed as fancy or prime and were offered for sale under the trade name "Crest O' the Highlands". In the future it is planned to extend the inspection service to darker grades of syrup, and to all sugar cakes of a standard size. By so doing, it is believed that the mail order trade, now enjoyed by many members of the Association, can be greatly improved.

At the meeting it was decided to adopt the use of half-gallon containers to a greater extent in the future; to open one or more roadside markets to effect a larger local sale of syrup, and to adopt a trade name under which the lower grades of pure syrup could be sold.

Mr. Trenk announces that the Patent Office has finally approved the application of the Association for trade mark rights.

At the annual meeting County Agent Carter read sections of letters received from persons in distant states interested in the "Crest O' the Highlands" syrup. He pointed out that these letters indicated the wide publicity the Association has received during the first year of operation.

Girl Scouts Meet.

The Girl Scouts of Oakland Troop No. 1, held its regular meeting on Thursday night in the Scout Hall.

We have two new Tenderfoot scouts —Alice Walter and Rebecca Browning. Another second class scout in the person of Adeline Stuck was enrolled.

On Christmas morning the troop will sing Christmas carols which the carolers hope the townspeople will enjoy.

James Wilburn, administrator of the estate of James Pysell, vs. Harvey J. Speicher. This was a suit on a note given by Mr. Speicher to Mr. Pysell, and the defense relied upon by the defendant was based upon the plea of limitations. T. Matthews were defendant's attorneys.

BLAZE DESTROYS SUMMER RESIDENCE AT DEER PARK

A. T. Watson Home, Adjoining Deer Park Hotel, Burns

Fire of undetermined origin early Friday morning entirely destroyed the large frame summer dwelling of A. T. Watson, at Deer Park. As far as can be learned the blaze started about 3 a. m., but was not discovered until the flames had gained great headway, and attempts to save the building and furnishings were useless.

The home, during winter months, was unoccupied, but was looked after by Mr. Jankey, of Deer Park, who lived nearby. It contained approximately forty rooms and was valued at more than $30,000.

It was used as a summer home for the family of Mr. Watson, former coal operators of Fairmont, W. Va.

The dwelling adjoined the famous Deer Park hotel property. The loss is partly covered by insurance.

ENTRIES FOR CHRISTMAS LIGHTING CONTEST CLOSED

Judges Will Make Rounds Every Night Until New Year's Night

'Twas the night before Christmas, and the outdoors, bright with Christmas light, were awaiting the anniversary of the birth of the Child Jesus." That will be the message Oakland will send to the heavens tonight, when scores of beautifully lighted and decorated homes will begin to gleam with the tiny jewels of colored lamps, formed into countless novel decorations. Nearly every one of these homes will be entered in the Rotary Club's outdoor Christmas lighting and decorating contest, entries to which closed Wednesday. Cash prizes, totaling $25.00 will be distributed to owners of the best lighted and decorated homes, when judges have made their rounds during the Christmas week.

Every night until New Year's night judges will make their rounds, on foot and by automobile, so that every house entered in the Rotary Club's contest will be thoroughly inspected and judged from every angle, and the prize-winning homes announced in the next issue of this newspaper. Scarcely a street is without several lighted and decorated homes this year, and the sponsors of the contest are well pleased with the success of the contest, and the Christmas spirit that has resulted.

Each night until New Year's, lights should be kept burning in all homes entered in the Rotary Club's contest, so judges will have an opportunity to make a thorough inspection. Everyone who has entered the contest by filling out blanks printed in this newspaper, may feel sure his home will not be missed, and that it has an opportunity to win one of the prizes, if lighted each night until 11 o'clock, as no judging will be done after that hour.

Annual Band Concert to be Held on December Twenty-Eighth

In order to observe the improvement in the Gilbert-Brown Boys' band from year to year since its organization in 1927, the fourth annual concert of the band will be held in the Maryland theatre on Sunday evening, December 28, at 8:30 o'clock.

The entertainment will be held immediately after the services in the various Oakland churches. Specialties on the program include vocal solos by Reeves Blandford and Mrs. Frederick Thayer, and a baritone solo by Lewis Lawton. The band will render a number of marches, overtures, waltzes, etc., under the direction of R. R. Gilbert, director. He will be assisted by Russell H. Brown.

Mr. Bernard Gonder is donating the use of the Maryland theatre and no admission will be charged. Mr. Grover Stemple, mayor, will make a few remarks at the concert.

In Chicago, a butcher, held up by bandits in times past, placed a revolver in his cash register, one in his ice chest, where he had been clocked up before and placed police dogs in his shot, the latter to be released by pulling a string. The bandits got the gun out of the register and locked him in the cooler. There was so much frost on the weapon that it failed to fire, and the two dogs, instead of grabbing the bandits, being hungry, sank their teeth in the beef.

At Fairmont, station WMMN celebrated its second birthday Monday by a two-day air program.

MISS HARPER TALKS ON CHRISTMAS DECORATIONS

Demonstrates Many Inexpensive Ways of Fixing Up Home

A very useful and informational demonstration on Christmas decoration was given Thursday afternoon in the high school auditorium by Miss Betty Harper. Miss Harper represents the Home Service Department of the Monongahela West Penn Company and is well known by the women of this community for her interesting work.

The demonstration showed many interesting as well as inexpensive ways to decorate your home for Christmas. The small pig-tail socket played an important part in the demonstration. It was used in the center of three poinsettias which were placed in a flower crock. This lighted flower arrangement would look lovely at the side of a fire-place. Apig-tail socket was inserted into an inflated balloon, three of which were used in a cluster with green paper holly leaves. This lighted ornament would be very effective hanging from an archway or center light.

At the conclusion of the demonstration, Miss Harper showed the girls a number of photographs taken in homes which had been decorated according to the suggestions given in the lecture. Following this Miss Harper answered many questions asked by the girls concerning the arrangement of certain decorations in which they were especially interested.

Miss Betty Harper, of the Home Service Department of the Monongahela West Penn Company, gave an interesting as well as beneficial demonstration of interior decorating for Christmas.

Miss Harper's demonstration was centered around different uses of the lighted pig tail socket used in the center of poinsettias, balloons, bells, pine cones and other decoration.

This demonstration was given before a large group of high school girls Thursday afternoon at 2:45.

Harry Lester Moon, 16-year-old son of J. E. Moon, Cumberland, who was reported as missing from the home of his grandmother, Mrs. Zack Moon, Bloomington, this county, since last Monday, was found Friday night at the home of a friend, near Bloomington.

The youth took his dog and gun last Monday to go hunting and it was feared that he was lost or had met with an accident. The boy was unaware that his absence had caused any alarm. His older brother, Charles Moon, was drowned in the Potomac river on July 30, 1929.

The boy is now at the home of his grandmother.

ROAD COMMITTEEMAN HAS CONFERENCE WITH MR. UHL

Mr. McCullough Informs People Outcome of Meeting With State Roads Commission

Mr. J. W. McCullough, of Friendsville, representing a committee of citizens of Garrett county appointed at a recent gathering held in Oakland where the feasibility of going into road improvement work in all sections of the county during the coming summer and this manner relieving to some extent the unemployment situation, was chosen at a recent meeting of the committee to confer with Roads Chairman Uhl.

Mr. McCullough, as he states in the letter following, had a meeting with the chairman of the Commission as explained in the communication to The Republican published herewith:

To the Editor of The Republican.

As I was selected to negotiate with Mr. Uhl for a meeting with the committee to determine what we could work out for the betterment of our road conditions, I submit to you an article which I wish you would place in your paper this week that will let the people know what has developed up to this time as I feel a great many of our citizens are anxious to keep in touch with what is going on.

At the committee meeting at the Court House, Saturday, December 13, I was instructed by the committee to write Mr. G. Clinton Uhl, chairman, a letter for a meeting with him and the Attorney General to see if it would be legal to take part of the State funds to pay interest on the proposed bond issue. I received a reply from Mr. Uhl saying he had taken the matter up again with the Assistant Attorney General and he advised Mr. Uhl that after looking the matter up more carefully it would be legal to use the road funds to pay interest on the bond issue.

I had the pleasure of meeting Mr. Uhl last Friday evening in the Fort Cumberland Hotel in Cumberland and he told me that it would be impossible to have a meeting with the Commission until after the first of the year as the Commission would not meet during the holidays, and as this is a question that he wanted the full state board to pass on, he thought the proper time and place for the meeting would be in the State Roads Commission office in Baltimore the first week the Legislature convenes.

Mr. Uhl and I talked some about the bonding of the county and he said he would not assume full responsibility, and the matter will have to be settled before the members of the Commission.

Personally I feel that it would be only fair to the county to let the county settle the matter to suit the conditions and needs. Our county tax rate is $1.80 and with the State tax rate of 25 cents, makes a total tax rate of $2.05 on each $100 of valuation, and with the business depression every reasonable effort should be made to reduce this rate while this depression lasts.

The dirt roads of our county are mostly of tough clay material and we have the hardest freezing in the winter of any county in the State. When the frost leaves the ground the water remains in the clay and the results are you cannot use motor vehicles on our dirt roads to advantage more than six months of the year, and that season is not regular. Some counties may be differently situated and not so urgently in need of roads. Let them wait on the regular appropriation. This should be left to the people of the various counties of the State to better their own conditions.

LOCAL ORGANIZATIONS ARE ACTIVE IN CHARITY WORK

Approximately Fifty Families Will Be Presented With Boxes For Christmas Season

ROTARIANS GIVE TREAT

With all civic organizations cooperating with the public health nurse during the Christmas season, in fixing up boxes and baskets for the needy, approximately fifty families will be taken care of this year. In addition to this many individuals are sending out presents with best wishes for the new year, and the Oakland Rotary club gave a special treat to all children Wednesday afternoon beneath the Community Christmas tree.

Cash donations received by Mrs. Fahey, public health nurse, included $25 from the Rotary club, $2 from Mr. J. M. Jarboe, $3 from Mrs. Louis Bush, and $1 from an unknown source. "None of the money has been used yet," Mrs. Fahey stated, "as people have been donating so many clothes. food, etc.. that it can be put to better advantage a little later."

Organizations which have gathered food, clothing and toys include the Rotary club, the home rooms of Oakland High school, the Oakland troop of Boy Scouts, the American Red Cross, the Legion Auxiliary, church societies, fraternal bodies, the Sewing Circle for Gortner, and the Oakland Civic club. Individuals have also assisted in this collection and have turned over the donations to Mrs. Fahey. Packages were wrapped and delivered on Tuesday and Wednesday.

"More interest is being taken this year in assisting the less fortunate than for some time past," Mrs. Fahey stated. The reason for this has been diagnosed by Bruce Barton, a famous advertising authority. He states: "In times of business depression men and women go back to their homes, back to their church, back to their ideals. The Christmas season will bring out the finer qualities of human nature, with a desire to do something generous."

"This is evidently being the case in Oakland because many people have become actively engaged in distributing gifts and donating the necessities of life," Mrs. Fahey said. "This spirit of giving will make for a happier Christmas."

Christmas Cantata Presented Last Sunday Evening

"The Prince of Peace," a Christmas cantata, was presented last Sunday evening at St. Mark's Lutheran church, under the direction of Dr. John G. Robinson. Approximately 350 attended.

Edward Offutt: duets by Miss Kahl and Mrs. Karl Kahl; Miss Eva Falkenstein and Miss Nelle Compton; Dr. Robinson and Mrs. Offutt; men's quartet by Dr. Robinson. Mr. Sincell. Mr. Frazee and Mr. W. H. Hinebaugh.

Members of the choir included Miss Nelle Compton, Mrs. D. Edward Offutt, Miss Jane Robinson, Mrs. T. C. Hinebaugh, Miss Flossie Shaffer, Miss Jane Kahl, Miss Grace Falkenstein, Mrs. Elinor Hoye, sopranos; Mrs. Karl Kahl and Miss Eva Falkenstein, altos; Dr. John G. Truck Crashes Into Home of W. H. Haenftling

The driver of Monheim's produce truck, while enroute from Oakland to Accident last Friday night, seemingly lost control of the wheel at the curve in the road near the home of Sheriff-elect W. H. Haenftling, and crashed into his home, almost completely demolishing the porch.

An apple tree was broken off in the yard and carried to the porch. The truck was badly damaged but the two occupants miraculously escaped with only minor injuries.

The truck was owned by Monheim's Produce company of Uniontown, Pa. A check was given covering the damage to Mr. Haneftling's property.

Reindeer Mischief

By NATALIE McGRATH

BLITZEN had behaved very well until the first of December. Then all of a sudden he decided to go into Santa's workshop. The first terrible thing he did was to lap the paint from a doll's face. Santa had put a great deal of care into making that doll for she was to go to a little girl who was ill in the hospital.

Christmas eve came and all the reindeer were harnessed and waiting for Santa.

"Have you all of your bags, dear?" asked Mrs. Santa.

"Yes, we have everything and are on our way to wish the world a very Merry Christmas," answered jolly old Santa.

"Hump," said Blitzen to himself, "and hump again."

The red paint had had a bad effect upon his disposition. Off they sped and up, up, up they sailed through the air. Blitzen was going along beautifully when he suddenly wondered what Vixen would do if he, Blitzen, should bite his tail.

"Not very hard," thought Blitzen to himself, "just enough to make him jump."

And as they hurried along that winter's night, Blitzen reached out his funny warm nose and bit Vixen's tail—hard. Vixen jumped, then he kicked Donder, who in turn kicked the sleigh, upsetting it. Over it went and down it went, Santa, toys and all. Fortunately they all landed in a soft snowbank. Santa picked his snowy self up, put the toys back in the sleigh and off they started once again.

The first house they came to was a lovely old farm house. Santa and the reindeer made a beautiful landing on the roof.

"Now while I am gone see that you behave!" said Santa and down the chimney he went. As soon as he was out of sight, Blitzen started trouble again.

"Dum-dum diddle-dum-dum! See what I can do!" he snorted, and he crossed his front legs, stamped his hind ones and sat down kerplunk on the roof.

"Here, here," shouted Santa, as he came up the chimney. "What is the meaning of all this noise? It sounded like an earthquake. I thought every moment that the roof would cave in. If you can't stand still on the tops of the houses I shall most certainly leave you on the ground."

Santa knew that this would be a dreadful punishment to them all as they were very proud of being able to stand on the tops of houses.

The next house had a slanting roof with a peak at the top and when Santa had gone down the chimney that mischievous Blitzen promptly sat down again, kerplunk, snorting his favorite song, dum-dum-diddle-de-dum. The first thing he knew he had started to slide and he couldn't get up quickly enough to prevent sliding all the way to the ground. Over the roof he went, dragging the sleigh and his seven brothers with him. Out of the chimney came Santa and leaned over the peak of the roof to call them.

"I'm just about tired of your nonsense tonight!" said he. "Now you will stay on the ground."

And when in the country, they stopped at another farm house; that is just where Santa left them.

"Sniff-sniff, sniff-sniff!" A spicy smell reached the nose of Blitzen.

Inch by inch he moved over to the window and stuck his head right in. He proceeded to devour everything in sight. He ate so rapidly that the other deer could only stare and wonder. Pies, cakes, tarts, jelly and jam all went down with lightning speed. When he had finished he licked his lips, turned around and, pushed back to the place Santa had left them. When Santa came out, there they were as quiet as mice.

"Well, now, that's fine," called Santa in a cheery voice. "See how much better things are when you behave!"

Now we all know that it isn't the best thing in the world to run after we have eaten a great many sweets. Blitzen soon learned this and began feeling very ill indeed. But feeling ill only made his disposition worse. In the distance he could see a city and above this city he saw a tall steeple. As they raced along near the steeple Blitzen pushed his brothers over so that when they passed they were so close you could not have put your finger between the steeple and the sleigh. Blitzen glanced at Vixen and saw that his hair was standing right up straight.

"What Ho," bellowed Santa, "Do you want to upset the sleigh again, you naughty deer?"

All over the world they went, not skipping a place. Blitzen was very tired and as he could think of nothing better to do he snorted and fussed and counted stars. At last just as Christmas morning dawned they found their way home. Mrs. Santa came running out to meet them, and to help Santa unharness the reindeer.

"Blitzen cannot have anything to eat and he must go right into the barn," said Santa rather sadly. "And I fear he cannot go with me next Christmas."

And now indeed was Blitzen a sadder and a wiser reindeer.

Now, my dear children I know that you all love Blitzen. You must, for he is a lovable old fellow. When you hear the deer on the roof Christmas eve it is always Blitzen's hoofs you hear, because he always stamps harder than is necessary. And when you hear the bells you can always hear Blitzen's above the rest, no one knows why. Just because he is Blitzen, I suppose, and likes to give an extra stamp and an extra shake whenever possible. He will be sadly missed next Christmas eve unless—I have it! Let's all write a note to Santa and ask him to forgive poor mischievous Blitzen before next Christmas has a chance to come around. If all the children in all the world should write I'm sure Santa would forgive him.

THE package bearing a holiday label with the inscription "Lois Smith, Argyle Apts.," signed for and the expressman gone, Lois sat down on the floor to tear off the wrappings. Inside she found a store of gayly-wrapped packages. The first contained a knitted tie.

"F'even's sake!" she said, and opened the second one. It contained home-made candy. "That," she thought, "is more like it." The next parcel contained handkerchiefs with a neat "L. S." in the corner, only—they were men's handkerchiefs. The other item, she could tell, was fruit cake and under it she found what she was looking for—a letter.

"My Dear Son Louis," it began. "F'even's sake," said Lois, "Of course! It's for Louis Smith."

Now if all Lois Smith and Louis Smith had had in common had been their surname and their choice of an apartment house, it would have been relatively simple for Lois to take the box upstairs and explain.

But they had also shared 51 full moons and 45 other moons, some 30 odd shows, and several Sunday afternoons in the park. They had shared secrets and tea in Lois' apartment; a promise, several kisses, and one quarrel. So now they were mutually miserable, sharing a pride that forbade attempting reconciliation.

Lois put the things back in the box, jiggled the candy to hide that three pieces were gone, and retied the tinsel bows. Then she carried it upstairs to Louis Smith's apartment, knocked and ran back down, where she locked her door and flung herself across her bed to cry.

A knock at the door roused her. She opened it to a handsome young man. "Lois, darling!" he cried.

"Well?"

"It was so wonderful of you—"

"What was?"

"Oh, don't pretend. I was just coming in and saw you running down. And then of course, I found the candy and the—"

"But didn't you find the letter?"

"What letter?" He stooped down. "Is this it?"

She nodded. "I must have dropped it."

"Oh," he said. "My mistake. Sorry."

She watched him go and then ran after him. "It isn't your mistake, Louis. I've made some candy, and—I—knitted you a tie long ago."

INTERESTING HISTORY IS OFFERED ABOUT ACCIDENT

How Town Received Its Name Is Explained In Article—Few Know Actual Facts

WAS EARLY SETTLEMENT

From the Ax Eye, official publication of the Accident High School, the following article relative to the naming of the town, is taken:

"Was it really by accident?"

"My! What a funny name for a town!"

These are the comments uttered by many tourists and visitors to our town. Even many of the natives of this village do not know the real story of how Accident received its name.

A grant of land was given to Mr. George Deakins by King George of England in payment of a debt. According to the grant, Mr. Deakins was to receive 600 acres of land anywhere in Western Maryland that he chose. At that time Western Maryland consisted of land which later was divided into the counties of Washington, Allegany and Garrett. Mr. Deakins sent out two corps of engineers to survey the best land of Western Maryland that contained 600 acres. After surveying several plots the engineers returned with their maps of the different plots they had surveyed. To their surprise they had surveyed a tract of land starting at the same tall oak tree and returning to the starting point. This was the only tract surveyed by both corps of engineers, so Mr. Deakins chose this and had it patented, "The Accident Tract"—hence the name of the town.

The boundary tree of the town stood at the corner of a piece of ground owned by Lloyd Alexander, on the lower corner of Green street, thence to an oak tree at the corner of the farms owned by H. J. Speicher, Mrs. John Goehringer and M. Brenneman; thence a straight line 220 rods on the William Miller farm, taking a portion of the Richter farm, Yost farm, Beeghly farm, King farm, Kolb farm and including all the Spoerlein farm, the H. J. Speicher farms and the Richter homestead farm. The line comes to the State road near the residence of Elmer Kolb, and from that point runs back to the place of beginning.

This section abounded in deer, rabbits and other game animals and was one of the earliest settlements of Western Maryland.

A Mr. Drain, living on the Richter homestead, had supposedly made the first settlement. Also some more early settlers were Truman West, living on the Walter Haenftling farm, and Truman Fairall, on the present site of Accident. He kept a mercantile store and owned most of the land in the present area of town.

These early settlers were of English descent and came here from Prince George's county with the object of raising tobacco. In this project they were not successful because the tobacco they raised was of poor quality. Their livelihood depended mostly on the occupation of hunting and fishing.

These people of English descent continued to live here until about 1845 or 1850, then we find the Germans drifting in and from that time on the settlement has been largely German.

Such was the beginning of a town which is now Accident, having a population of nearly 200 inhabitants.

Shall upkeep costs get most of your road-building fund?

"CHEAP" roads, in the long run, are the most expensive. Why? Because even more than the money they "save", in building, is spent in maintaining them. Money spent for maintenance doesn't build new roads.

Roads, like houses, need solid foundations. Build single track roads of portland cement concrete and combine moderate first cost with utmost ultimate mileage per dollar. Buy NEW roads with your paving fund!

ORGANIZED WARFARE IS DECLARED ON DISEASES

School Children Are Being Trained to Fight Diseases

The school children in Frederick county are being trained to fight the germs responsible for coughs and colds and other diseases, with the following ammunition:

Clean handkerchiefs,
Individual towels and cups,
Plenty of soap and water.

Incidentally, the warfare calls for regular drills in handling these materials, in order that their use may become a fixed habit. The manual of instruction for the campaign as prepared by Dr. E. C. Kefauver, Health Officer for Frederick county, follows.

"1. Every child must bring a handkerchief to school, and be taught to use it to protect the mouth and nose whenever he coughs or sneezes.

"2. Keep fingers out of the mouth. Also pencils or anything else that does not belong there. Don't swap apples or chewing gum.

"3. Do not use a common drinking cup or a common towel.

"4. Wash the hands with soap and water after visiting the toilet and before eating.

"These rules were selected because they seem to us best to protect the children from two types of communicable diseases which are most prevalent among school children—spit-borne and excretion-borne diseases. These two groups of diseases can be prevented if the secretions and excretions of pupils are destroyed or are prevented from getting to the mouths of others.

"The first three rules, it will be observed, are to prevent the spread of spit-borne bacteria. These are divided into two types the spray-borne, which are carried by coughing and sneezing; the non-spray borne, which are spread generally by putting things into the mouth like soiled fingers, pencils and other objects. Rule No. 2 is particularly a protection against the latter type of transfer.

"The fourth rule applies primarily to the prevention of excreta-borne diseases. Washing the hands before eating is also an additional safeguard against spit-borne diseases because the hands touch many objects handled by others. Rule No. 3 applies to the prevention of both types of diseases.

"All the teachers in our schools," Dr. Kefauver said, "supervise the enforcement of the rules during school hours. Teachers can do much to prevent diseases, often more than doctors and health officers, because the latter deal only with sickness, and there are more well carriers of germs than sick ones. Much time is lost by pupils all over the country on account of diseases which could have been avoided if a proper health education program were maintained and enforced. In Frederick county we have found that our four simple rules have been the means of curbing these diseases to a noticeable extent."

MORE COUNTY PARKS

County parks are increasing in number and extent. Thirty-five years ago the county fairground and courthouse grounds formed about the only places for bublic use and enjoyment. Today 22 states have laws permitting counties to acquire land for park purposes. Furthermore, since 1926, the counties providing parks have doubled in number. Sixty-six counties in 19 states now hold 105,444 acres for their citizens' outdoor life.

This is an excellent development. It distributes such playgrounds more widely and divides the burden of maintenance more fairly among all the residents of a county instead of confining advantages and expenses to the large or more prosperous communities.

The recreational facilities thus afforded all citizens offer good returns in health. Finally, establishment of county park areas is good business. The National Recreation Association studied various counties with park areas and found that the value of land within 1,000 feet of county parks had increased from 200 to 500 per cent within a few years. Much of the increase was frankly attributed to the proximity of the parks.

It is probably just as important, for many reasons, for municipalities, counties, states and nation to establish public parks and forests as to reclaim waste land for agriculture or to cut seenic areas into real estate subdivlsions.

"RESERVE FUNDS" FOR WAGES

Edward F. McGrady, legislative representative at Washington for the American Federation of Labor, is quoted as declaring that the Federation's executive council will go on record at its next meeting in favor of a bill establishing "reserve funds" to meet unemployment in industry, the funds to be maintained by joint contributions from employers and from the government. Full details are not supplied, but it is evident enough that if such a plan has really been matured by A. F. of L. officials it is of considerable interest.

The Federation has for many years opposed compulsory unemployment "insurance." As recently as last September Mr. Green went out of his way to attack the idea. What labor wants, he declared, is jobs rather than "doles", and he added that "the American workman resents the idea of being compelled to make a fixed contribution to a fund." At the annual convention in October the Federation devoted much time to unemployment, but its interest was in securing stabilization of industry rather than protection for workers after their jobs were lost. Various resolutions favoring unemployment insurance were simply referred to the executive council. Yet other Federation officials have indicated from time to time that they were less opposed to unemployment insurance than is Mr. Green; the New York State Federation, in indorsing Governor Roosevelt's suggestions, seemed to place itself on record as favoring the principle, while Mr. Green himself has intimated that if industry could not solve its own problems he might be willing to see the government called in.

Now Mr. McGrady, adopting an idea that has been advanced before, appears to have synthesized the views of those who want unemployment benefits and those who oppose unemployment insurance.

> The wage earner has the same right to security of employment that the stockholder has to security of dividend payments * * * We believe every industry should be compelled to set aside reserves for unemployment wages in slack times, just as they set aside reserves for dividends.

Thls, at any rate, has the merit of abandoning actuarial terms altogether. It ls hardly necessary to point out, however, that such a theory would effect a far more drastic revision of our economic system than any unemployment "insurance" scheme; but it is difficult to suppose that any such plan will be seriously advenced by the A. F. of L., but the mere fact that it is being discussed should bring us nearer to the realities of the unemployment "insurance" question.—N. Y. Herald Tribune.

SAVE YOUR EYES

Just as all other organs and muscles of the body become exhausted by exertion so do the powers of vision become dulled from use and require to be renewed by rest and this is more especially true if the light is not of the natural color and quantity.

The needed rest may be afforded to a large extent by the manner in which the eyes are used. It is apparent from close observation by optometrists that the eyes work together in a rather peculiar manner, not both actively as one but each eye actively by turns, the other eye coming to the support of its fellow every few moments to save each other from exhaustion. As very few people have eyes which are equal in visual power it is apparent that much strain may result from this natural "alternating" process of vision and often it is necessary to have the eyes properly "balanced" with the needed glasses in order to obtain comfortable vision.

Entirely apart from this peculiarity, however, the eyes may be rested when engaged in reading, sewing, or other close work by glancing up from the work and looking at a distance every few moments thus allowing the converging and accommodating muscles of the eyes to relax and take on new strength temporarily. If the eyes be closed a few seconds now and then it will be found that they will continue their normal sensitiveness and activity for a longer working period. It is only in recent years that eyes have been required to do so much continued work at short distances and as the process of natural evolution is very slow, eyes are not yet adapted to such work. Rest "The Tired Eyes".

PRESIDENTIAL ASCENDENCY

Observers of the political heavens have not failed to note in recent weeks the growing ascendency of the Presidential star. This has been interpreted correctly not as the result of White House strategy nor of party manouvering but as the direct consequence of a better understanding of Herbert Hoover by the people of the country.

Perhaps the first of this series of events which have so contributed to popular appreciation of the Chief Executive was his speech at the Child Welfare Conference. Seldom have Presidential utterances received such warm and unanimous approval as was accorded by the Nation. Before the acclaim had been stilled, Mr. Hoover's decision to send the World Court Protocol to the Senate was made public. While opinion remains divided as to the advisability of this country's participation in internationel controversies, the President's courageous action in submitting the matter for decision was highly praised not only by the proponents of peace but also by the country as a whole.

Timely, therefore, was the message to Congress which gave to the citizens of the United States a new comprehension of the wisdom and ability of their President. Interpreted even by the opposition press as revealing a profound understanding of the Nation's economics problems, popular opinion placed a far greater value on the message accepting it as a harbinger of a new prosperity under the guidance of a man in whom the people have placed their faith.

IN DAYS OF OLD

FORTY YEARS AGO

Wednesday evening, December 24, 1890, Mr. E. G. Naylor, of Meyersdale, Pa., and Miss Lizzie Bolden were married.

Not much of the 30-inch snow remains.

Will Ravenscroft, Roanoke, Va., is home for the holidays.

Capt. James A. Hayden has been appointed by the U. S. Agricultural department as State Statistical Agent for Maryland.

A petition from the residents of Kearney or White Church for the establishment of a new postoffice at that place was approved by Representative McComas. Kearney is between Mt. Lake Park and Gormania. The office will be established.

The star route mail from Accident which should have arrived in Oakland Wednesday evening got here Friday noon. The snow storm caused the delay.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

Snow has been flying every day from November 10th, and the "oldest inhabitants" say that it is an "old-time" winter. At present there are eleven inches on the level and from three to fifteen feet in drifts.

Prince Albert Shrout will be minus a number of toes as a result of freezing them as he was returning to Oakland Saturday night from Shaffer, West Va.

Miss Helen Townshend spent Monday in Cumberland and Dwight Townshend has returned home from Baltimore to spend the holidays with his parents.

Mr. Owen Treacy is in a Cumberland hospital for treatment, having been taken ill while on a visit to that city several days ago.

Mr. Howard Brenneman, McHenry, was in Oakland Tuesday.

Mrs. William R. Offutt and children have gone to Cumberland for the holidays season.

An Interesting Fact

THE STAMP ACT

We have been taught that the Revolution was waged by the American Colonies as a protest against taxation without representation. But so far as Maryland, at least, was concerned, the cause of that great struggle was more fundamental.

Section XX of the Charter of Maryland expressly provides that the king, his heirs and successors "at no time hereafter will impose, or make or cause to be imposed, any impositions, customs or other taxations, quotas or contributions whatsoever in or upon the residents of the Province aforesaid. for their goods. lands or tenements within the said Province," etc.

Buttressed by this declaration in the original grant and being bent on managing their own affairs, regardless of consequences, it is not surprising that the Stamp Act, passed by Parliament in March, 1765, was received with intense and inflexible opposition.

Opposition to "this most grievous and unconstitutional act" was not born of disloyalty. The Colonists were still subjects of Great Britain. They did consider it, however (as stated in the instructions given their delegates by the freeholders of Anne Arundel county), "in derogation of our ancient inherent rights and privileges as freemen and liege subjects of the Crown of Great Britain." On this declaration they firmly took their stand, believeing that "each new law Imposed on us may pave the way to some new tax; each new tax to some new oppression—oppression (unresisted) leads in a direct and open path to bondage; and that to the immediate privation and utter destruction of liberty, of property, and all that is dear to us."

The Maryland Gazette boldly entered the fight on behalf of the Colonists in opposition to the Act. Its columns were open to all protests. Notice was given by citizens that they would not pay any tax whatever except that laid by their own representatives The "Sons of Liberty," a more or less secret organization, became so active that stamp distributors, appointed for the purpose, were forced to resign, so that when the time came for the law to go into effect, there were no officials to act.

Everywhere throughout the Colonies the highest excitement and indignation prevailed. When Zachariah Hood, the stamp distributor for Maryland arrived, he was met at the dock by citizens who prevented him from landing. He effected a secret landing, however, but his home was burned and in several places his effigy was whipped, hanged and burned and he was obliged to flee from the Province.

When the time came for the Act to go into operation, the court of Frederick county unanimously resolved and ordered that all the business and processes of the court should be transacted in the usual manner without the use of stamped paper. Other courts followed the example. Under the circumstances, Parliament, evidently seeing the handwriting on the wall, wisely repealed the Act on March 17, 1766.

Thus again Marylanders were willing to share every risk in defense of the privilege of local self-government.

Mr. Joseph D. Harvey Is Of The Opinion that Boh-Cats Are Too Numerous and Destroy all Kinds of Wild Game, Especially the Young Deer.

To the Editor of The Republican.

Through your columns I would like to address the sportsmen of Garrett county.

I was one among the 300 hunters who tried for a buck the first three days of December. If geeting a deer was all I had in view my efforts would have been in vain.

I am a lover of wild life and the great out-of-doors. While traveling in the Muddy Creek and Snaggy Mountain section the footprints in the snow revealed that those sections are well stocked with deer. From reports from other sections of the county there must be from 500 to 700 deer in the county. Deer increase like sheep—singles, twins and triplets. A doe after she is two years old most generally gives birth to twin fawns, and the sex are about equally divided, so our fawn increase for May, 1931, should be 250 to 300. Four fawn tracks was all I saw in the three days, and I believe them to have been made by the same animal, as they were in the same region and on different days. If so, then the tracks of two fawns was all I saw.

Here is what I want to impress upon the minds of you sportsmen and all others who may be interested in the conservation of our game. In this same section there are plenty of bob-cat tracks. It is not the custom of these cats to travel in packs like the wolves, but we saw where there had been three traveling together. There are apparently twenty or more bob-cats in the Muddy Creek section. Ten deer a season is a very conservative estimate for a bob-cat in a deer country, hence the present scarcity of the fawns.

Ask old Tabby what the cat increase should be in the first half of 1931, and it will be divulged that each mother cat produces from three to five. As the cats increase in number the deer stands a poorer show of surviving.

We find some grouse in the same section of the State forest which if not disturbed by the killers (bob-cats) will increase and make good shooting for the sportsmen. As the forests are protected from fire and game will naturally increase if protected from their natural enemies, the bob-cat being the most aggressive. We do not claim it would be fair for the county to increase the bounty on cats, for that would be more money for the taxpayers to raise.

In the past we have imported into the county snow-shoe rabbits from Maine; Hungarian pheasants from Mexico; turkeys from California; cotton-tail rabbits from various places. Not that I object, but could we not get the Conservation Commission and the State Game Warden interested in the protection of our deer and other game from the bob-cat as well as from man, for if you kill out of season the strong arm of the law is there to gather us in (as it should be), but the blood-thirsty bob-cats have 365 days in which to kill.

Talk it over, brother sportmen. If it appeals to you let's get together if it takes a banquet to frame a solution for the extermination of the bob-cat. If this appeals to you, drop us a card to Deer Park, Md.

New Record in Pork Production

A new record in pork production in Garrett county was realized last Thursday morning when Hobart Bishoff, of Hoyes, butchered three pigs weighing 120, 128 and 131 pounds respectively, at the age of thirteen weeks. three days.

These animals were purebred Berkshires and their diet consisted of wheat middlings, ground corn, mineral mixture and lots of skim milk.

Mr. Bishoff's experience shatters the old theory that "a pig's time isn't worth anything." These pigs, with an average daily gain of 1.4 pounds were developed into pork at a cost of approximately 8 cents per pound.

Save Your Eyes

Early in life the boy begins to observe and make choices of the work which he thinks he will like best and after he has been a few years in school he is thinking of selecting the work or profession in which he is to be engaged in later life. In the choice of this "life work" the capabilities of his eyes should never be left out of account.

Many are the young men who on entering their chosen profession find that their eyes refuse to do their work and it is necessary to leave the task for which they have spent so much time and money in preparation for something less troublesome and less in its demands upon the eyes.

Eyes, which in a few years would fail an engraver, an artist, or a fine mechanic, would last a landscape gardner, or a seaman a lifetime. He who has sound, healthful eyes may choose his occupation without regard to them but with weak eyes must realize his handicap and prepare accordingly. One cannot determine by simple tests he may take himself whether his eyes be strong or weak and for this reason it is wise to obtain professional advice upon the eyesight before any choice of work is made for later life.

In Pittsburgh, physicians on the staff of St. Margaret's Hospital have sent out a general warning that rabits stolen from the hospital laboratory should not be eaten, as they are germ-inoculated and to eat them would mean almost certain death.

ANNUAL MEETING.

The Farmers Union Association and Fire Insurance Company of Garrett County will meet at Accident on Tuesday, December 30, 1930, at 10:00 o'clock.

Christmas morning the usual dawn service, beginning at six o'clock, will be conducted in St. Mark's Lutheran church. The pastor will give a short Christmas exhortation at the service and the choir will sing.

One day last week a party of hunters composed of Horace Coddington, Walter Janoske and Joseph Helbig, of Oakland, motored to a point several miles west of Oakland and leaving the automobile along the roadway entered the woods in high expectation of bagging some game. After a few hours' hunt they returned to the point where they had left the car but it had disappeared. Its location was ascertained late in the afternoon when a man passing by informed the hunters that he had seen a car such as they described stalled in a snow bank several miles distant. Going to the place indicated the automobile proved to be the lost or stolen one and then an hour or two more was spent in getting the machine out of the drifted snow.

Students who have returned from various schools to spend the Christmas holidays at their respective homes include Misses Virginia Hamill, Warrenton Country School; Dorothea Sturgiss, Linwood School, St. Charles, Mo.; Helen Leighton, Mt. Chase of Suspected Moonshiners Ends When Lights on Officers' Car Fails.

Sheriff Casteel and Deputy Sheriff Joy Griffith were thwarted in their chase after a suspected moonshiner Saturday night when the lights on their automobile failed, but not, however, until the man they were after had crossed the State line into West Virginia, the last two miles of the run being made by the officers with no lights on their machine.

The man, for whom a warrant has been in the hands of Sheriff for a year or more, has been dodging the officer, making periodic visits to his home and then leaving for the neighboring State before the Maryland officials could get to the place where his family resides. Saturday night he was seen and the chase followed.

CUMBERLAND ROAD MAP WILL BE SEEN AT THE FAIIR

Begun in 1811 the National Pike Is Mentioned In Article By Research Committee

Cumberland, as the place where the old Cumberland Road, one of America's early historic highways, was started in 1811, is mentioned in an account of the old road by Mark Morris, research assistant to the Iowa State Highway Commission. As a member of the National Research Council Science Advisory Committee, Mr. Morris has recommended that a map of the ancient highway be made part of the civil engineering exhibit at the 1933 Chicago World's Fair.

The Cumberland Road, variously known in its day as the "United States Road", the "National Road", or the "Old Pike", was the first large road project in this country, and the first road, according to Mr. Morris, in which engineers were used in construction work. Its representation at the Chicago Fair would be for the purpose of showing progress in highway engineering.

In 1811, Mr. Morris writes, the first contract was awarded for ten miles of the road west of Cumberland.

The project, Mr. Morris points out, was closely related to the admission of Ohio into the Union, which occurred in 1803. The Act of Congress proposing Ohio's admission contained a clause providing for a road to join the new state with those that had been the original thirteen colonies. This resulted, largely, thru the influence of Albert Gallatin, Secretary of the Treasury in the cabinets of Jefferson and Madison, in a special Act of Congress approved on March 29, 1806, "to regulate the laying out and making of a road from Cumberland in the State of Maryland to the State of Ohio."

President Jefferson appointed a commission consisting of Thomas Moore and Eli Williams of Maryland, and Joseph Kerr of Ohio, who laid out the road from Cumberland to a point on the Ohio River near Wheeling, West Virginia. The surveyor for this section was Josiah Thompson and his assistant was Arthur Rider.

The road was opened to the Ohio River in 1818. In 1825, an Act of Congress authorized an extension to the Mississippi River north of St. Louis, but the road was never completed that far due to railway competition. In 1833, the year Chicago became a city, the road was completed to Zanesville, Ohio, graded to Vandalia and surveyed to St. Louis.

The highway was built by U. S. Army engineers and cost $6,828,324,-46. It was 700 miles long.

"The Cumberland Highway," writes Mr. Morris, "was of very great importance in the development of the Middle West and the Eastern States and occupied a real important place in the growth and developments of the United States into a union of states."

The route followed by the old road, Mr. Morris notes, is now followed quite closely by Federal Route No. 40.

The civil engineering division of the National Research Council Science Advisory Committee is composed of leading civil engineers throughout the country acting under the chairmanship of the Iowa State College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts.

The National Research Council Science Advisory Committee is a body of scientists who are collaborating with the Chicago Fair trustees in the formulation of a science pattern for the 1933 exposition. Dr. Frank B. Jewett, president of the Bell Telephone Laboratories, is chairman of the Committee. Maurice Holland, of New York City, is director.

'TWAS the night before Christmas,
when all through the house
Not a creature was stirring, not even a mouse.

THEY had a good time Christmas at the Mackey home; in fact they had several good times—more good times than needed. Mr. Mackey had a prosperous insurance business down town. His son, Frank, was a deputy in the city clerk's office and his daughter was a confidential clerk in one of the big law firms.

Mrs. Mackey was housekeeper and homemaker. She was president of the Ladies' Aid society and in addition to other duties, was organist for the church choir.

Christmas was coming, in fact was only a few days off. An energetic clock agent was in town selling electric clocks. The Mackeys needed a clock so it was easy to sell Mr. Mackey one as a Christmas present for his wife. The agent inquired about the family, and in a day or two he had sold a clock to the son for his mother, and the daughter bought one, confident that a clock would be just the present her mother would enjoy.

The members of the Aid society were interviewed and a clock was bought for their president, Mrs. Mackey. Of course, the choir wanted to express their appreciation of their organist and they bought a clock and sent it to the Mackey home marked "Do not open until Christmas eve."

On Christmas eve all the packages were brought in and the family gathered around the tree to inspect the gifts that old Santa had brought. That generous old soul handed Mrs. Mackey five good electric clocks. There was some little tinge of chagrin, but it could not be helped. Mrs. Mackey kissed them all and said playfully that she was going to have the time of her life.

The next morning, as Mr. Mackey was dressing he looked out of the window and saw the clock agent hurrying toward the depot. A hundred yards behind him came one of the Mackey neighbors. Mr. Mackey hailed the neighbor and said: "Stop that man ahead of you; I want to see him, I will be right up." When the neighbor reached the depot, the train was ready to start and the agent was climbing aboard. The accommodating neighbor pulled his coat and informed him that Mr. Mackey wanted to see him, "I can't wait," replied the agent, "but I know what he wants. He wants one of these clocks." "If that is what he wants," said the neighbor, "I can take it to him. How much is it?" "Fifteen dollars," replied the agent.

The exchange was soon made and as the train pulled out Mr. Mackey came running all out of breath. "Has that man gone?" he exclaimed addressing his neighbor. "Yes," replied the neighbor, "but that is all right, I got the clock for you. Here it is, you can hand me the money any time."

THE children had gone to bed, their stockings were all hanging by the fireplace. They were filled now. And two persons were sitting in front of the fire talking.

"Shall I put on another log?" he said.

"No, we had better not sit up much longer. Let's just stay until the red coals become dull," she answered.

Every Christmas eve they had sat like this when the house was quiet, after the stockings had been filled, after the tree had been trimmed.

It was becoming cooler since the fire had almost gone out, but their chairs were drawn closely up before the shining andirons.

"You always polish them so beautifully for Christmas," he said. "You never grow tired of making everything as lovely each succeeding year."

"And you never grow tired of appreciating—perhaps that is why I can always take such an interest," she said.

"The andirons shine with fresh brilliancy each year," he said.

"Like our love for each other," she added. And then, for fear he might think she was a little too sentimental for one whose hair already had many streaks of gray she added:

"You make me so sentimental, you darling."

He put his hand on hers.

"It has been a hard year—all the years have their struggles, but every year, as I sit with you in front of this old fire it seems as though there is nothing that I want in this world."

They were straightening up the room now. Everything was in its place. The presents were under the tree, the small toys were poking their jolly little selves out of the stockings.

"I think the thermometer will show zero before morning," he said. "I'll give the furnace an extra poke."

She waited while he went down into the cellar, and as he came up, and then went to lock the front door—the flickering lights from the stars and the bright white of the snow gleamed through at them.

"It's so beautiful," he said. "Let's take a look at it."

He put her heavy coat around her shoulders and together they stood out in front of the house for a moment.

"You always," he told her, "have been my guiding star."

And she put her hand in his and smiled through slightly moist eyes. He was so willing to praise, so willing to say those things when he thought them, that it had made her, she knew, the sort of a person she was.

Each of them lived up to the praise and love the other gave.

The glow of the Christmas fire warmed their hearts throughout all the year.

JACK'S CHRISTMAS

It was late on the day before Christmas and the gray light of December twilight was darkening swiftly into the clear coldness of the winter night. Snow was falling, covering the ugly brown houses with a heavy white mantle and making the street lamps appear as tall white ghosts silently guarding the city from harm. Tardy shoppers rushed hither and thither buying last minute gifts and wondering which of their friends they had forgotten.

Walking calmly alone in the midst of all this confusion was Jack, a little black Scotch terrier. He wondered vaguely what was happening, but was much more concerned with the growing pains of hunger in his empty little stomach. A tall man paused in front of a brilliantly lighted window. Jack went up to him and sniffed inquiringly. This man looked kind, perhaps he would give Jack warmth and food. The little dog rubbed against the man's legs and received a cruel kick for his pains and he drew back yelping with pain.

Staggering down the brilliantly lighted street he stopped to look wistfully into a meat market at the huge fowls suspended from the ceiling and the rich cuts of beef lying on great white pans. On and on Jack limped, shivering with cold, until he came to a great doorway and the sound of voices fell upon his ears. "Glory to God in the highest" ran the molten notes, and the little dog thought that surely he would find warmth and shelter in this place. He entered timidly but was unmolested as he stood looking at the wonderful sights before him. Voices came from some place high above him singing with unearthly beauty: "Glory to God." Young boys with faces like cherubs, dressed in long red silk gowns with lacy white surpluses were singing in high girlish voices: "Glory to God."

Suddenly all the light and joy and gladness was gone and little Jack was left cold and trembling in the darkness. He pressed his thin body against the cold stone of the altar and started to wimper when a shining light came streaming in on him and a wonderful voice spoke in the deep silence.

"Be not afraid, for I am the spirit of Christmas and I come to tell you of the glory of the first Christmas that you may worship, for God wills that even the humblest creatures may adore Him on the divine day of the birth of His Son."

The glorious tones ceased and Jack dared to look at the shining light and he saw a lovely goddess dressed in white with a bunch of holly in her hand. Jack was awed. Animal instinct told him to fall down and worship, but a great, kind hand touched him and bade him listen to her words. Something invaded Jack's being quiet in his hunger and soothed his pain while he listened to the words of the great spirit who told him of a marvelous night long ago when a wonderful Babe was born under a magnificent star in a lowly stable where wise men brought rich gifts to Him and shepherds offered their adoration, and on high angels sang in the glory of the Child who was to bring peace and joy to the earth. Then it seemed to Jack that he heard those angel voices singing: "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth, peace, good will toward men."

Early on Christma smorning, the tall young priest let himself into the great church to prepare for the service. He found only a poor little dog's body in front of the great altar. The priest's face that might have been carved out of stone by an ancient Greek sculptor, lighted with surprise at the expression on the dead dog's face. It was one of the deepest contentment and peace as though something wonderful had called to the little dog before he died.

Who knows but that the little dog's soul went with the great spirit and her angels into that great beyond that we of the earth know so little of.

FRIENDSVILLE GAINS NAME FROM EARLY FRIEND FAMILIES; JOHN FRIEND BUILDS FORT ON RIVER

Friendsville gets its name from a family of early settlers named Friend.

Before the French and Indian War, Andrew Friend settled where "Horseshoe Bend" is located. Augustine and John Friend settled at Sang Run.

The Friends were thought to be of English origin.

The Chicasaw Indians caused the white men of this locality some trouble. Peace treaties were signed and the Indians became friendly with the whites.

Andrew Friend, an enlisted soldier in the Colonial Army, was attached to Colonel Washington's regiment and was with Washington and Braddock on the expedition to Fort Duquesne.

A fort was built on the west side of the Youghiogheny River under the supervision of John Friend and the white men gathered here for protection.

The corner stones of the old fort constructed by John Friend still stand on the old Friend farm, now owned and occupied by Mr. George Hileman, of this community.

CHRISTMAS TOYS

HAT do you kids think you're going to do with all those Christmas ads the airplane has been showering over the town every afternoon?" Randy Roberts demanded of his small brother and sister at the table a few evenings before Christmas.

"That's what I'd like to know," Eleanor, nineteen, chimed in as she folded her napkin.

The twins, Beth and Bob, aged but seven, looked at each other over their plates and then turned towards their mother.

"Beth and Bob are quite justified," Mrs. Roberts assured her two older children. "Those advertisements are unusually attractive with their holly wreaths, bells, poinsettias and their red, gold and green lettering. The twins are making Christmas cards out of them with the aid of paste, cardboard and a verse now and then clipped from some magazine. It is their own idea and that is what every one is striving for nowadays, you know, unique and original Christmns cards." Mrs. Roberts' brown eyes twinkled.

"I'd say they're original nll right," Randy grinned. "But go to it, kiddies. At least you're saving expenses, and that's what we're all trying to do." He turned to his father at the head of the table:

"How about the doctor's bill, Dad? Is it reducing enough so that we can manage a turkey for Christmas dinner, or shall we regale ourselves ou something simpler?"

Mr. Roberts smiled wearily: "I don't know, son, you know that incision isn't healing as it should nnd I've only worked two days this week. Even with your help and Eleanor's the bills just nhout stand still."

"That's all right Dad, I was just asking. Mother's cooking makes everything taste good." He stopped on the way out to look at the heap of ads plied on various chairs. Suddenly he picked one up nud scrutinized it.

"See here, folks. Listen what it says on the Smith Market announcement—'Some of these advertisements are marked. The one turning in the greatest number of marked ads will receive a 12-pound turkey at our market the morning of Christmas eve.' Babies, the turkey's yours! There can't anybody heat a collection like this."

And nobody did.

It Is Easy to Make a Christmas Wreath

Inexpensive Christmas wreaths may be made of cuttings from pine trees, hatherry and bayberry with pine cones wired on. At any florist's a wire circle can be bought with bunches of thin wires, making it the easiest of tasks to build up a wreath that is unusual in its beauty.

A Belated Christmas

By Blanche Tanner Dillin

CHRISTMAS should be a happy time for every one, but In Ruth Kenfield's heart there was little cheer. Every one seemed to be receiving gifts, she thought, as she sorted the mail in the little suburban post office. She had received a goodly number herself even now, the day before Christmas. But although there must be many beautiful gifts in the unwrapped ones, the one gift for which she had looked for three years, a letter or just a card, had never come.

Three years ago she had been certain that before Christmas Ned Traverse would ask her to marry him. But Christmas had come and gone and he had not spoken. Then she heard that he had gone to South America. Just yesterday she heard that he was again in a neighboring city living at his old club.

She had been grateful for the work as postmistress that had been given her, for the last few years would have indeed been lonely. But how she wished that she might go with the letters which she had just given to the man for the night air mail, and fly into new scenes and experiences.

Feeling around in the storage box to be sure that she had left nothing, her hand struck a loose board. Then she felt something like a letter. Prying it loose she held it up to the light, and to her astonishment she saw that it was addressed to her.

"I am sailing for South America in two weeks and shall expect an answer before I leave. No answer will mean 'No' to me." Then she saw it was post-marked three years before.

Rushing to the telephone she called the club in the neighboring city and heard the dear, familiar voice. It might be n belated Christmas letter by several years, hut both Ruth and Ned agreed the next day that it was "Better late than never."

ONLY 9 LICENSES ARE ISSUED IN PAST WEEK

Record for December Is Below Average—Total Thus Far is 47

Nine marriage licenses were issued during the past week ending Monday at noon from the office of the Clerk of the Circuit court, the lowest on record for nny one week for the past year or more, according to E. Z. Tower, clerk. Only one permit was issued on Saturday, usually the busiest day of the week.

This brings the total for December thus far to 47, which is below the average. If last year's record is to be broken, Mr. Tower said, there will have to be a large Christmas rush for the matrimonial papers. Two licenses were marked "don't publish."

AUDITORIUM BEING USED FOR DRAMATICS, MUSIC

Physical Ed. Classes Also Held; Study Halls Eliminated

It has been made possible for students of Oakland High School to use the auditorium for dramatics, music, and physical education. This was accomplished by removing the study halls that had previously been held there. This never was an ideal situation for a study hall as conditions were not conducive to learning. The breaking up of the large groups into smaller ones has helped to solve the problem. As for the glee club and physical education department, what a break they are getting? For the first time the members of this organization have a chance to sing in n space large enough to get their breath and let the volume of their voice expand, while the physical education classes can meet throughout the winter months and continue their work.

After the Christmas holidays it will be arranged so that the auditorium may be used exclusively for dramatics, physical education, glee club and basketball.—Oakland, The Acorn.

FRIENDSVILLE

Drought Weakens The Local Water Sources

Due to the recent and continued drought and cold weather, Friendsville has been without a sufficient water supply, the reservoir being frozen over which has caused pipes in the local homes to be waterless.

Lines have been built in the past summer and concrete walls have been constructed in order to catch the water in the vicinity about the spring from which the supply is drawn.

A committee has been exploring the mountains both east and west of the Yough River in search of water.

Water Is Available

A few small streams could be used to furnish more water. However, there are no springs available on the west side. If the springs should be used there would be an additional cost of $2,000 to $2,500. The next and only resource would be Bear Creek Lake from which the water would be forced up to the reservoir by power pumps.

Notices imposing a fine for the illegal use of water have been posted.

State Health Officials Examine Student Body

On December 8 and 9, Dr. George V. Schneider, Baltimore, Md., assisted by his wife, Dr. Rebecca S. Schneider, State health examiners, under the direction of the Playground Athletic League of Maryland, gave 37 boys and 40 girls of the local high school a free physical examination of the chest, lungs, heart, nose, throat, teeth, and eyes.

Four boys and four girls received Health First buttons, which told that they passed the examination with a perfect score. Students having only slight defects were promised health buttons as soon as they would have defects corrected.

Dr. Schneider stated in general that he found conditions good in Friendsville. He emphasized especially the cleanliness of the students, which he stated was a characteristic of an intelligent person.

No student of Friendsville High, according to the doctors' statements, was found to be color blind.

CHRISTMAS ROUND TABLE PRESENTED BY GLEE CLUB

Students Of Both Grammar And High Schools Participate In Friday's Entertainment

DIVIDED INTO TWO PARTS

On Friday, December 19, the glee clubs of Oakland High School and the Oakland Grammar School held a Christmas round table in the auditorium of the high school. The program was divided into two parts, the first being given by the girls and boys of the grammar school and consisting of the following:

Jingle All Your Bells, 3d grade; Yule Log Custom of England, 5th grade; Scandinavian Christmas, 4th and 6th grades; French Christmas, 3d and 7th grades; Darky Christmas, 2nd and 7th grades.

The stage was attractively decorated to represent a Christmas scene, and the colorful costumes of the children made the scenes very effective.

As a conclusion and in contrast with the first part of the program the impressive candlelight service of America was presented by the glee clubs of Oakland High School.

The entertainment was well attended and was enjoyed by all present.

HER CHRISTMAS THRILL

By Marjorie Jane Beckmeyer

"Gee, Janis, you're a grand ole sport for helping me with this Democraey; I'd never have gotten it. Well, so long; see you when they put fur on animal crackers. So long, Jan."

"Bye, Katy."

Janis Bailey leaned back in her self.

"Yes; a good ole sport, and that's all, all anybody ever wants me for; nobody likes me except when they have some "Greek" to do. Yes, then I'm all right, but I guess I don't really mind if I could only help HIM, but gee—yes, I was alright for him too when we were juniors, you bet. In Bookkeeping he was so "dumb", if I must say it myself, and boy, was it a bother to help him? If only he knew, but no—now that he's a senior, he's so popular that I'm just a thing of the past. Oh, well, a good sport may be unpopular but all the same—"

"Oh Jan—is", pipes up Melba, "did you get your English? Lend it to me, will you?"

And from force of habit Janis handed her paper over.

For some people school life may be very picturesque, but to Janis Bailey, it was the same old thing, day in and day out; just two things, first to have her lessons all prepared for others to copy; and second, to watch the boy she loved, James D. Ward, go down the halls with other girls.

December came along and every one was talking about the Christmas Frolic and the Christmas Story Contest which was being sponsored by "The Coker", the school paper. All through the halls one could hear students talking of all the good times they were going to have.

Janis lay awake all Thursday night thinking about what she could write for the story contest.

"Well, even if I can't go to the Frolic, I'm going to write a story and do my best. The kids say my lessons are good, so maybe there's hope. Now let's see what'll I write about?"

Janis lay deep in thought, when all of a sudden she jumped as if a bear had startled her.

"I know," she said aloud. "I'm going to write a story about how it really is. How I help everybody and —let's see, I'll write about the Christmas season and put in about Jimmy. Maybe he'll take a hint. Oh! if he only would." And with this thought Janis Bailey went to sleep.

Who would have thought it, but at this very same time James Ward was speedily driving home with Vera Conley, not thinking of Vera, no, but of one girl he really loved.

"Daggonit," he thought. "Here's Vera, Mabel, Louise and all. I'm always taking them on 'dates,' but I know I don't love 'em—just do it to fill in time, I guess. But I know I really love Janis. Poor little Janis; I wonder if she ever thinks of me."

He was aroused from his thoughts by Vera's high soprano voice.

"Here we are Jim, ole boy. Are you going to come in the house for awhile?"

"No."

"Well, so long, baby."

"So long, Vera."

The next morning was a typical, cold December one. Snow fell in tons from the heavens, but it did not find Janis' heart like that, for inside glowed a new light. Janis knew exactly what she was going to write for the Christmas Story Contest. Everybody noticed the change and called attention to it, but Janis only smiled and went on.

In Democracy class, James kept watching Janis, but she only said to herself: "Just you wait, James D. Ward. You may be a star basketball player and all, but if you don't like my story, your girls can keep you."

The day proved to be a terrible one for Janis because she only had overheard Jim say to Vera, "Say, baby, with whom are you going out tonight?"

"You, sonny boy,".

That night when Janis started her story she was in a very angry mood. She just couldn't get over the thought that James was with Vera.

The silence in Janis' room was broken only by the ticke of the faithful old clock, but Jan didn't mind blinding her eyes and blotting the ink.

One, two—ten, eleven, twelve, the clock rank out. Janis straightened up in her chair, gathered the papers together, arranged them in order and began to read. The air was filled with suspense. Even the clock seemed to stop tickling, awaiting her decision.

"It's a flop," cried Jan, and that was all.

The nexa day the whole school was in an uproar, for on Wednesday the basketball team was going to play their most hated rival, Princeton Hi.

Oh, Jan; did you write a story?" asked Melba.

"No."

"Why not?"

"Couldn't think of anything."

"Let's come to the game tonight."

"All right."

Janis was a nervous wreck. What did I do with that story? Suppose anybody would find it?

True, the story was missing and it was never found by Janis, but at that very moment Vera Conley picked up some papers from the locker room floor.

"Why, somebody—why, Janis lost her story. I'll do a Boy Scout act and drop it in the contest box at the office and tell Jan about it later."

For that reason Janis never found her story and Vera forgot to tell her about it.

Finally, the day of the Christmas assembly came. The winner of the Story Contest was to be announced for the first time, and then "The Coker" would be distributed.

Janis and Melba sat listening attentively to the program, when it was announced that the next number would be the naming of the prize winner of the Contest.

"I know that everyone is anxious know the winner," continued Principal Grey. "I have the honor of presenting the prize of $20 to Miss Janis Bailey. Will Miss Bailey kindly step forward?"

"Why, Jan!" exclaimed Melba.

But Jan's ears were deaf; her eyes were unseeing. Somehow she got up amid a loud applause. With shaking knees she walked forward. The applause grew greater, greater, greater, and then silence.

"Janis Bailey has well earned this prize," continued Mr. Grey, "and I am sure everyone will agree after you have read her story in "The Coker."

Mr. Grey was actually handing her $20. Her eyes grew misty; if only the applause would stop! In the row opposite from where Janis sat, sat a student clapping louder than the rest —if only Jan knew that Jim really meant it.

"The Coker" having been distributed, everyone read the story rapidly. It was a masterpiece, but Jan didn't know it. It really poured out all that she was thinking; her heart's desires and pains, woven around a beautiful Christmas setting.

"Jan, that's great," yelled Melba.

"You're another authoress, Jan," exclaimed Vera.

But Jan did not hear or understand.

"Don't forget the game, Jan, tonight," was Melba's goodbye.

By that evening Janis Bailey was a new person, for by now she fully realized everything.

Eight o'clock found the Columbia Hi School packed with students from Columbia and Princeton. In the crowd was Jan, her heart hardly having room to beat.

The game was on. Columbia 2, Princeton 2! Yells, yells, hard fighting; Columbia 16, Princeton 24; more yells. Just listen to that Princeton side, and look—just look at that score—Columbia 18, Princeton 24.

And finally Columbia 24, Princeton 24. The noise was deafening. One minute to play and James with the ball.

"WARD! Ward! Ward!" yelled the Columbia rooters, and Jan really yelled.

Columbia 26, Princeton 24, and James Ward the hero of the game.

"Wasn't he great?" sighed Jan to Melba as she saw Jim standing with Vera.

"Oh, Jan-is! Janis!"

Janis stopped almost with fright. It was HIS voice. James was really calling her. He was already by her side.

"Janis, you dear! You helped me through my whole junior year and I never realized it till I read that story. Jan, you're a wonder. It's a true story, isn't it?" yelled James above the noise of the crowd. "Jan! the boy in the story was meant to be me and the girl you, isn't that right, Jan?"

"Yes, Jimmy; all but the ending."

"Then let me make that true, too. Jan, dear; may I take you home like in the story?"

As she consented, Jim whispered: "Jan, at last I've discovered a real treasure. I was too proud to let myself realize it before."

MT. LAKE PARK

The Christmas spirit is very noticeable everywhere one looks. The seasonable weather is adding much to the real pleasure of the coming holidays.

The Christmas entertainment last night in the M. E. church was greatly enjoyed by the large number who witnessed it. The performance by the children reflected great credit upon those who planned the entertainment and carried it out so successfully.

An unusual number of packages and mail matter of every description has been received and distributed from the local postoffice.

I am glad to mention that Mr. and Mrs. Upton Cuppett have purchased the large cottage owned by R. G. Richardson, of Piedmont. Mr. and Mrs. Cuppett plan to accommodate more people winter and summer than they can now do in their smaller cottage. It is hoped that others will have the courage to open other large houses that have been closed for some time. We are both hoping and expecting the Park to take on new life when it becomes incorporated.

The second showing of the "rag social" in the Aid Hall last Saturday evening was largely attended and was thoroughly enjoyed. At the close of the entertainment the I. O. O. F. contest winners were announced, the result being that a man from Morgantown received the radio. The turkeys went to Henry Foglepole, Miss Clara Beekman, Robert Ashby and a Mr. Lewis, of Crellin. When we entered the contest by depositing thirty cents we were assured that we might expect the radio to be delivered at our home Sunday morning just after church. There seems to be a slip-up somewhere.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Humberson, of Richmond, Va., are spending the holidays with the parents of the latter, Mr. and Mrs. Charles V. Harvey.

Roland "Mutt" Reedy is at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Reedy, for the holidays. He is a student at Washington College, Chestertown, Md.

Mrs. Cora Bishop is much improved after an illness of several days.

Elmus Ream, a teacher in the Keyport (N. J.) high school, and Miss Edith Ream are home for the holidays.

Mrs. E. C. Frame is home after spending several days with friends and relatives in Fairmont, W. Va.

Mr. Walter Hardesty was a business caller in Piedmont, W. Va., on Monday.

Mrs. Edward Helbig was in Cumberland on Saturday.

Mrs. E. E. Sollars, Mrs. Kenneth Georg and Mrs. Henry Bobet were in Oakland on Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. A. C. George have purchased a new radio.

Messers Leslie Rodehcaver and Mr. Frederick Reis were Sunday afternoon visitors of Mr. H. J. Wright in Wilson.

Mrs. Albert Thrasher, of Oakland, was in our town Saturday.

Early Friday morning A. T. Watson's large summer residence, located just west of the village, was destroyed by fire. The cause of the fire was not learned. It is understood that the dwelling and contents were partly covered by Insurance.

The residents of the community have established their first community Christmas tree.

There is hope of getting the M. E. church lighted with electric lights for the Christmas entertainment.

Beyond the County

At Washington, after rushing thru and passing bills carrying $311,000,000 for emergency relief, as its Christmas gift to the Nation Congress recessed until January 5.

In Los Angeles, Edward Partington, after spending some time in a hospital as a result of an automobile accident, was showing a friend how it occurred, when a machine hit him at the same spot where the former accident occurred.

At Washington, the Government has filed an appeal to the decision of Federal Judge Clark (New Jersey), holding that the Eighteenth Amendment to the U. S. Constitution was illegally ratified.

At Hollywood, two stylishly dressed women held up and kidnapped a business man, who, using the usual courtesy permitted them to enter a building preceding him, escaped by locking the door from the outside and called the police. The women, however, escaped by kicking out a balcony door.

In Baltimore, at Johns Hopkins, in order to determine whether or not there was a blood clot or internal hemorrhage in the brain of Henry V. Hoper, gridiron star, air was pumped into his brain through a puncture made in the back portion of the boy's head.

In San Francisco, a window washer fell five stories from a window ledge and escaped with a bruise on his chin.

In Cleveland it is claimed that Dr. George W. Grill has produced artificial life from non-living elements in his laboratory. Scientists are skeptical.

In Washington, Mrs. Herbert Hoover will hand out the first basketfull of food at the Salvation Army hall the day before Christmas. Nearly 600 baskets, each containing enough for five persons, will be given away by the Washington Salvation Army.

From Northern Minnesota, Wisconsin and Michigan, more than 2,500,000 pine and spruce trees will be cut this year and shipped to various centers for the Yuletide.

In Virginia, the 1930 apple crop is estimated at 1,300,000 barrels, 2 million less than in 1929, and the value of the crop will be approximately $3,700,000 as against $9,700,000 for 1929.

In England, Sunday movies which have been allowed for the benefit of charity, yielding about a million a year, have been forbidden by a Judge under a law passed in 1780, just 150 years ago.

At Falls City, Neb., a nation-wide hunt has been instituted for the heirs of H. I. Hunt, a 72-year old recluse, upon whose death was discovered $30,000 in government bonds.

an article under date of December 11 setting forth a plan whereby we could build 70 miles of roads next year without putting a burden upon the people and pay the cost in full in ten years. That is an average of 7 miles a year, and that is all the road we could hope to get under any plan in ten years. This plan will give the people the full use of the 70 miles of roads in advance. I said that we do not have a hard-surfaced road in our county that has not paid for itself in five years, and that statement has not been disputed. On this basis in the ten years they will have doubly paid for themselves.

This plan is only carrying out President Hoover's suggestion urging the Federal Govenrnment to improve in every way possible, and the states, large corporations and municipalities to put in permanent improvements, thus giving employment to curtail human suffering while this depression lasts, and if our people will properly harmonize behind this plan and help put it over it will be the greatest forward step ever taken in our county for the benefit of the people.

Respectfully submitted,
J. W. McCULLOUGH.

FOURTH ANNUAL CONCERT IS GIVEN BY BOYS' BAND

Presentation is Best Attended Since Band's First Public Appearance in Year 1927

MAYOR GIVES SHORT TALK

Before a packed house the Gilbert-Brown Boys' band presented its fourth annual concert, Sunday night at the Maryland theatre. The concert was the best attended since the band's first public presentation in 1927, and the program reflected the great improvement that had been made by the members during the past four years.

R. R. Gilbert, directer, and Russell H. Brown, assistant director, were praised for their untiring efforts in bringing the organization to its present standing, and the members of the band were also given their share of the honors by being diligent in attending the practice sessions and in wanting to learn about music.

Mr. F. E. Rathbun, county superintendent of schools, made a few remarks and introduced Mayor Grover Stemple, who commended the boys for their performance and expressed the hope that the organization would soon be uniformed. The program consisted of a number of marches, an overture, fox trot, waltzes, intermezzo, and a baritone solo by Lewis Lawton. Mr. Reeves Blandford and Mrs. Frederick Thayer both rendered a vocal solo.

Mr. Gilbert and Mr. Brown were presented with gifts from the members of the band in token of their untiring efforts in the organization.

Committed to St. Mary's Industrial School For Boys

Jakey James, a stepson of an Indian who resided for a number of years in a shack on the west border of town, and Harold DeWitt, of the Sang Run section of Garrett county, were committed to St. Mary's Industrial School for Boys by Justice W. A. Gonder on Friday.

Both boys were committed to the institution as being incorrigible. The James boy had been an inmate of the Amish-Mennonite Home near Grantsville for about eight years where his deportment was such as to impart to the other boys of the orphanage a contempt for the officials in the home.

The boys were taken to the institution by Justice Gonder, who returned to Oakland Monday morning.

The Blue Ridge Lines, operating a bus service from Oakland to Keyser's Ridge, where connections are made with busses of the same line carrying through passengers both east and west, by notice printed in The Republican today, will discontinue the local service effective today.

Robert Stewart, who has been operating the busses from Oakland to the Ridge for several years, has been notified that he will be transferred to Cumberland and given a position operating one of the busses on the National Highway.

Finds and Returns Watch—Is Given Five Dollars

As the result of finding and returning a gold watch to its owner, David W. "Peck" Glaze is $5 richer than he was on Christmas morning.

Crossing the Youghiogheny river bridge on Third street on Christmas eve, he found a gold watch and chain in the middle of the road. It was an old fashioned watch but in excellent running condition. Saturday he brought it into The Republican office asking whether anybody had advertised as having lost a time-piece. The initials W. E. S. were engraved upon the back and upon telephoning to Mr. W. Ernest Shirer, the rightful owner was established. Upon its return to the owner Mr. Shirer tendered Glaze a $5 bill.

RED CROSS LACKS ONLY $23 OF EQUALING QUOTA

377 Persons Have Paid $1 Membership Fee—Quota is 400

With twenty additional names received from chairmen in the annual Red Cross roll call during the past week, Mrs. E. E. Tower, county chairman, reports that there are to date 377 members in Garrett county who have paid their $1 membership dues.

This in only 23 under the quota of 400, set for Garrett county at the beginning of the drive by the National headquarters, and is the largest number ever to subscribe in the county. In order to entirely make up their quota the Red Cross members are asking that 23 more individuals throughout the county voluntarily join the association by sending in $1 to Mrs. Tower.

Half of the money raised remains in the county and is used for relief work wherever needed.

Roll call members whose names have just been turned in include Mr. and Mrs. Ramsey Smith, Deer Park.

Friendsville

Leona Nicklow, Rosella Bishoff, W. J. Glenn, Clifford Funk, Ethell Roberts, William Smith, Mrs. Raymond McCullough, Asa Rush, Mrs. H. J. Black, Mrs. J. W. McCullough, Mrs. Orval Welch, Mrs. M. R. Guard, Mrs. J. W. Friend, J. W. Friend, Mrs. A. E. Fox, Ralph Lawson, C. B. Miller, Howard Skidmore.

In a report to National headquarters, in a response to a telegram asking how many families were indirectly and partially affected by the drought and how they were aided, Mrs. Tower stated that 50 families had been affected; that $50 cash was furnished by the county and used for supplies; and used clothing valued at approximately $75 was distributed.

Sheriff Haenftling Assumes Active Duties of His Office

William H. Haenftling, who was recently elected Sheriff of Garrett county, took active charge of the office on last Saturday when W. D. Casteel, the outgoing sheriff, turned over his badge and relinquished his responsibilities as an officer of the law. Mr. Haenftling moved his family into the Sheriff's residence from his farm near Accident on Monday. Mr. Casteel, with his mother, who is quite ill as the result of a complication of diseases, are occupying the Hendrickson cottage on the southwestern edge of town.

Mr. Clarence Spear, of Oakland, has been named deputy sheriff by Mr. Haenftling. Mr. Spear until recently was employed by a bus company operating on the Northwestern Turnpike, and has been a resident of Oakland for two or three years, coming here from near Friendsville.

The Republican extends its best wishes to the new officers for a successful administration of the affairs of the office to which they have been chosen.

In relinquishing his official duties Mr. Casteel remarked that it was the first time in seventeen years that he had been without a commission as an officer of the law. Prior to his term as sheriff he was a member of the State police force and a special policeman for the town of Oakland. As an officer Mr. Casteel executed the duties required of him faithfully and well and goes out of office with a remarkably clear record of duties well done.

Reeves Blandford, employed for the past several years in the First National Bank of Oakland as a bookkeeper, has resigned his position and will leave on Sunday for Emmitsburg, Frederick county, where he will continue in the banking business as an employe in a bank in that town.

LOCAL ROTARY CLUB HAD UNUSUAL ENTERTAINMENT

Program Friday Evening Was Arranged by Dr. McComas

Oakland Rotarians and their guests, numbering about forty in all, had the true Christmas spirit brought to them in song, story and pictures last Friday evening at the luncheon of the organization at the William-James Hotel.

Two weeks ago Senator-elect Henry W. McComas was chosen by lot to make the program for the evening and upon him the responsibility was laid to carry it out, the subject or form of entertainment being left to his election. Properly, and in keeping with the season, the Christmas story was chosen. The dining room of the hotel was elaborately decorated with holly, wreaths and at one point a beautiful star upon which a spotlight played at times, was placed.

The program as arranged by the Doctor and carried out under his direction, following the luncheon, was as follows:

Singing, Joy to the World.....Club
Solo.....Behold Your King
Reeves Blandford
Singing...Oh, Come, all Ye Faithful
Rotary Club
Singing...Little Town of Bethlehem
Rotarians
Announcement by Rotarian W. W. Dawson that 44 families had been supplied by the club with clothing, baskets of food, etc.
Reading..The Story of Christ's Birth
Delbert Davis
Quartet.."Holy Night, Silent Night"
W. H. Hinebaugh, W. W. Dawson, Reeves Blandford, Cecil Smith
Moving pictures.....The Holy Land
Dr. Henry W. McComas

Four reels of magnificent moving pictures, showing various scenes in the Holy Land, which were secured especially for the evening by Dr. McComas, were projected on a screen in the dining room. The scenes depicted included street life in Bethlehem, in Jerusalem, Nazareth, the Sea of Galilee and other world-famous spots dear to the hearts of Christendom and made holy to believers by the presence of the Christ nearly two centuries ago.

The evening's program closed with the singing by the club of the Christmas hymn, "Hark, the Herald Angels Sing."

Garrett County Jail Is Rated as "Good"

Garrett county has a "good" Jail and the food for the prisoners confined therein is well cooked, according to the sixth annual inspection report of the State Board of Welfare. The rating is a drop from last year, when it was given as "very good."

In both Garrett and Allegany counties the buildings are suitable and in good condition, according to the report. Sanitary conditions in both of the jails were given the stamp of approval.

A few of the prisoners had their bodies covered with some kind of an eruption, which they attributed to the food, but in both institutions the welfare body was told that the food served was well cooked and sufficient in quantity.

New Low Thermometer Reading Christmas Morning Here

A new low record in thermometer reading in and near Oakland was established on Christmas morning. At Weber's, the government weather station, the instrument there registered 18 degrees below zero. At the Maryland State garage, located in the east end of town, a reading of 16 below was reported.

At Altamont, nine miles east of Oakland, which point is very much higher in altitude, the thermometer, according to reports made by railway men, stood at 12 degrees above zero. Piedmont, at the foot of the Seventeen Mile grade, and more than fifteen hundred lower than Altamont, had a record of one degree below zero.

With these conditions prevailing at the various points indicated above the weather was decidedly freakish.

Car Turns Over, Injuring Two Oaklanders

Arthur Hinebaugh and Richard Helbig, both of Oakland, are in the Hoffman hospital, Keyser, due to injuries received early Tuesday morning when the Ford roadster in which they were riding left the New Creek road, having skidded on the ice, and landed on its top in the stream which flows along the roadway.

The accident happened about one mile south of the Keyser city limits. They were discovered about two hours later and taken to the hospital where their wounds were dressed. No bones were broken, but they received several cuts and bruises.

County Commissioners' Board to Organize Monday Morning

On Monday of next week the recently elected Board of County Commissioners of Garrett county will assume their duties as such. The members of the board, Messrs. George D. Browning, James A. Fitzwater and George W. Harvey, took the oath of office nearly two weeks ago, but actual organization of the Commissioners' Board will not take place until the date above indicated, when the president of the body will be chosen.

The recently elected clerk to the Board, Mr. W. M. Frazee, was sworn into office on Saturday and immediately assumed his duties. Mr. Meyers, who has been clerk to the Commissioners for a number of years, has not definitely decided what line of business he will engage in.

In addition to appointing road supervisors and constables at the meeting to be held Monday other matters which may be properly presented to the Board, will be taken up and acted upon.

Merchants Had Satisfactory Holiday Trade In Oakland

Nothwithstanding the general complaint of merchants in nearly every town within a radius of several hundreds miles of Oakland that business during and preceding the holiday buying had fallen off very appreciably, Oakland merchants have expressed themselves as being well satisfied with the conditions and with the trade they enjoyed during the holiday season.

CITIZENS TO MEET WITH ASSEMBLYMEN SATURDAY

People to Suggest Legislative Enactments for Consideration

A chance to present to the members of the General Assembly of Garrett county subjects related to any new laws that should be on the statute books of the State, either for the county or for the State, or for any amendment or revision of any present laws or for rescinding any of the present local acts, will be given to the citizens of the county at an open meeting to be held Saturday, January 3, 1931, at the Court House, Oakland.

The meeting will be called at 10 o'clock a. m., and the entire day will be given over to interested public officials of the county or other citizens. Official boards or their representatives, town councils or their representatives, and representatives from other organizations are expected to present subjects in conformity with the purpose for which the meeting is being held.

This will be the only opportunity for the people of the county to meet the members of the General Assembly before they go to Annapolis, and anyone wanting any legislation enacted, amended, or repealed, is urged to come before the delegation at that time and present their views for consideration.

Mrs. Ross succumbed following a long and painful illness. She was born July 15, 1873, in the North Glade section of the county.

The deceased is survived by her husband, Mr. Albert G. Ross, deputy clerk of the Garrett County Circuit Court and clerk to the Mayor and Town Council, Oakland, a daughter, Lois, and the following brothers and sisters: J. D. Rhodes, Stephen Rhodes, Charles Rhodes and Edward Rhodes, all of Swanton; Bradley W. Rhodes, Mt. Lake Park; Henry Clay Rhodes, Cumberland; Mrs. Molly Pase, Thomas, W. Va.; Mrs. Annie Sterringer, Parsons, W. Va.; Mrs. Eva Smale, Youngstown, Ohio.

It was estimated that the damage to each car would be more than $150.

1931 STATE LEGISLATURE TO MEET ON JANUARY 7

Democratic Senators and Delegates Will Caucus Tuesday Night To Select the Officers

MR. MICHEL FOR SPEAKER

The 1931 session of the Maryland General Assembly will swing into action one week from last night with the party caucuses at Annapolis to select leaders for the three months' work which lies ahead of the new set of state lawmakers, elected last November 4.

J. Enos Ray, chairman of the Democratic State Central Committee, has issued a call for a meeting of the Democratic senators and members of the House for next Tuesday night at the State House to select a presiding officer for each of the branches of the Assembly.

Republicans to Caucus

The Republican members of the Assembly will hold a caucus to select their candidates, who will act as the party leaders, with no chance of being named to the presiding posts due to the heavy Democratic majority in both branches.

The Legislature itself will not swing into action until the following day, when the actual organization is completed with the ratification of the caucus action in official election of the candidates selected at the Tuesday meeting.

Delegate Francis Michel, Baltimore City, chairman of the powerful judiciary committee at the last two sessions of the assembly is considered the most likely choice of the Democrats for Speaker of the House, and Senator Walter J. Mitchell, of Charles county, the leading candidate for presiding officer of the Senate.

Other Candidates Mentioned

Other candidates have been prominently mentioned but none have developed the backing which has crystalized about these two. In the House, James J. Lindsey, Baltimore City, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee at the last session, has been prominently mentioned, but with the presidency of the Senate practically sure to go to a county man, the speakership, through custom, would go to a city man.

This policy was overcome four years ago when E. Brooke Lee, of Montgomery county, was selected speaker, and David G. McIntosh, Jr., of Baltimore county, was made President of the Upper House.

Mitchell's Candidacy Clouded

Selection of Senator Mitchell as presiding officer of the Senate has been clouded by the contest brought by Thomas B. R. Mudd, his Republican opponent in the election, who was returned defeated by 34 votes.

Senator McIntosh, Sentator S. Scott Beck, of Kent county, Lansdale Sasscer, of Prince George's county, Senator-elect Emory L. Coblentz, of Frederick county, Senator Dudley G. Roe, of Queen Anne's county, and Senator-elect Ridgely P. Melvin, of Anne Arundel county, have also been mentioned for the presidency.

Grandfather of Abandoned Baby Left at Morgantown Located At Friendsville

From this morning's Morgantown Dominion-News the following news item is clipped:

Little Paul Sines, three years old, left with a Sabraton family Tuesday by a man believed to be his father, will be back with relatives in Friendsville, Md., either today or tomorrow, county officers said last night.

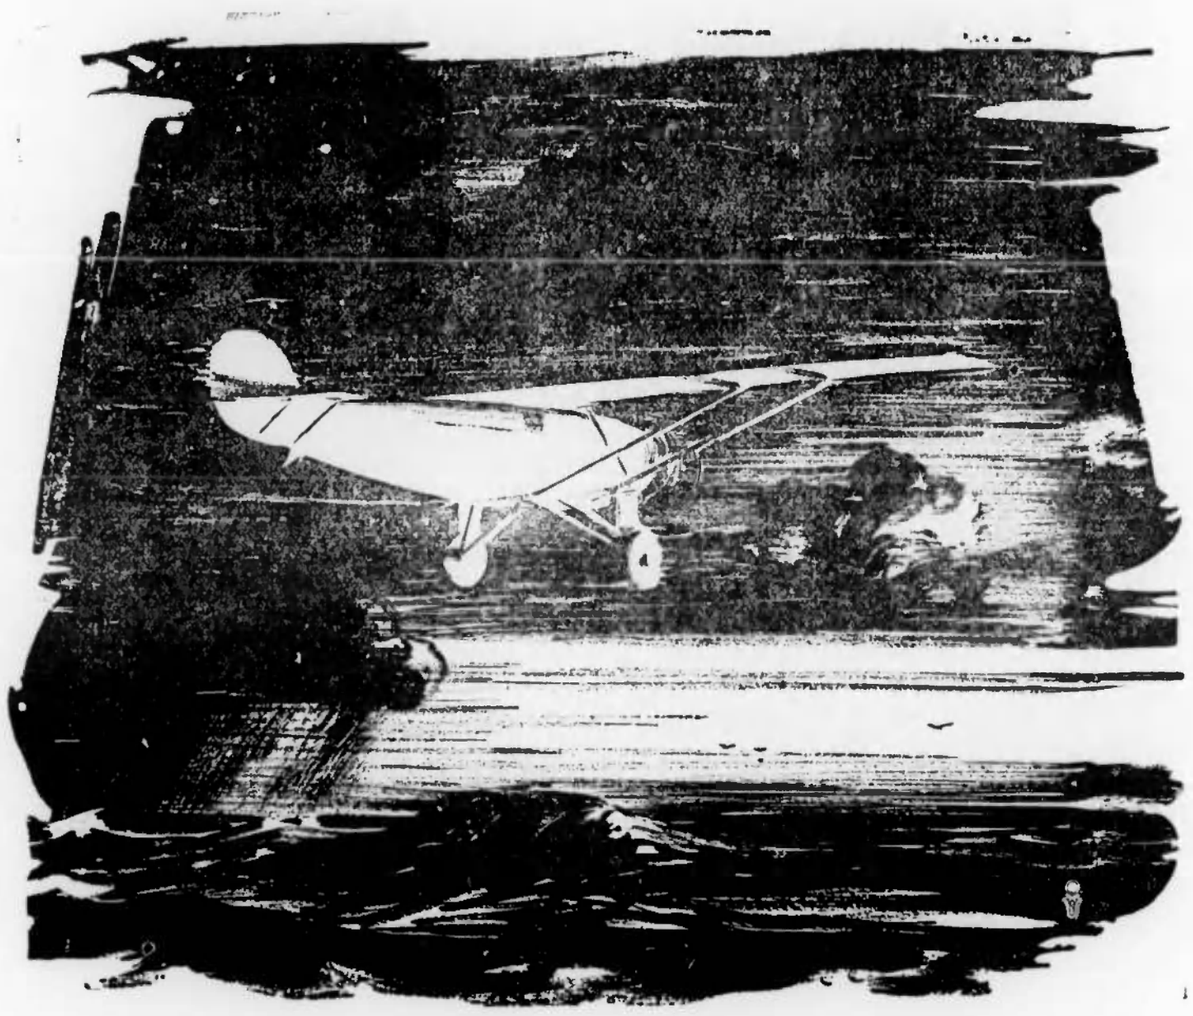
The child's grandfather, John Henry Sines, was located in the Garrett county town late yesterday and was notified by Mrs. Rachel Cox, county probation officer, that the little tot was at the Detention Home. She told the grand parent to come for the boy at once after explaining the circumstances of the strange case.

A. C. Friend at Sabraton was asked Tuesday morning to keep the child for a few hours by a man believed to be Orville Sines After waiting until evening for the man's return Friend told Sheriff H. C. Johnson of the circumstances and the child was taken to the county home. Orville Sines, officers believe, is the child's father. He is the object of an extensive search through this section.

Death of An Infant

Robert Gonder, aged 14 months, son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis E. Gonder, Second street, Oakland, died at an early hour this morning following an attack of whooping cough and complications. Funeral arrangements have not as yet been announced.

Onward Into the Dawn of a New Year



Onward and Upward-- Working Together During 1931

AS WE FORGE ONWARD into the dawn of a new year, where we will be apt to meet storms of unknown strength—where we will be forced to cross seas of unknown depth and width—where none can tell what awaits —let us ever keep before us the knowledge that in union there is strength. As a united community we can meet and overcome all. Boosting, not alone by word of mouth, but by acts as well, we can make this, our community, better and more prosperous, come what may.

Wishing our Subscribers, Readers and Advertisers
a Healthy, Happy and Prosperous New Year.

THE STAFF and EMPLOYES of THE REPUBLICAN

SCOOP'S COLUMN

By SCOOP---HIMSELF

Although it has been one whole week I am just getting over Christmas.

I attended two dinners, the first one an old-fashioned family affair which consisted of eating everything in sight, and the second one at the home of one of my close friends, where you could ask for a second helping without feeling the least bit embarrassed.

At the first affair, I'll have to hand it to my brother-in-law, Archibaldson. Either he had been saving up or the capacity of that food holder of his has increased astonishingly. There were no bashful wallflowers at this gathering. Everyone knew everyone else and it was common knowledge that "Rufus" was going to get all the white meat unless you got it first. Since the boss editor served, and blood is thicker than water, Scoop had to be content with one of those small turkey legs.

As usual at this Christmas affair, there were two classes of eaters: the kind who left room for the fruit cake, cookies, and pie, and the kind who did not leave room for the fruit cake, cookies, and pie. Both types were represented with the latter class in the majority. However, the class who didn't leave room for them, ate them anyway, and completely filled their stomachal tube. Then on top of this they picked around the candy boxes all afternoon, filling up the tube as the gastric juices mingling with the stomach contents endeavored to lighten the load. The fatter the person, the more candy was taken, which seems to be an old Spanish custom among the obese.

During the afternoon an argument arose as to who had the biggest mouth, Scoop or Archibaldson. As there was only a 36-inch tape measure in the house we were unable to measure Archibaldson's so Col. Bell came up and took a picture. The Republican readers can judge for themselves.

Calender Crop Is Small

The drought must have affected the winter calendar crop because it is much smaller than usual. All the local insurance companies have overlooked us thus far, and Harry Miller, the butcher, has failed to come across with his customary "Young Lady Inhaling a Lily." So far we have not received any "Indian in a Canoe" from the lumber company, nor any "Wounded Stag" or "Horses Heads" from the hardware stores.

We used to be able to count on a historic scene of battle and bloodshed from the First National Bank, designated to make us appreciate the blessings of peace and three percent, or a beautiful farm scene with lots of flowers, from the undertaker. The only ones we have received are from paper, type, machinery and ink manufacturers, with suggestions on every page as to how to solve ones business problems.

We miss the old patent medicine calendar which we always hung in the kitchen, with a harrowing story on each page. There we learned all that we ever knew about the gall stones of Mrs. Jinnie (I suffered agonies) Gilch, Terra Alta, W. Va.,; and the sciatica of Juniper (Doctors gave me up) Socrates, of Gobler's Knob, Kentucky; and the migrane of Sadie (I was drove half crazy) Greene, rural route, Sines, Md. The calendar was a constant reminder that the age of miracles was still with us, but at that it was better appreciated than the "inspirational" calendar, which offered you a daily reminder of your own shortcomings, finally leading to a complete mental breakdown.

For most calendars of today, hanging is too good for them, and yet how bare the walls of The Republican office would look without them.

Things to do on New Year's Day

1. Sleep.
2. Pay calls on people you have been trying to avoid during the year. They will all be out paying calls on you so all of Garrett county can spend the day visiting each other without once finding anyone at home.
3. Take down the Christmas tree (it's dropping needles all over the rug.)
4. Make New Year's Resolutions.
5. Spend half the day writing 1931, and the other half 1930, at the same time rubbing out the 1930 so you can get in practice for the first day at the office in the new year.

That after breaking my resolutions one by one during the coming year I will include them all over again in the list of items for 1932.

And who said Mayor Stemple couldn't make a speech? When he got to his feet last Sunday night at the Maryland theatre, everybody smiled—but after two minutes he had them spellbound. That is, until he made that wisecrack about furnishing the boys pants along with their coats and caps.

Now I know the weather is bad. George Altstetter is wearing a cap.

Ought To Hold Inaugural

If we "did the right thing by our Nellie", we would have an inaugural parade of all those who have just taken office, but on account of the snow and the fact that there will be celebration enough on New Year's, the procession has been indefinitely postponed.

However it would be a sight for sore eyes to see a parade of such celebrities, probably led by Doc Henry carrying his first aid kit, Cullers putting up a good argument for something or other, Markley putting out a smoke screen with that pipe of his, and Fike not far behind.

In point of service to his country, Zell Tower should be out in front, and directly in rear should be Truman W. Casteel, George D. Browning and E. E. Friend. Haenftling might be riding his ox team, and W. M. Frazee, his spreader. Little James Fitzwater would be there, and George W. Harvey, J. J. Ashby, Homer Friend, T. E. Bishoff and W. W. Dawson would be on hand with something to say (probably a joke he heard recently) and the parade would conclude after C. Mit Sincell had passed the reviewing stand.

A gigantic affair could probably have been made out of this, if old Boreas, the north wind, would have turned in the other direction.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 1, 1931.

A NEW YEAR

The passing of an old year and the coming of a new is actually only a matter of calendars. But its psychological effect and importance are great.

A special time in which to east off the discouragements of the past and to look eagerly for new opportunity, new hope, new activity, is essential to the human make-up of most of us. It is a spiritual tonic. Some there may be to whom every day offers a fresh start. More, however, need New Year's Day to check up on accomplishments of the past months and plan for those to come.

Whether we welcome the New Year with noise and mirth or with thoughtful silence, we experience the benefits of shaking off mistakes, regrets and failures and girding our spirits for a fresh attack upon life. If we are wise, we do not make many specific resolutions, but concentrate on the fresh attitude toward our problems.

So, let it be Happy New Year! Happy because of hope and opportunity and the renewal of mental and spiritual energy.

WAR TALK

It was a welcome and timely word which came from Pope Pius on Christmas Eve. Referring to the many rumors of impending war in Europe and elsewhere, His Holiness declared that they must be exaggerated. For his part, he could not believe in "the reality of these threats." One reason is that it would be plainly "suicidal" for any great nation now to rush into war on a large scale. As others have said, that would infallibly let loose a civil war in which the belligerent Government would fall. The Pope did not speak merely as a religious leader, still less as only a sentimentlist. He is fully aware of the agencies and agreements which have been established and which are still being sought for the purpose of settling international disputes peacefully. What he condemned was a proud and insensate "nationalism" which kept a country aloof from sueh noble efforts to maintain peace and good-will on the earth. If this saying looks toward Italy or France, we cannot deny it also looks toward the United States.

This utterance by the Pontiff was timely not only because it fell on the natal day of the Prince of Peace. It comes as a sober corrective for predictions of war which have been growing in volume. Again we have heard multiplying voices speak of Palestine as a powder magazine, the Bakans as about to flame into hostilities, Poland, France, Italy and Germany as ready for another bloody trial of superstrength. Perhaps pacifists themselves have been tempted, in their zeal for the League of Nations or the World Court, to stress too much such signs of trouble and to magnify in an alarming way the danger signals. It is a calmer and, we are persuaded, a better founded view which has now come from the Holy See. In truth, the very existence of so much disturbing war talk is one proof that there will not be another great war, at least so long as the last one is still burned into human memory. It is the unexpected war which the world in the past had reason most to dread. An advertised war is unlikely to come off. —New York Times.

NEWS VS. GOSSIP

In a public Chamber of Commerce symposium on the influence of newspapers on criminal justice recently the following interesting notions were advanced:

1. That newspapers "expose corruption" and are really "indispensable to the administration of criminal justice."

2. That newspapers exercise an "unwholesome and evil influence" over American life and should be regulated by law.

3. That newspapers "influence the commission of crimes and interfere with the administration of justice."

4. That there must be something wrong with readers, or newspapers wouldn't be the way they are.

5. That if judges and lawyers observed the ethics of their professions and had any fighting spirit, newspapers wouldn't be able to do the things for which they are criticised.

Readers may take their choice or add any praise or accusation that occure to them. Apparently newspapers are pretty much what they are supposed to be—the daily news in print, plus comment, summary, interpretation. Anyone who thinks nobody would know anything about erime if it did not appear in the newspapers should perform this mental exercise:

Let him immagine himself in a community where there was no newspaper. If someone committed a crime, what would happen? It would be discussed at the corner grocery, over back fences, in every home in the town, and wherever two or more persons met and had a moment to chat. And the rumors of the whys and the wherefores and methods and motives of that crime would be wilder than any that ever got into reputable newspapers. The newspaper is pretty tame compared to the tongue busily engaged with gossip.

HARD TIMES A MYTH?

What's all this talk of "hard times" that is on nearly every one's tongue? Is it a myth, a mob delusion, or is it an actuality? Most of the complaining is done by the regular merchants and stable business men of the community. Maybe they have cause for complaint. Why?

However, on the other hand, we have not noticed that the theatres in this territory have closed for lack of patronage. Other places of amusement seem to attract the usual crowd at the standard price for playing a game of duck pins, pool and billiards. Service oil stations have increased in number, supposedly because people are buying more gasoline than formerly. Amusements centers are not by any means deserted on Saturday nights, or would they be on Sunday nights, either, if the law permitted them to operate.

In the basis of this observation, why the holler of money conditions being "tight?" Let us examine a few factors which seem on the face of it to be fundamental in contributing to this so-called economic depression.

Buying power of the mass has not decreased noticeably, but it seems that people spend money differently today than in yesteryears. More automobiles are used, one to every five people, statistics say, necessarily a greater amount of money is spent for gasoline, oils, tires, accessories and other incidentals connected with or as a result of being speed-minded.

This is not saying anything for or against the practices other than to show that money goes to other channels than formerly, which may have bearings upon present conditions.

It seems that people are more pleasure bent than formerly, consequently many legitimate articles are done without in order to "get more out of life." There has been a tendency to eat less, to cut down "living expenses," while spending the sum saved for the divers forms of entertainment and incidental pleasure excursions.

As a result the grocer, the baker and the general merchant has felt his usual volume of trade reduced to some extent, which is attributed to "hard times." In course of this tendency to avoid "unnecessary obligations" to take advantage of the "unnecessary expenses," we as a nation have developed the characteristic symptoms of the spendthrift.

Are we becoming a nation of pleasure-bent, work-shirking night-clubites?

People talk, and what people talk of is infectious. We also like to believe what is being talked about, be it "hard times," economic depression or what not. Sometimes we believe until it hurts, and then we wish to forget about it. The reality seems painful, boring and cruel. How to escape it? Go to a movie. Forget the 18th Amendment. Indulge in the frivolity of a night club. Dance to captivating music. In this manner we shove realities aside. Momentarily we have forgotten about the rent being due, the demands of the grocer, the doctor's bill, the merchant's reminder, and we are happy.

Let's quit living a world of make-believe; face facts and struggle with realities.

An Interesting Fact

THE "TOBACCO AGE"—MONEY PAST AND PRESENT

A study of the monetary systems of nations is indeed interesting. But such a study is not the purpose of this short article. Money is a term used to describe the medium of exchange of standard values of any country. Gold, silver, nickel, copper are the coinage of modern nations, but baser metal coinage and shells, grain, sheep, wampum, furs, and other commodities have been the medium of exchange among primitive people.

Although boasting a background of centuries of English civilization, yet the Maryland Colonists, in their own environment, lived the lives of a primitive people and their "money", or medium of exchange, was likewise primitive. While the United States has adopted the gold standard, the time was when Maryland was on a "tobacco standard."

Turning again to our principal authority, we read in Andrews that tobacco was, in effect, provincial currency and that the "first public service enterprise" (a water mill for the grinding of grain), was authorized at an expense limited to twenty thousand pounds of tobacco, to be raised by taxation within two years, or at the rate of ten thousand pounds a year. Likewise, the first State House was to cost not above six thousand weight of tobacco.

But the time soon came when the Colonists desired a convenient currency rather than having to transact most of their business in their bulky chief crop. The Proprietary made an effort to introduce English coins and currency into the Colony, but the principle of local self government seemed to be deeply impregnated in their very being and the citizens demanded that Maryland have its own currency.

Consequently in 1661 the Assembly passed an Act concerning the establishment of a mint within the province, stipulating that "the money so coined or which shall be coined in the said mint shall be as good silver as the current coin of English Sterling money."

It was also provided that to clip, counterfeit, wash or otherwise "diminish" the said coins should be punishable by death and forfeiture of estate.

But despite these efforts to set up its own mint, the Provincial currency seems to have been minted in England, the coins in circulation being the penny, groat, sixpence and shilling, as well as a limited circulation of Spanish coins. At the same time land certificates were sometimes used as a medium of exchange, so that such certificates may be regarded as the first paper money in circulation in the Colony.

Owing to the lack of a proper circulating medium and the difficulty of handling and rating the coins in use, much confusion and some embarrassment resulted. Finally the Colony finding increasing difficulty in maintaining its credit, by an Act passed in 1781 the office of Intendent of the Revenue, or State Treasurer, was created and Daniel of St. Thomas Jenifer was the first incumbent of this office. He served until 1785, when the term expired and the office was abolished.

The contrast between the "tobacco age" in Maryland and the present, as well as the solid foundation upon which her industries is founded, may be readily seen when it is stated there are now (1930) 75 National Banks and 170 State banks, trust companies and savings institutions in the 23 counties of the State, the combined deposits of which are $814,750,272.

Lemon Mincemeat

One cup raisins, 3 cups finely chopped apple, ½ cup chopped nuts, ¼ cup candied orange peel or orange marmalade, ½ cup lemon juice, 2 cups sugar, ½ teaspoon salt, 2 teaspoons cinnamon, 1 teaspoon each of cloves and ginger. Scald, drain and chop the raisins. Mix all ingredients. Seal in sterilized jars. When making into pies add to each pint ¼ cup of melted butter. This is a simpler and more wholesome combination than many mincemeats.

St. Mark's Luther League will have a special meeting on the evening of Sunday, January 4, at which time Ward Hinebaugh will be in charge. All young people are invited to attend.

Mr. C. L. Paugh, of near Deer Park, was an interesting visitor at The Republican office on Tuesday. Mr. Paugh is a son of the late J. E. Paugh, who died many years ago. Mr. Paugh, now more than 75 years of age, has resided in Garrett county his entire lifetime except for a period of ten months when with his parents, his brothers and sisters, the family lived about twenty miles from Springfield, Illinois, their return to Maryland being hastened by reason of the fact that the father contracted fever and ague in the locality where they had hoped to establish a new home. The family passed through Springfield a few days after the burial of President Lincoln, which town, Mr. Paugh said, was still filled with Union soldiers who had attended the funeral of their dead chieftain.

Mr. James O. Hinebaugh, who recently suffered an attack of illness, is reported as being better today.

Mr. E. H. Hinebaugh, of Canton, O., after spending ten days or more in Oakland with relatives, returned to Canton this morning, Mrs. Hinebaugh remaining here with her parents for a short time.

At St. Mark's Lutheran church the rite of the Holy Communion will be administered at the morning and evening services on Sunday, January 11. New members will also be received into church fellowship at that time.

Messrs. Wilhelm Weber, of Clarksburg, W. Va., and Swann Weber, of Pittsburgh, Pa., returned to their places of employment on Sunday after having spent a few days of the holiday season with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Weber, near town.

A congregational social will be held in the Sunday school room of St. Mark's Lutheran church on Tuesday evening, January 6. Reports of the treasurers of each of the church organizations will be presented and the presidents of the various church organizations will make short addresses.

About fifty members of the young people's organizations of the Oakland churches enjoyed a union watch night social at the Methodist Episcopal parish house last evening from 9:00 until 10:30. Miss Betty Broadwater had charge of the games, after which refreshments were served. The group was dismissed in time to attend the service in the church from 11:00 until midnight.

The Masonic Past Masters' Association of Western Maryland, which includes Allegany and Garrett counties, with past masters from nearby towns of Pennsylvania and West Virginia, will hold its annual meeting at the Masonic Temple, Cumberland, next Monday evening following a dinner in the banquet hall at 6:30. Several local past masters of Oakland may be present at the meeting of this organization.

At the union watch night service held in St. Paul's M. E. church last night from 11:00 until 12:00 o'clock a pageant, "entitled the "Pageant of Light," was presented. Rev. J. D. Dawson, pastor of St. Paul's church, made the address. Seven young girls, Marion Brock, Elizabeth Browning, Betty Broadwater, Louise Castcel, Mary Grace Shirer, Geraldine Nordeck and Hasaleah Yutzy, presented the pagcant very beautifully. Rev. W. B. Brock presided and a union choir had charge of the music.

There will be many, many automobiles idle in Garrett county today if the owners of such vehicles abide by the law requiring the new 1931 markers to appear on the cars when they take to the roadways, for yesterday at the office of County Treasurer Albert L. Lee many, many owners of automobiles presented themselves to have their application blanks properly stamped showing that the tax had been paid. The applications will not reach Baltimore until this morning, and, if the office of the Automobile Commissioner remains closed, as it is likely to, then owners of the cars cannot possibly receive the markers before Saturday.

Annual Week of Prayer To Be Observed In Oakland

The churches of Oakland will again observe the annual union week of prayer with three services beginning next Wednesday evening, January 7, in the Methodist Episcopal church.

Services will be held in the Presbyterian church on Thursday evening and in the Lutheran church on Friday evening.

The general theme of this series of services will be "World Evangelization," and will be discussed under three topics: "The Church Universal," "Missions" and "Education and the Home." The messages will be brought by local ministers.

The universal week of prayer is held under the auspices of the Federal Council of Church of Christ and has been observed by the Oakland churches in the past.

Green Files Appeal and Furnishes Bond

Following the filing of an appeal by his attorneys, Albert Green, of Lonaconing, convicted of common assault during the October term of the Allegany County Circuit Court, and sentenced to six years in the Maryland Penitentiary, was taken from the prison to Cumberland one day last week and released under $2,500 bond by Judge Albert A. Doub. Green's cousin, Oscar Green, also of Lonaconing, was convicted of criminal assault and is serving eight years in prison. Both men were accused of attacking a young woman during an automobile ride in this county. The cases were removed to the Allegany County Court from the Garrett County Court for trial.

Many Will Ever Remember This Christmas Season

Churches, schools, fraternal, social and charitable organizations, service clubs and individuals combined this Christmas to relieve distress to an extent never before experienced in this community. Quickened by the unemployment situation and the want occasioned by other causes, the response of individuals made possible the wide distribution of baskets and packages containing provisions sufficient for Christmas dinner as well as the contribution and distributions to many families of clothing and other comforts. The Boy Scouts carried good cheer to a number of people residing within a radius of six miles of Oakland, while the Civic Club, in conjunction with the county health nurse made distribution of clothing in many parts of the county. Prisoners in the Garrett County Jail fared sumptuously on a roast turkey dinner.

Miner Painfully Hurt

John Rowan, of near Deer Park, employed in the Weeks & Liller mine located on the J. B. Lipscomb farm, east of Mountain Lake Park, was painfully injured at the mine on Friday last when he was caught beneath a fall of roof rock. Mr. Rowan was brought to Oakland and attended by Dr. McComas, later being sent to Memorial Hospital, Cumberland, where he is recovering. His injuries, in addition to a broken nose and bruises and cuts about his face, are painful bruises on his right leg. He is 37 years of age.

100,000 Auto Owners Still Without 1931 Tags

More than 100,000 Maryland automobile owners are still without the new red and white 1931 license plate, it was estimated by officials when the office of the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, Baltimore, closed yesterday afternoon.

From Monday until yesterday evening there was a rush for the new markers and the line of tag seekers each day covered a distance of approximately a quarter of a mile.

With two extra cashiers on duty and five distribution windows in operation the department was able to handle between 600 and 700 applicants an hour. E. Austin Baughman, commissioner, said the rush of applicants this year is much smaller than on corresponding days of former years. Mr. Baughman warned that there would be no extension of time for the delinquents. The 1930 license plates were outlawed last midnight.

Fifteen Girls Awarded Dolls on Christmas Morning

Fifteen girls under 12 years of age were presented with dolls as Christmas gifts in the contest conducted by Harned's Pharmacy during the two or three weeks preceding. The awards were made on Christmas morning following the tabulation of the votes which had been deposited during the period of the contest which was spirited but extremely friendly. Those in the contest who did not receive a doll were each presented with a box of excellent candy. The winners, in the order of their standing were Julia Gonder, Beulah Kahl, Norma Casteel, Rita Lawton, Evelyn Fraley, Mary Landon, Ann Naylor, Florence Fazzalari, Louise Shaw, Eleanor Sincell, Mary Filsinger, Geraldine Kahl, Carolyn McComas, Leota Niner, Pearl Hardesty.

The dolls were of the best quality and ranged in size from one two feet or more tall, to the smaller ones of a foot. There were fifteen happy kids in Oakland that morning.

OLD BIRTH CERTIFICATES ARE SENT TO BE RECORDED

Earliest of the Births took Place at Pocomoke City 63 Years Ago

A letter, postmarked Pocomoke City, Worcester county, received at the State Department of Health last week, was found to contain ten belated birth certificates. The earliest of the births occurred sixty-three years ago; the most recent, thirty-seven years ago.

The ten "babies" survived the perils of infancy and are all living. So is the attending physician, Dr. Isaac Thomas Costen, by whom the records were filed for registration. All of the births took place in Pocomoke City. The records were accompanied by the following letter:

Realizing the value and frequently the necessity of birth registration and having reached the age of 97 years, I am desirous (before it is too late) to have registered the births of my own daughters as well as a granddaughter, a nephew and several nieces whose births I attended, and am forwarding the certificates of birth with this letter for the purpose of registration.

Will you please make the proper registration and forward to me proper receipts, etc.

Yours very truly,
ISAAC THOMAS COSTEN, M.D.

The correspondence was referred to Dr. John Cillinson, Chief of the Bureau of Vital Statistics of the State Board of Health. The births were duly registered and the customary engraved certificates were sent in acknowledgement. The present law requires a birth to be reported within four days of its occurrence.

The records transmitted by Dr. Costen show the births occurred in three families, as follows:

1, February 13, 1867; 2, March 14, 1872; 3, September 17, 1875; 4, March 23, 1883; 5, February 6, 1885, all being daughters of Dr. and Mrs. Costen. 6. May 9, 1886; 7, August 9, 1888; 8, December 13, 1891; 9, August 27, 1893, a son and three daughters children of Mr. and Mrs. L. F. Hall. 10, March 26, 1891, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Young and a granddaughter of Dr. Costen. Three generations were represented in this certificate. The grandfather, Dr. Costen, was the attending physician, and his oldest daughter, the one for whom the first certificate above was filed, was the mother.

Though Dr. Costen has not been in active practice for some years, his name is still listed in the Directory of the American Medical Association. The published record shows that he began the practice of medicine in 1857.

THE BIRTH OF JOHN THE BAPTIST

LESSON TEXT—Luke 1:8-17, 80.

GOLDEN TEXT—And thou, child, shalt be called the prophet of the Highest: for thou shalt go before the face of the Lord to prepare his ways.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Gratitude for Godly Parents.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Gratitude for Godly Parents.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Need of Physical and Spiritual Equipment for the Lord's Work.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Value of Training in the Desert.

I. The Parents of John the Baptist (vv. 5-7).

1. When they lived (v. 5). "In the days of Herod the King." While both were of the priestly line, the priesthood was very corrupt and the ruling classes most wicked. Zachnrias and his wife lived in a time when it was not easy to be godly.

2. Their character (v. 6). "They were both righteous before God." Many appear to be righteous before men who are not righteous before God. They were so maled tlint they walked in the commnndments of the Lord blameless. The highest good in wedded life can be attained only when both are united in Jesus Christ. John the Baptist had a godly heritage.

3. They were childless (v. 7). Though this godly couple possessed the joy of the Lord, there wns a real lack on their home. No home is quite ideal into which no child has come.

II. The Birth of John the Baptist Promised (vv. 8-17).

1. By whom? (v. 11 cf. v. 19). The angel Gabriel appeared and mnde known the good news to Zacharias.

2. When? (vv. 8-14). While officiating as priest this good news came to him.

3. Charncteristics of the child (vv. 15-17).

(1) "He shall be great in the sight of the Lord" (v. 15). He was highly esteemed by the Lord. This is infinitely better than if he had been highly esteemed in the eyes of men or in his own eyes.

(2) "Shall drink neither wine nor strong drink" (v. 15). The child was to be a Nazarite, separating himself from sensuous things and dedicating himself to the service of God.

(3) "He shall be filled with the Holy Ghost" (v. 15). The energy of the Divine Spirit would enable him to lead people to repentance (v. 16).

(4) "Shall go in the spirit and power of Elijah" (v. 17). In this power he was to prepare the people for the coming of the Saviour and the salvation which he was to bring.

III. Zacharias Asking for a Sign (vv. 18-23).

Although the aged priest was earnestly praying for the salvation of Israel, the gracious promise of the angel, which was the beginning of that salvation, staggered his faith. He was unable to believe that his fond hope and prayer would be realized. The angel gave to Zacharias a sign. He was smitten with dumbness which was to continue until the fulfillment of the promise.

IV. The Promise Fulfilled (vv. 57-63).

When the time came for the birth of John, Elisabeth brought forth a son, and the neighbors rejoiced with her. On the eighth day they circumcised the child and gave him a name according to the instruction of the angel. The name "John" was contrary to family usage. By means of writing Zacharias made known the name which the child by divine instruction was to have. At this time God opened the mouth of Zacharias and he offered prnise.

V. John's Growth (v. 80).

This is a fine picture of a boy dedicated to the Lord's service.

1. The grace of God was with and on him. How beautiful to see children grow up with the stamp of heaven upon them.

2. Physical development. "The child grew." This literally means "kept growing." In this holy environment his plain fare as a Nazarite and his temperate habits gave him a robust constitution, thus fitting him for his life of toil and hardship.

3. Spiritual development. "Waxed strong in spirit." His inward man kept pace with outward growth.

4. Retired to the desert. His heritage from his parents, the special grace of the Spirit, needed the silence and the austerity of the desert for its completion. There God had an opportunity to speak to him. He not only had an opportunity to become acquainted with God, but was forced to rely upon God.

Ideals

Ideals are like the stars; you will not succeed in touching them with your hands, but like the seafaring man on the desert of waters, you choose them as your guides, and following them, you reach your destiny.—Carl Schurz.

Fear Gives Way to Faith

Nothing so demoralizes the forces of the soul as fear. Only as we realize the presence of the Lord does fear give way to faith.—Sarah Smiley.

WESTERN MARYLAND FOLK BUILT FIRST MONUMENT

Memorial To Washington on S. Mountain to be Restored

(By Betty M. Snyder in Balto. Sun.)

Undaunted by former failure, Western Maryland is launching another attempt to rebuild the first monument ever erected to George Washington, that on South Mountain, near where the old National Trail crosses the border line of Frederick into Washington county.

For many years this monument has been only a crumbling pile of rock and efforts to interest historical societies or Congress in its restoration have failed. Recently the affair has been taken up by the Hagerstown Chamber of Commerce, which hopes to have presented at the next session of Congress a bill to restore the monument and to provide for its upkeep.

It was in 1827 that the patriotic ardor of the people of Boonsboro, then as now one of Warshington county's small but prosperous communities, inspired the erection of the monument. In Baltimore's own Mount Vernon Place a monument was in process of construction, but it was not completed until after the humbler one at Boonsboro was started and finished.

Early on the morning of July 4, 1827, a party of men from Boonsboro climbed the steep ascent of South Mountain and began building a memorial unique in construction yet sturdy enough to withstand the assault of storms for many years.

This monument was a shaft thirty feet in height, fifty-four in circumference at the base and pierced by a circular staircase, yet built entirely without cement or mortar. So well did the stonemasons of the day know their materials that naked rock was fashioned into this tower and fashioned so well that, despite neglect and bad treatment, a good portion of it is standing today.

Those men of Boonsboro were well accustomed to working in stone, for it was their best building material. Some prehistorical upheaval had strewn the mountains and fields there with boulders large and small, and so furnished a building material more durable and less expensive than wood. Boonsboro and Washington county will bear witness to the skill of these workmen. Many a house and barn built a hundred years or more ago is still standing, as weather-proof as when it was new. Many a rod of fence still tells that early farmers found it easier to pile stone than to split rails.

When Washington's Monument was being built there was no water near to mix mortar to hold the stones together. The nearest springs was halfway down the mountain, so the masons depended upon their own ingenuity to place the stones so they would stand firm and solid. Had the monument received as much consideration at the hands of the late generations as did the stone fences of the same period, perhaps it would have kept its dignity longer.

Reporting the erection of the monument to Washington, who had then been dead but twenty-five years, the Hagerstown Torch-Light, a weekly newspaper then published in the county-seat town of Washington county, bearing date of July, 1827, said of the event:

"Pursuant to previous arrangements, the citizens of Boonsboro assembled at the public square on the fourth inst., at half-past seven o'clock in the morning to ascend the "Blue Rocks" for the patriotic purpose of erecting a monument to the memory of him whose name stands at the head of this article. This spot was selected in consequence of the great facility with which the materials were furnished. A little more than the foundation had been laid the day before, which enabled us to proceed without delay to the grand design before us. The men seemed actuated by a spirit of zeal and ardor almost bordering on enthusiasm.

"About 12 o'clock we heard a very appropriate extempore address from the Rev. Mr. Clinghan, a gentleman of the Revolutionary period, whose warm patriotism, animating a constitution rendered infirm by age and bad health, induced him to bear all fatigue and danger to accomplish the purpose of his heart.

"About 1 o'clock we partook of a cold collation, as our object was not to gratify our pampered appetites; consequently no sumptuous arrangements had been made, neither were toasts prepared for the occasion, but we enjoyed more heartfelt satisfaction in partaking of our simple fare than the most costly or highly seasoned dishes would have afforded. Our thoughts and food were both highly spiced with the contemplation of our work, thereby needing no stimulants to excite an artificial appetite. At the conclusion of our labors, about 4 o'clock, the Declaration of Independence was read from one of the steps of the monument, preceded by some prefactory observations, after which three salutes were fired (three feeble old veterans of the Revolution period participating), when we all returned to town in good order.

This monument is 54 feet in circumference at its base and 15 feet high (we contemplate raising it 30 feet after the busy season is passed). The wall is composed of huge stones, many weighing upward of a ton, with the whole center filled up with the same material. A flight of steps, commencing at the base and running through the body of the fabric, enables us to ascend to the top from whence the most beautiful prospect presents itself that the eye can possibly behold."

At the time of the monument's erection it contained a marble slab upon which was written, "Erected in memory of George Washington, July 4, 1827, by the citizens of Boonsboro." This stone has since disappeared.

During the Civil War battles of South Mountain and Antietam, the monument was used as an observation post, according to tradition, but by the year 1882 it had fallen upon hard times and was slipping into ruin. It was then that a fraternal organization in Boonsboro undertook to restore it. The rebuilding was effected and elaborate ceremonies marked the second dedication.

For many years the monument was a favorite picnic ground for the neighborhood. A carriage road was built and the surrounding woods kept trim and neat, but in time visitors were fewer and fewer and briars and the bushes closed the road and crept up to the very monument. No repairs were made and again it began to crumble. Just what happened to it is not clearly recorded. Some of the natives say it was struck by lightning, while others maintain that dynamite is responsible for the rent which now mars its face. Conservative residents of Boonsboro maintain that the present condition is but the natural ravage of time.

One of the monument's mysteries has just been solved. For many years there has been no trace of the builder's stone. It is now in the possession of E. H. Pitcher, 4000 Bateman avenue, who found it through patient inquiry, had it pieced together and now is offering it to be replaced in the monument when it is restored.

The stone was discolored and stained, but Mr. Pitcher had it cleaned and pieced together so that the inscription is again legible. "Built by Isaac C. Lutz, 1827," the marker reads.

It is the hope of Boonsboro and of the Washington County Historical Society to have the Government take over the Washington Monument, restore it and assure its perpetual care. Through the efforts of H. S. Bomberger, president of the society, a deed to the ground upon which the monument now stands was secured several years ago.

Boonsboro looks to the day when the monument will again stand high on South Mountain and justify the words of a citizen of long ago, who wrote: "As it was raised in much haste, all cannot boast the regular accuracy or perfect beauty; yet it possesses both solidity and durability, two important qualities. Rude and naked of all the charms of architecture, it has such strength as I think will preserve it for ages."

WHEN GEN. WASHINGTON RESIGNED HIS COMMISSION

A Memorable Scene Was Enacted at Annapolis, Dec. 23, 1783

General George Washington's surrender of his commission as Commander-in-Chief of the Continental Army on December 23, 1783, to Congress, which was then sitting at Annapolis, Maryland, was one of the most memorable scenes connected with the Revolutionary War, according to the Division of Information and Publication of the George Washington Bicentennial Commission.

Washington had left New York City on December 4, after bidding a fond farewell to his officers at the famous Fraunce's Tavern in that city. As he approached the city of Annapolis, his coming was announced by the discharge of cannon, the ringing of bells and the cheers of the inhabitants.

He arrived at Annapolis on December 19 and was met on the outskirts of the city by Generals Gates and Smallwood, accompanied by leading citizens of the town. On the following day he dined with the president of the Congress, Gen. Thomas Mifflin, in company with members of that body and the principal military and civil officers of the State. On December 22, Congress gave General Washington a public dinner, followed by a ball at the State House.

The following day, December 23, 1783, General Washington appeared in the Congressional chamber, and, being seated, General Mifflin informed him that the United States in Congress assembled, were prepared to receive his communication. General Washington arose and said, in part:

Mr. President: The great events upon which my resignation depended, having at length taken place, I have now the honor of offering sincere congratulations to Congress, and of presenting myself before them to surrender into their hands the trust committed to me, and to claim the indulgence of retiring from the service of my country.

In this characteristically simple fashion did George Washington lay down the reins of authority. These few simple lines marked the termination of eight and a half years of devoted and unselfish service, unsurpassed in the history of the world. The storm and stress of military campaigning was over. Victory and independence had won. The leader's task had been successfully carried out.

Following the ceremonies at the State capitol, General Washington departed for Mount Vernon, where he arrived on Christmas Eve. It is not hard to imagine with what satisfaction and gratitude he, to whom home was the dearest place in the world, returned to Mount Vernon, which he had seen only once since the beginning of the Revolution some eight years before.

It must have been with a deep sigh of relief that he sat down once again by his own fireside, for all through the war the one longing that never left his mind was for the banks of the Potomac. He liked its quiet occupations and wholesome sports, and the open-air existence. He felt that he had earned his rest and all the temperate pleasures and employments that came with it, and he fondly believed that he was about to renew the habits which he had abandoned to become commander of the Continental Army. Four days after his return he wrote to Governor Clinton, of New York: "The scene is at last closed. I feel myself eased of a load of public care. I hope to spend the remainder of my days in cultivating the affections of good men and in the practice of domestic virtues."

Into the old life of the proprietor of a large estate he threw himself with zest and thankfulness, more than happy to straighten out the affairs of the estate, much disordered by his absence. In the midst of these employments, too, he attended closely to his domestic duties. At frequent intervals he journeyed to Fredericksburg to visit his mother, to whom he was always a dutiful and affectionate son. He watched over Mrs. Martha Washington's grandchildren, and two or three nephews of his own, whose education he had undertaken, with all the solicitude of a father, and at the expense of much thought and many wise letters of instruction and advice.

However, with all his longing for repose and privacy, General Washington could not separate himself from the great problems which he had solved, or from the solution of the still greater problems, wich he, more than any other man, had brought into existence. The new nation needed the counsel and service of George Washington too much to allow him to remain in retirement. After only three and a half years of blissful happiness at Mount Vernon, the country again called George Washington to preside at the Constitutional Convention at Philadelphia. And shortly after the electors unanimously chose him to be the first President of the United States. Thus began eight more years of arduous labor and intense devotion to his country.

Happy New Year! 1931

A TOAST TO THE NEW YEAR

BEHOLD the dawn of a new-born day,
Another year has flown;
The deeds we have done behind us lay,
We shall reap as we have sown.

May the days that appear with each rising sun,
That adorns the radiant sky,
Be filled with deeds that we can say, well-done
We mortals, you and I.
—Commercial Telegraphers' Journal.

THE New Year's Mardi Gras at Perkins Center in the Far South, was the best idea the Chamber of Commerce had ever had. Parties of masked merrymakers traveled to the little town from many miles around and gathered to dance in the square or wind in gay throngs up and down the streets.

In a doorway fronting on the square paused a young girl in gypsy costume, her head bound with a bright yellow scarf and only a scarlet mouth showing under her mask. In her hand was a feather tickler, but she made only half-hearted feints at the persons who passed by. Now and then an occasional roisterer would throw some confetti at her, but she paid no attention.

And then down the street came a youth dressed as a gay Robin Hood, blowing joyously on a tin horn. He paused for a moment before her to adjust his bow and arrows, and the girl in the doorway seemed to come to life. A little smile quirked her lips and she darted the tickler into his face. The lad looked up and met, through her mask, a pair of smiling, provocative eyes.

"Let's dance," he said.

"I, senor?" she drawled.

"You tickled me, didn't you?"

"I, senor?"

"Well, didn't you?"

The girl laughed. "Maybe."

"And you'll dance with me?"

"Maybe," she assented, and they whirled out into the square.

They danced and strolled and danced until they were weary; they watched the old fiddlers' contest and the three-legged race.

"Talk to me, my dream girl," he said, "Why won't you tell me who you are?"

"That is the ver' reason," she replied, with a slight accent disguising her voice. "I—do not—talk to you, so you never know me."

"But, gee, I mean it. I'm crazy about you."

"No. No. That would spoil everything." She put her hand on his arm. "Let us dance some more."

They wound in and out among the dancers. "You're wonderful!" he breathed. "Do you know it, wonderful! Why don't you answer me? Your voice is like music and you do not speak. Is it because you don't know English? I'd teach you if you'd let me. Will you?"

"I know the language," she answered in his ear. "I only do not feel like talking. This night has been so perfect. Never have I had such fun! To talk might spoil it."

"Why?"

Before she could reply the bells rang out, their merry din welcoming in the New Year.

"Now we'll unmask!" he cried.

"It is not necessary, Senor Carson."

"You know me!"

"Of course. From the first. Why not?" She smiled up at him bewitchingly.

"But who are you? Do I know you? Take off your mask."

"No. Not now." She hesitated. "Not until I kiss you goodnight."

"That's a promise!"

"That is—a promise."

He led her away from the crowd. "I have a car somewhere around here," he said. "You're going to let me take you home, of course.

They Danced and Strolled Until They Were Weary.

"You know," he continued, "you seem awfully familiar to me. I'm sure I've seen you some place."

"Maybe," she repeated. "Here is the house."

"Why, that is where I live! Who are you, anyway?"

"Oh," she replied, dropping the feigned accent, "I'm just a girl whose brother thought she would be in the way if she went to the Mardi Gras, so I hid in the back of his car when he left and—"

"Jane!" he shouted. "I'll get even with you!"

But before her brother could catch her, Jane and her gypsy costume were safe in her own room, and the door was locked. Through the keyhole she called a final greeting.

"Do you want that kiss now, Senor Ralph Carson? No? Then a Happy New Year, brother dear!"

His New Year's Resolution

—By—

BLANCHE TANNER DILLIN

HELEN BENNET couldn't remember a dozen times in five years of married life that Grant had been on time for an engagement. They had been late for Christmas dinner at her parents' home. As usual Grant's infectious laugh had won forgiveness from her.

She had hoped for the New Year's dinner at the older Bennets' home he would be on time—but there he was out in the garage making no move to be ready.

She would not stand it! By the time she decided to go without him and called a taxi her cheeks were flushed with indignation.

A hastily written note, pinned to the radio, the first place Grant would go when he came in, informed him she had gone on without him. The taxi whirled away just as Grant came out to see why it had stopped before their house.

It wasn't only being late but the indifference that disturbed Helen. And then all of Grant's little faults presented themselves, so that by the time the taxi stopped at the door of the Bennets' Helen was enjoying an acute case of self-pity. It suddenly occurred to Helen that she would have to make some explanation for coming without Grant. So she decided on the truth. The family agreed with her that he needed a lesson.

As time passed Helen's anger cooled and the kind, thoughtful things Grant did came to her, and now she condemned herself as harshly as she had him.

Dinner waited as usual, although not so long as usual. But it was a strange Grant Bennet who stood in the doorway, his right hand raised, and solemnly announced: "I hereby resolve on this New Year's day, to try hereafter to be on time."

The tone convinced every one that he meant it.

As they all went in to the delayed dinner Grant whispered to Helen: "That note gave me an awful shock, and the ride over here was too lonesome to ever let that happen again. Never again, honey."

Helen gave his arm an affectionate squeeze and resolved to be patient with him.

Religious Rejoicing

In China and Japan the first day of the year has been an occasion for religious rejoicing since time immemorial.

Off Again, On Again

A New Year's Story

By Myrtle Koon Cherryman

ON THE 31st of December Evelyn started to her work at the Merchants' Service Bureau in no holiday humor. Christmas had been anything but a success at her home, for she and her father could not agree on a very important subject.

"If he hadn't been so harsh about Ralph Thornton," she was thinking, "I wouldn't have championed Ralph so fiercely. I know Ralph is irregular about some things, and perhaps he isn't as much of a man as Harry is, but Dad's always comparing them, to Ralph's discredit, made me defend the poor boy. I'm fond of Harry; I was all ready to be engaged to him when Dad began to row about Ralph, just because I went with him once or twice."

Her thoughts were diverted here by the arrival of the trolley car, but when once settled in her seat, she went back, playing variations on the theme.

"I can't stand injustice, and Dad was unjust to Ralph. Just because he was slow paying a bill at the store Dad called him a 'deadbeat'—an irresponsible—oh, a lot of mean things!"

Just then she caught a glimpse of Harry Blake driving by in his roadster.

"There!" she thought. "If I hadn't broken with him he'd be calling for me every morning the way he used to do, but I won't take any favors from him, the way he acted about Ralph. . . . Oh, I know he wasn't cruel and unjust, the way Father was, but he didn't stand up for Ralph the way a fraternity brother ought to, when I told him what Dad said. When I persisted, 'You think Ralph's all right, don't you?' he just said: 'Well, he's good company.'"

She Heard One of the Clerks at the Phone.

From this point, she mentally dramatized the dialogue:

"You don't say that very enthusiastically, I must say!"

"Sorry, Evelyn; I really do think Ralph is very entertaining."

"And is that all you can say for him?"

"I'm afraid it is, dear."

"You needn't call me 'dear'; I don't care to be 'deared' by a man who has no more loyalty than that."

"What do you mean by loyalty, de—Evelyn? Do you mean sort of 'My fraternity brother, may he be always right, but right or wrong, my—'"

"Of course I don't, but I have a distinct impression that your opinion of Ralph is not so much influenced by your ideas of right, as by something more selfish."

"Jealousy, for instance?"

"Yes, just that."

Then the actual words of the quarrel were lost in a blur of emotion—hurt repression on Harry's part, and hysterical reproaches on her own.

When this point in her reminiscences was reached, Evelyn found herself waiting for the elevator. She was soon hanging up her wraps in her locker, and as she approached her desk she heard one of the clerks of the bureau at the phone. Hearing a familiar name, she listened a moment.

"Denver Merchants' Service Bureau? You were inquiring about Ralph Thornton? Very poor rating. Owes everybody here; obliged to leave town because of some crookedness of his in the office where he was employed. In short, N. G. with capital letters."

As soon as she could leave her desk she called up her father, and after a few words with him, drew a happy, quivering breath, then rather shyly, called up another familiar number.

"Harry? It's Evelyn. Could you come and see the Old Year out with us? Yes. . . . Yes. . . . Oh, nothing, only I've seen a great light, and it's 'Off ag'in, on ag'in!' . . . There, don't break the telephone!"

WHY do we start our New Year on January 1?

And why is our newest year numbered 1931?

"Put the first question to the first ten persons you meet," suggests a bulletin sent out from the Washington (D. C.) headquarters of the National Geographical society, "and you will probably get three or less satisfactory answers.

"Put the second question to the same persons and perhaps half of them will insist that exactly 1930 years have elapsed since the day of the birth of Christ.

"It would be reasonably correct to answer both questions by the statement: 'Because of an error.'

"There is really no reason for starting each new year on the day called January 1, except that Julius Caesar so decreed it when he reformed the calendar approximately 1,977 years ago. But the day of the year that Caesar called 'January 1' is not the day that we so designate. Instead it is the day that we now call 'December 28.'

"Because Caesar assumed the year to be 11 minutes and 14 seconds longer than it really is, the dates 'crawled' through the centuries, away from the positions that Julius Caesar gave them, until by 1582 they were 14 days out of place. 'January 1' had advanced almost to the middle of the 'January' marked out by Caesar. In attempting to correct this discrepancy, Pope Gregory turned the calendar back, not to its position in Caesar's day, but to its position at the time of the Church Council of Nicaea in 325 A. D., when the calendar already had crawled forward four days. Had Pope Gregory made a complete correction, January 1 would have fallen on the day that we now call 'December 28.'

"But after all, the fact that January 1 is still four days away from the position fixed by the fiat of a Roman emperor is of no great significance. The really important matter is that the date shall not drift from its moorings, so to speak, and take up new positions with reference to the seasons; and its stability within a very tiny range was properly assured by the corrections which Pope Gregory made.

"The year is a repetition of the same months and days, and can best be thought of as a circle. A trip around a circle can start at any point; and similarly the year could be thought of as starting on any day. In fact, throughout the past, different peoples have started the year in all four of the seasons. The Jews began their year early in September, the Romans on March 25, the Egyptians on September 21, the Greeks on December 21, and the Persians began their year on August 11.

"There are, however, four logical places to start a new year, based on astronomical considerations. These are: the winter solstice, which now falls on December 22, the summer solstice, June 21; the spring equinox, March 20; and the autumn equinox, September 23. Julius Caesar and his astronomical advisors, when they arbitrarily started their reformed year at the point called January 1, missed by only seven days one of the most logical possible yearly starting points: the winter solstice. This is a logical starting point for the people of the northern hemisphere (and their interests have so far dominated world arrangements) because at that time the sun has completed its apparent yearly retreat to the south, and apparently turns back northward, bringing increased light and warmth.

"When Caesar reformed the calendar this significant astronomical event took place on December 25. When growing Christianity, after experimenting with other dates, chose December 25 as the date on which to celebrate the birth of Jesus, it chose the day that had been marked out under the Julian system by the winter solstice. But even then the date, owing to the Julian error, had moved from the solstice: and by the time the Christmas celebration became general, the calendar had crawled forward until the day called December 25 occurred four days later than the solstice. As the centuries passed, Christmas crawled ten additional days away from the solstice. When Pope Gregory applied his correction to the calendar he pushed December 25 ten days back of its farthest advance, but left it still four days away from the winter solstice.

The Day Called January 1 Is the Arbitrary Starting Point.

"The Christian era as a time measuring device, distinguished by the numbering of the years in both directions from the supposed birth year of Christ, was not proposed until about 527 A. D. and did not come into general use in Europe until about 1000 A. D. In the year 527 the evidence as to the time of Christ's birth was not very dependable, and it is now believed by many scholars that the calculations on which the Christian era was based were in error by from three to seven years. We call our New Year '1931,' therefore, not because we know it to be the nineteen hundred and thirty-first year since the birth of Christ, but because a monk named Dionysius Exiguus wrongly calculated the birth year. If the present year bore its strictly proper label it would probably be numbered between 1937 and 1938, A. D."

Much Activity on New Year's Eve

New Year's eve seems to be growing in popularity as a time for jollity and good fellowship, and the average American feels lost unless he has plans to "go somewhere" and "do something" on the eve of the turn of the year.

MT. LAKE PARK

There is a Santa Claus, is the belief of Rev. William A. Anderson. His belief is well founded, for he actually saw the bewiskered, snow covered old gentleman at his home in Loch Lynn last Christmas morning.

Some of the good friends and neighbors of Rev. Anderson had taken note of the fact that some times his "Lizzie" became tempermental and refused to do the bidding of her master. Sometimes she refused to start and then again she refused to stop.

Realizing that this condition of affairs might, in an unguarded moment, cause the minister to forget the purity of his English taught him at Oxford, they came to the conclusion that he should have a new Ford. No sooner said than done. So on Christmas morning, Santa Claus and his ambassadors of good will assembled at the Anderson home, and much to the surprise of Rev. Anderson there stood in his garage, in place of his old friend "Lizzie," a car filled with gasoline and oil and ready to go. The recipient, with tears in his eyes, expressed his appreciation of the generosity and thoughtfulness of his friends.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

By FRANK P. LITSCHERT

According to the opinion of most qualified European observers Europe is rapidly drifting into two armed camps again. Perhaps drifting is not exactly the proper word, because there is more or less design in the movement toward new alignments. According to the reports which come to America, Italy, or rather Mussolini, is the leading force in the new movement. At the end of the World War when the Central Powers were crushed, France, one of the canniest nations the world has ever known, refused to place her faith in the League of Nations or the World Court and immediately set up a system of alliances to make her the leading military power in Europe. Her plan was immediately successful, and was designed not so much for making new conquests as to enforce the settlements of the Versailles treaty.

Of course the defeated powers were not satisfied with the settlements in the Versailles treaty. But the dissatisfaction did not stop here. Italy too has had reason to believe that she got the worst of it when the dividing up of the spoils of war was accomplished. And so Mussolini, according to these European observers, is seeking to build up a new system of alliances which he hopes will eventually checkmate or even overwhelm the French scheme. With France of course are Poland, Jugo-Slavia and Czecho-Slovakia, and some of the minor states of Europe. To offset this combination Mussolini is seeking to bring about an "understanding" with Hungary, Bulgaria and Austria and he is said to have designs also on Rumanian support, although Rumania has always stood with France in European politics. Eventually, it is said, Mussolini hopes to win Germany to his side, although many observers declare that Italy, since the war, has been less popular in Germany than France. It is regarded as significant also that cables during the recent weeks have carried stories of proposed economic agreements between Italy and Soviet Russia.

Of course, conditions in Europe are now so unsettled from the political standpoint, that almost anything may happen. But if Mussolini succeeds in making the alignment which the observers think he is trying to make, we will again be confronted with the spectacle of European nations being divided into two armed camps. In such event what becomes of the World Court and the League of Nations? What chance will these instruments of internationalism have in the face of conditions of the kind outlined?

Certain is it that thinking Americans will hesitate about giving their approval to any program which has for its purpose, or which may result in, the placing of America, by means of membership in the League either directly or indirectly, in no man's land, between two military alliances naturally hostile to one another and suspicious of every neutral nation which shows any indication of mixing into the European mess.

Thinking Americans will hesitate to approve such a course not only because they feel that it will not be good for America, because of our isolated position and of the cosmopolitan nature of our citizenship, but for the further reason that it would render less liable our chances of being of real service in case of a real crisis. The very fact that we have remained outside the orbit of European diplomatic entanglements, has kept us from the taint of factionalism, and has made it more probable that we might be of real service in a disinterested way whenever the peace of Europe in threatened. Certainly a man who wants to act as a disinterested pacifier of a quarrelsome family cannot help the situation by marrying into the family where he will have to become a part of its troubles and disagreements. He can do much better on the outside. The same thing might be true of governments. Of course we want Europe to have peace and prosperity. A restoration of general prosperity would help solve many difficultics. We can best bring this about by first getting Uncle Sam on his feet so that he can lead the march back to normalcy.

FIRE DESTROYS DWELLING OF C. C. GNEGY AT PARK

Flames Drive Family from Home at 2 O'clock Monday Morning

Only the walls remain today of the brick dwelling of Clyde C. Gnegy, of Mt. Lake Park, as a result of a disastrous fire at two o'clock Monday morning, which completely destroyed the interior.

It is supposed the fire started in the basement, and it was not until the flames had gained great headway that Mr. Gnegy and family were awakened from their sleep. Mr. and Mrs. Gnegy experienced much difficulty in getting themselves and their children to safety, as the flames had burned the electric wires and the upstairs was in darkness and filled with smoke.

No personal belongings were saved. The Oakland Volunteer Fire department was called and prevented the fire from spreading to a planing mill nearby and other buildings. It is understood that Mr. Gnegy had $10,000 insurance on his property. The building was said to be one of the most modern and best homes in the Park.

HUNTING, FISHING AND MARRYING RUSH CLERKS

Perusal of Records Shows Fishing Lowest of 3 in Number

When it came to getting licenses at the office of the clerk of the Circuit court last year the number of fishing licenses obtained was the lowest of the three principal pastimes—marrying, hunting, and fishing—a perusal of the records show.

While 1138 fishing licenses were being issued, 1260 received marriage permits, and 1738 tried their luck at hunting. The figures for hunting licenses and marriage licenses are higher than last year, 120 more hunting licenses being issued in 1930 than in 1929. Fishing seemed to decrease in number of permits, but it is thought this was due to the change in the law governing Deep Creek Lake. A total of 4,136 lieenses were issued.

Nine hundred thirty-eight of the fishing licenses were granted to county residents, 55 to non-residents; 39 to State residents; and 106 to Deep Creek Lake, non-residents.

Seventeen hundred of the number of hunting licenses were issued to county residents, 11 state-wide, and 27 non-residents.

PROGRESS IS BEING MADE IN ALLEGHENY TABLELAND

Headquarters of Organization May be Established in Oakland

Continued progress is being made towards building up an effective organization that will enable the Allegheny Tableland Association to open an office early this spring at some point in the tableland region, according to Bushrod Grimes, secretary. Of all the towns Oakland is the most central for the association's headquarters but other towns also offer advantages that must have consideration of the committee making the selection.

At Pittsburgh, December 18, officers of the association, and representatives of the extension services of three states met with the President and a committee of the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce. Several hours were spent working on the plans for the joint cooperation of the three organizations. The next meeting of all the organizations actively interested in the regional development of the Allegheny tableland will be at Cumberland, Md., Jan. 27, beginning at 10 a. m., in the Fort Cumberland hotel. All the county agents of the eight counties with the state directors of the entension service will be at this conference in order to agree on a workable plan for the coming year as far as the agricultural extension workers are concerned. Following the Cumberland meeting the next session will be again in Pittsburgh after which there will be a meeting of the association probably at Uniontown or Somerset, Pa.

Owing to bad weather conditions and the nearness to Christmas the meeting at Oakland on December 19, did not develop the details of progress made in Pittsburgh because of the fact that many who had planned to attend the Oakland meeting could not do so.

MEMORIAL SERVICE FOR J. C. RENNINGER HELD FRIDAY

Presentation of Resolutions Followed by Addresses by Members of the Local Bar

RESPONSES BY JUDGES

At a special session of the Circuit Court for Garrett county, at which Judges D. Lindley Sloan and Albert A. Doub presided, resolutions in memory of the late Julius C. Renninger, who was a member of the local bar for more than thirty-four years, were presented and read by Mr. Fred. A. Thayer, who addressed the Court as a fellow practitioner and friend of the deceased.

Others who addressed the Court in memory of Mr. Renninger and who paid tribute to him as a man, a patriotic citizen, lawyer and fearless prosecutor when as State's Attorney he handled the criminal business of the county with fidelity, were Messrs. Gilmor S. Hamill, Stuart F. Hamill, Asa T. Matthews, Wm. R. Offutt, and W. W. Dawson.

Both Judges Sloan and Doub responded to the remarks made by the local attorneys feelingly and added their tributes to the memory of the late Mr. Renninger.

Mrs. Renninger, Julius C. Renninger, widow and son of the deceased lawyer, and Miss Alma Scherr, sister-in-law, all of Morgantown, were present as well as a number of townspeople.

The preamble and resolutions presented and adopted read as follows:

At a meeting of the Garrett County Bar Association, this preamble and resolutions were presented, read and unanimously adopted:

WHEREAS, That somber and always unwelcome visitor, death, has again invaded the ranks of our Association, and this time has turned "the golden key and opened the palace of eternity" to our friend and brother, Julius C. Renninger. "God's finger touched him and he slept." And

WHEREAS, On the 17th day of January, 1896, Mr. Renninger was admitted to the Garrett County Bar and almost immediately thereafter became a member of this Association and from thence on until his decease, remained an honorable, active and constructive member thereof, serving for several years as President. It ean be said without reservation that he was a true friend of every member of the Association, and that every member was his friend; and

WHEREAS, For more than thirty-four years he was an active practitioner at the Garrett County Bar, and during that time, by his industry, integrity, fidelity and legal ability he succeeded in building up a large practice among well-satisfied clients and in so doing reflected honor and credit upon the profession; and

WHEREAS, In the year 1911 he was elected State's Attorney of this county, and again elected to the same office in 1926, being the incumbent of the office at the time he departed this life. He was a strong and fearless prosecutor, but at the same time was always just and fair to the accused, highly respected the Court and was always courteous and obliging to the opposing counsel. His service in this important office was eminently satisfactory to all of our people; and

WHEREAS, As a citizen he was loyal, patriotic, enterprising and aggressive, and was always in the front

RESTRICTION IS LIFTED ON THE USE OF CITY WATER

Reservoir Is Almost Filled to Capacity and Test From New Well is 100 Percent Pure

NO DANGER OF SHORTAGE

With the supply of eity water in the reservoir several feet above the fire reserve level, and the announcement from the State Health department that the water from the new well is absolutely 100 percent pure, all restrictions on the use of water by citizens have been removed, according to the Mayor and Town Council.

By keeping the pumps going continually for the past several weeks it was possible to raise more water in the reservoir than was being used by the city, and slowly the danger of a water shortage diminished, until at present the reservoir is practically filled to its capacity of 600,000 gallons.

A report on the test made of the water taken from the new well showed it to be 100 percent. Dr. Joseph P. Franklin, deputy state health officer, in a telephone conversation with Mayor Grover C. Stemple, said the test showed the best analysis of any which had been inspected in quite a long time.

Following the report, the water was immediately turned into the line. One pump now operates three wells and is getting more than enough water to supply the town's needs, it was stated.

With this new well in operation, it is not expected that Oakland will be troubled with any shortage of water for some time to come. In order to prevent any further shortage, a new well is being dug on the west slope of the hill on the old Bradley farm, and the possibilities of erecting a second reservoir are being discussed.

In lifting restrictions on the use of water, it does not mean, however, that any unnecessary wastage may take place, H. P. Stuck, chairman of the water committee, stated. Citizens will still be under the town ordinance prohibiting them from letting their spiggots run all day and night to prevent freezing of pipes, or other unnecessary wastage.

Maryland Is Keeping Roads Open for Traffic

Wintry snows and sleets this year are finding the State Roads commission better prepared for their onslaught than ever before, and roads are being kept open, according to R. M. Reindollar, assistant chief engineer.

Outstanding among the new measures adopted is the policy put into effect during the summer of establishing supplies of cinders and sand near dangerous hills throughout the state, especially in Western Maryland.

This procedure was tried out on a small scale last winter and was said to have been found highly effective.

In addition the commission has a force of 120 plows and 12 rotary sweepers ready to place in operation at the first sign of each snow.

1,260 MARRIAGE LICENSES WERE ISSUED LAST YEAR BY CLERK OF THE COURT; NUMBER GREATER THAN IN 1929

Couples From West Virginia Secured 764 of the Total—June Was the Heaviest Month

COUPLES FROM 16 STATES

An average of more than 105 marriage licenses each month and more than three each day, was the record made during the past year at the office of the Clerk of the Circuit Court in Oakland, when a total of 1260 permits to marry were issued to couples from West Virginia, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Maryland and twelve other scattered states and the District of Columbia. The total was two greater than the preceding year (1929) but did not reach the record made in 1927, when 1300 licenses were granted.

During February, April and June of the year just closed new records were made. June was the largest month on record, one hundred and fifty-four licenses being granted.

764 From West Virginia

Seven hundred sixty-four of the 1260 couples were from the State of West Virginia; 188 from Pennsylvania; 140 residents of Maryland; 31 from Ohio, and the remainder from 12 other States and the District of Columbia, including New York, Indiana, Illinois, Virginia, Delaware, Mississippi, Tennessee, Alabama, Massachusetts, Oklahoma, Michigan and Kentucky.

In the remaining 137 permits granted the contracting parties were from different states, Maryland-West Virginia couples having the greater number with 43. Pennsylvania-West Virginia couples came next with 34. Fifty-eight applicants were refused licenses during the year 1930.

Following is a table showing the number of licenses issued each month during 1930:

Month	No.
January	47
February	73
March	82
April	112
May	112
June	154
July	108
August	128
September	127
October	117
November	112
December	88
Total	1,260

During the past twelve years, the records reveal, there have been issued from the office of the Clerk in Oakland 14,505 marriage permits, an average of 1208 each year.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS MEET AND ORGANIZE

George D. Browning Retained as President Of The Board

The new Board of County Commissioners met and organized Monday of this week by naming Mr. George D. Browning, of Oakland, president of the body.

With the exception of a year Mr. Browning has been president of the Commissioners' Board for more than ten years, being named as such by his conferees at the usual reorganization periods occurring in January of each year. The other members of the Board are Messrs. George W. Harvey and James A. Fitzwater, who, with Mr. Browning, were elected at the election held in November of last year.

Since the organization of the Board on Monday the office of the Commissioners has been the scene of much activity, as delegations and individuals from nearly every section of the county have been present seeking appointments as road supervisors and constables or having some business to transact with the Board.

Oakland Fire Department Called To Crellin This Morning

The Oakland Fire Department was called to Crellin about 9:45 o'clock this morning to extinguish a blaze in the home occupied by William Thomas and his family.

The building was owned by C. A. Ashby, of Deer Park, and besides the Thomas family the house was tenanted by Bruce Kisner and his family. The fire started on the second floor of that part occupied by the family of Mr. Thomas and flames were shooting from the windows when the Oakland department arrived. The blaze was soon brought under control.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas with their children were driven from their home near the Brant school house, two miles north of Oakland, in August, when their house with all its contents burned.

DISCUSSION OF PROPOSED LEGISLATION AT MEETING

Approximately 100 People Present On Saturday when Suggestions Were Made Relative To Laws

ALL DELEGATES ATTEND

Approximately one hundred residents and taxpayers of Garrett county were present at the public meeting held Saturday at the Court House when they presented and discussed from many angles proposed new laws and amendments to present existing acts and the revision of other laws to the members of the General Assembly from Garrett county. Delegates Markley, Fike and Cullers were present, while Senator McComas was unable to attend owing to his absence from the county on professional business.

During the meeting a number of suggested laws were discussed at considerable length and recommendations concerning some of the suggestions were made to the Assemblymen. The meeting was called to order by Mr. F. E. Rathbun.

Almost the entire day was spent in discussing the matters suggested by the residents in attendance from practically every section of the county, including representatives of the School Board and the County Commissioners.

Among the numerous matters to which the attention of the Assemblymen was directed were the following:

Muskrat Open Season—A request was made that the muskrat hunting or trapping law be changed to the season from November 1 to November 15.

Open Season for Killing Deer—A delegation requested that the open season for deer be changed from the first three days in December to a five-day season, the same beginning on November 10.

Rights of Pedestrians—The uncertainty of the present situation concerning pedestrians upon State improved highways was pointed out. It was recommended to the Delegates that a State-wide law be passed requiring that pedestrians shall walk upon the left hand side of improved highways, or in other words in sueh a way as to walk against the traffic.

Parking Upon Improved Highways—It was further advocated that a State-wide law be passed requiring all cars that are parked along State improved hig ways shall have all four wheels of the automobile or vehicle off the highway proper.

Bond Bill for Roads—The attention of the three delegates was called to the recent activities in behalf of a bond bill without a referendum attached being passed by the General Assembly of 1931, the same to be for Garrett county in order to procure funds for the building of improved highways in the county, the interest thereon to be paid from the same funds that are usually allocated to Garrett county during the next six or eight years for the building of improved highways in the county under the direction of the State Roads Commission. The passage of such a measure was supported by several citizens present and was likewise discouraged by others during the discussion that followed the introduction of the proposal.

Length of School Term—Two citizens of the county requested the members of the Assembly to pass a law as a result of which several of the present public school activities would be lessened, such as the salaries of teachers and disposing of several officials now in connection with the public school system of the county, shortening the school term and taking the money thus saved to build roads and to pay other expenses in connection with the county government. The County Superintendent, along with other citizens, including members of the Assembly, pointed out that any such steps were wholly impossible, strictly against the laws of the State and the members of the Assembly could in no way participate in carrying out any such suggestions.

In discussing this subject it was pointed out that Garrett county pays into the State treasury each year under the State tax rate of 25 cents, a total of less than $54,000.00, and that for schools alone the State pays to the county for school purposes the sum of about $180,000.00 each year, or for each dollar paid by the county into the State treasury the county receives back for its schools about $3.50. If the State school law is not carried out in this county all of this revenue would be lost which would result in a double county tax rate for the schools which would then be lessened in usefulness according to today's standard.

Restailers of Gasoline—Representatives of the gasoline stations pointed out to the members of the Assembly the needs for a law prohibiting pressure being brought to bear upon those engaged in selling gasoline to consumers for the purpose of compelling them by reason of larger profits to become members of a chain organization for selling gasoline rather than to continue as independent organizations. It was therefore advocated that the necessary laws be passed in order to relieve this pressure and at the

THE CHILDHOOD OF JESUS

LESSON TEXT—Luke 2:40-52.

GOLDEN TEXT—And Jesus increased in wisdom and stature, and in favor with God and man.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Ideal Childhood.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Growing up for God.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Responsibility of Youth.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Being about the Father's Business.

I. Jesus Growing (v. 40).

While Jesus was as to his personality, God, yet his deity did not interfere with his development as a human being. The processes of his physical, mental, and spiritual growth were the same as those of any normal human being.

1. "Grew and waxed strong." It was necessary for his body to develop. His brain, nerves, and muscles must not only attain unto the proper size but must come to act in unison, become correlated.

2. "Filled with wisdom." As with most children his training was largely in the hands of his mother. She, no doubt, taught him to commit to memory Bible verses and taught him the great stories of the Old Testament, from the creation down through the patriarchs and prophets. It seems that it was customary among the Jews to send the child at the age of six years to the synagogue school, where the Old Testament was the textbook.

3. "And the grace of God was upon him." By the grace of God doubtless, is meant God's loving favor and tender care.

II. Jesus Tarrying Behind at Jerusalem (vv. 41-43).

At the age of twelve years the Jewish child took his place as a worshiper in the temple. He was then considered "a child of the law." Being thoroughly conscious of his mission, Jesus tarried behind and inquired into the meaning of the ordinances of God's house. His heart yearned for his Father.

III. Jesus Found in the Temple (vv. 44-47).

When his mother and Joseph had gone some distance on the homeward journey, they perceived that Jesus was not with them and sought for him among their kinsfolk and acquaintances. Not finding him, they returned to Jerusalem and found him in the temple.

1. He was sitting (v. 46). He was perfectly at home in his Father's house.

2. He was hearing the teachers of God's Word (v. 46), and was eager to learn God's will.

3. He asked questions (v. 46). His growing mind was inquisitive; it inquired after—reached out after—truth.

4. He answered questions (v. 47). His answers showed such great wisdom that he astonished those who heard him. It was the expression of the workings of a perfect human mind suffused by the Holy Spirit.

IV. Mary's Complaint (vv. 48-50).

1. Her question (v. 48). "Why hast thou dealt thus with us?" She remonstrated with him for his behavior.

2. Jesus' reply (v. 49). He replied to her question in a dignified yet tender manner, but made no apology, thus indicating that he was more than merely the son of Mary. God was his Father.

3. Mary acquiesced in his revelation of himself (v. 51). She did not understand all these things, but she kept them in her heart.

V. Jesus' Obedience (v. 51).

Though he was fully conscious of his divine being and mission, he lived a life of filial obedience, thus teaching us that obedience to parents is pleasing to God, and a duty which will be discharged faithfully by those who have the spirit of Jesus Christ.

VI. Jesus' Development (v. 52).

1. Mental. "Increased in wisdom." Although the divine nature was united with the human, his mind was left free to develop normally.

2. Physical. He increased in stature. His body developed according to the laws of a normal human being.

3. Spiritual. He increased in favor with God and man. As his mind developed, and his apprehension of God became more comprehensive, the Divine Being could be more fully expressed through him, and as the perfect life was lived, men could recognize his superior qualities, and therefore, their hearts would open to him.

MT. LAKE PARK

A fire of yet undertermined origin, but suspected to have originated in the cellar from an electric short circuit, totally destroyed the residence of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Gnegy last Monday morning. When discovered the fire had made such headway that all efforts of the Oakland Fire Department were unavailing. The house was recently constructed, of brick and nicely finished. It was one of the better homes of the Park.

Recurring fires, with total destruction, should drive the lesson home that some plan should be worked out to lower the fire hazard here. The present inadequate arrangement simply means that when a blaze is once well started, it goes the limit. Buildings destroyel by fire here are not rebuilt as a usual thing, and each one burned is a distinct economic loss to the community, as well as to the owner. Personally, we do not know what can be done, but the suggestion has been made (whether feasible or not, we do not know) that reserve water tanks might be erected in different sections of the Park, and water hose purchased by the Community to supplement that which is on hand at the Oakland Fire Department. If this plan is a good one, the cost would not be prohibitive and much property could be saved that, otherwise, is almost certain to be a total loss, in case of fire.

A friend, one of these detail birds, has called attention to an item in The Republican column "Days of Old," in which it was stated that December 20 years ago, had the distinction of having two new moons, one on the first and one on the last of the month. It was said that that was an omen of good fortune, peace, prosperity and success.

This friend has searched thru the almanac and fails to find two new moons in the same month, but does find that the month of May will give us two full moons, which, in these days of world-wide depression may possibly portend blessings in larger proportions than if we were to have two new moons.

Services for next Sunday: Baptist, Sunday school, 9:45; preaching by the pastor at 11 a. m. U. B. church, preaching in the evening at 7:30 by the pastor.

Rev. and Mrs. S. A. Jessee were most thoroughly "pounded" last Tuesday evening by neighbors and friends from Loch Lynn, Gortner and Crellin. Charley Ream, of the latter town, acted as master of ceremonies and added to his reputation as a fine toastmaster.

Mrs. Milton Echard and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Echard and child have returned from Texas, where they have been for several months.

To. Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Kesner, Loch Lynn, a son was born Monday.

Gerald and Harland Biggs and Edward Sebold have returned to their studies at the University of Maryland, after spending their Christmas vacation at the homes of their parents.

Mr. Philip Simons, of the Mt. View Poultry Farms, suffered a stroke of paralysis Tuesday evening. His condition at this time is not serious.

Miss Helen Gibson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. Z. Gibson, has returned to Frostburg Normal, where she is a student.

Misses Helen Leighton and Vivian Clary have returned to the Mountain State Business College at Parkersburg, W. Va.

Roland "Mutt" Reedy left for Washington college, Chestertown, to continue his studies.

Miss Dorothy Welch is attending school at Alliance, Ohio.

Miss Edith Ream, teacher at Charlotte Hall, and Mr. Elmus Ream, of the high school teaching staff at Keyport, N. J., have resumed their duties after spending the holidays here with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Ream.

Mrs. Lee Sanders has returned to her home at Clearfield, Pa., after being here a portion of the holiday season with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wiley W. Welling.

A hog, dressing over 700 pounds, one of the largest butchered in this immediate vicinity, was killed by Ben H. Friend at his farm near Loch Lynn one day last week.

Deputy Game Warden Welling reports a number of coveys of birds at and near the Park in danger of extermination owing to the deep and long continued snow unless those interested in the conservation of wild life take time to feed them. He has spent several days in the work but with his business duties it is impossible for him to cover all the territory. Other deputies are aiding in the work, but if the birds are to survive all hunters and sportsmen should get busy. There is an added danger in the number of stray hunting cats roaming the glades and woodland. These animals are very destructive to bird life.

Card of Thanks

We take this method of thanking our friends and neighbors for their kindness during the illness and after the death of our infant son; also we express our thanks for the use of cars at the funeral.

Mr. and Mrs. ADNA STERLING.

A Forecast of the Annapolis Big Show

TROUBLE ENOUGH FOR ALL

By MARK S. WATSON In the Baltimore Sun, January 4

One does not have to be grayheaded to realize that the biennial show in Annapolis, opening next Wednesday for its ninety-day session, is a wholly different affair from that of pre-war days. Like the illustrious Old Gray Mare so often sung of at the old City Hotel and elsewhere, it ain't what it uster to be. It's a lot better or a lot worse, according to the viewpoint.

Much of the gaiety is gone, as, indeed, it is gone from a good many other public gatherings, for reasons which are by this time fairly familiar. Much of the excitment is gone and the rush and bustle and frenzied trading and logrolling, largely because of the creation of the budget system, whereby the Governor of Maryland lists the known needs of the State machinery and gets that prime piece of business out of the way in intelligent and orderly fashion early in the session. Most of the brazen "bell'ringing" is happily past, thanks to the creation of the Public Service Commission, whose supervision of the utilities of the biennial alarms which were costly to them and profitable to unscrupulour legislators, for, incredible though it seems, there were some even in Maryland.

But the legislative species does not change his spots completely in a decade or two. Sometimes he does not change them at all. Sometimes he doesn't even hide them. So long as there are opposing parties and opposing factions within the parties, and city interests, and county interests, and Shore interests, and Wets and Drys, and Ins and Outs, and all the other conflicts which gladden the hearts of men (and women) just about so long, and longer, will there be revivals of the fights and the inefficiencies, the loyalties and the treacheries and the unending oddities which undoubtedly existed in the first legislative assembly and will continue to the last.

How effective will be the biennial session which opens at the State House this week is anyone's guess. The only certainty is that there will be the usual furious rows and that the last one will come close of the ninetieth day, for legislators pald on a per diem basis have a way of finding something to do up to the constitutional limit of ninety days.

On several of the measures which are certain to come up for action fights are inevitable. Even where the purpose of the measure is unopposed, the manner of execution is cause for dispute—an excellent example of this being the perennial discussion of the University Hospital, which once more is greatly overcrowded and badly housed and inadequately equipped. The question is not at all whether it should have a new building and better facilities for its highly important work, but who shall pay for it and when. This is one of the many measures on which the Governor is to make specific recommendation, probably in his opening message.

Pretty much the same thing can be said of the Bay Bridge. There are few in the State who oppose the idea of bridge or tunnel of ample traffic capacity allowing swift communication from Eastern to Western Shore, but there has long been hostility to having to pay for it. This is the situation with which the Bay Bridge Commission has been grappling for months, preparing for the Governor and Legislature the report which was made public in mid-December.

The report found private capital unable to build a bridge at this time and the State itself not justified in building it in the only way permitted by the Constitution. A way out of this dilemma was proposed, whereby a new commission would be created by the State, its bonds tax free and perhaps enjoying a guarantee from the State gasoline tax receipts (although the tolls should be adequate for interest and amortization), whereby it is argued they might sell on a 4½ per cent basis. The difference between this and a 6½ per cent bond such as private capital might have to issue, would perhaps he tho difference between success and failure; the commission pointed out that 2 per eent on $10,000,000 for thirty years, for example, would be more than half the $10,000,000 principal.

The bridge report, purposely presented well in advance of the legislative session, may well bring on the liveliest discussion of the session, not alone because of the importance of the Bay Bridge itself, whleh was the original purpose, but because of the commission's proposed permanency—so that it may continue bridge building as rapidly as the traffic needs shall be demonstrated by increasing automobile use. It was pointed out that, with the continuing tourist-traffic development, a bridge across the lower Potomac may well prove desirable and a paying venture, or one or two across the lower Patuxent, or across the Choptank, or others over the Susquehannah—indeed, over any or all of the great water courses which make Maryland so charming and yet which make it so difficult to get from one point to another. It is this bold effort to speed up all intrastate road traffic, a logical enough development from the good-roads program, which adds immeasurably to public interest in the bridge proposal and promises to make of it one of the most important considerations of the session.

There are numerous projects of State-wide concern involving social welfare work of one sort or another. Most important, perhaps, is consideration faciliated by the existence of the Welfare Board, which is charged with administration of the State's institutions and the general policy under which they are run. For there is a new prison to be built, chiefly because the old Penitentiary is oversupplied with inmates and there is no indication that the candidates for involuntary admission are going to become less numerous.

But that is not the only justification for a new penitentiary; there is a growing belief that the State should do more to reform its criminals, and that it can't reform them very well by purely repressive methods; the prison farm idea is clarly gaining favor. Moreover, the recent Federal act, making it possible to bar prison-made goods from interstate trade, is going to end many of the existing prison industries and Maryland must very shortly find a substitute. This is the Welfare Board's job and to it is related the question of what sort of prison is going up on the land lately acquired for that purpose.

More funds are to be sought for an extension of the parole system, which, if anything, will be widened by application of the new idea in penal administration. It may be that more examination of applicants will be needed; it is surely the case that more personnel for reporting the behavior of paroled men will be sought.

It is well known that the insane are increasing in number—perhaps 200 new beds are needed each year in Maryland. This means additions to existing buildings and, indeed, perpetual consideration of whether present confinement methods are always wise; alienists are far from agreeing on this. The only certain thing is that the problem is more serious each year, and in default of other ideas the State is compelled to raise more and more money for the control of these unfortunate sufferers. One new building is sure to be recommended by the Governor. This is for the colored feeble-minded, who just now are confined with the colored insane at Crownsville; the white insane and feeble-minded are separately housed and this separation is the aim at Crownsville, too.

A third class of dependents remains to be cared for adequately. This is the paupers, whose miserable estate in a dozen Maryland counties has long been something very close to scandal. The commission which has been considering the matter long ago recommended abandonment of the county almshouses and creation of a single institution on the Eastern Shore, to which would be transferred all the paupers of the nine counties, and a like one on the Western Shore for housing the unfortunates now scattered through all the county almshouses west of the Bay. The State will be called on to build the structures and each county to pay its pro rata expense of boarding the number of inmates coming from that county. No great opposition to this principle is expected, but again it is difficult to forecast complete agreement with the method.

This brief survey suggests the importance which social welfare now has in the State's program. It is not so long ago that in education and public health the State was so backward as to provoke angry demand for improvement. The advances in these reforms have been really spectacular and instead of being backward in health and schools, Maryland is now admittedly well in the forefront of all States of the Union. This is far from true with regard to social welfare and herein, patently, is the reason for the concentration of so much attention to these problems of the insane, the criminal and the pauper during the legislative session.

That is not to say that there is nothing to be done in the two other fields, for as civilization advances new needs are created. Even in education the Governor's program calls for new expenditures, partly for the pensioning of teachers, partly for the continuing extension of schooling facilities in the poorer counties of the State, where, in accordance with the rule by which schools in those sections have been vastly bettered, the State saves the child born in a poor county from having to pay a penalty for a misfortune he could hardly avoid.

The continuing drought and the abrupt check which national industry has received, of course, have brought their problems to Maryland as to other States. The former catastrophe is being coped with as is possible through the Drought Commission, which has pledged itself to endeavor to finance farmers who need credit. The unemployment problem is also being battled so far as it can readily be; the State is pushing its own operations so as to keep men employed, and individuals and communities themselves are manifestly contributing their efforts in the same way.

A prosperity problem with which the Legislature must concern itself, however, is the recurring one of the State's seafood resources. Unquestioned success has attended the Conservation Department's efforts, approved—after a prolonged battle—at the last session. That is, the oyster-shell planting on reserved areas has visibly aided the restoration of the noble Maryland oyster. But it is only a start and the work on which Commissioner Earle has embarked must be continually and greatly extended, notably in the Potomac, where once 700 oyster vessels used to operate at capacity and where now few sails appear.

No formal fisheries program is likely to be presented to the Legislature. It is more likely that House and Senate will be asked to appoint members to a joint committee which can begin original consideration of the problem, examine the situation as Commissioner Earle presents it and arrange its own program. All work in the Potomac and, indeed, in the whole lower bay, it must be understood in advance, is going to be effective just in so far as Maryland and Virginia work in cooperation. A few years ago there were contemptuous of each other and the fruit of this indifference was a raiding of the bay waters by misguided fishermen and oystermen which threatened (and in some respects still threatens) to transform the once prolific bay into a barren pond .

Great progress has been made of late. The anclent boundary waters dispute is amicably settled. Maryland is ahead of Virglnia in some of its restrictions: Virginia is ahead of Maryland in at least one—its prohibition of oyster dredging in the Potomac—and it is expected that the Maryland Legislature will correct that inequality at the coming session. The abuse of the purse-net is one of the gravest problems. The conservationists' hope is that the Maryland Legislature will effect an immediate study of the needs for oyster and netting restrictions, fix on a tentative program and then hold a joint meeting with the Virginia authorities in time to prepare a uniform program for approval both at this year's Annapolis session and at next year's Richmond session.

A State-wide matter of no great importance, yet of real concern as a trouble maker, is the matter of the constitutional convention. At the last election only a minority of the total vote cast favored a convention. But of the vote on that specific problem a majority favored it. What is the answer? Is a convention mandatory or is it not? Both opinions find substantial backing, yet very few people seem to be screaming for any revision, and they are chiefly the advocates of a new ratio of city representation in the Legislature.

Representation? Well, here fight is promised anyway, regardless of convention possibilities. Always the Legislature expects the city-county fight. But this year there is the opportunity to redistrict the whole State. Under the Congressional reapportionment Maryland still has six representatives, but the present districts are nowhere near even in population, owing to the swift growth of Baltimore and its suburbs. And while the problem of how a Baltimore resident is to have his proportionate voice in Congress and in the State Legislature is being given the profound consideration of legislators who are entirely free from all thoughts of partisan advantage, the equally disinterested city politicians are expected to introduce some new ideas about the redistricting of the city itself.

At present five of the six city districts are pretty safely Democratic. The Fourth is often Republican. There are city democrats who figure that by shifting a precinct here and there they can slip a few thousand Republicans out of the Fourth and into another district so safely Democratic that they will do no harm, and at the same time slip a few thousand outside Democrats into the Fourth, where in close elections they may do a great deal of good—for the Democratic party. That used to be called gerrymandering. This year it probably will be called electoral reform.

Another election proposal involves the wider use of the voting machine which has long been urged for Maryland, following its employment in New York and many other States. No one expects the counties to favor State-wide use, but the effort will be to pass an enabling measure whereby the city or any county can install them if they wish to pay for them.

The city administration will go to Annapolis with a number of other plans. One is for a $35,000,000 water loan for pushing the work which the current drought demonstrated may be needed soon. This existing loan will take care of the Prettyboy dam, which is not to be functioning for another year, the Montebello-Druid tunnel and main extensions. But the new money is needed for work on the proposed new dam on the upper Patapsco, for its Franklintown filtration plant and for all the other work which will be needed as the city's population extends into Baltimore and Howard and Anne Arundel counties.

The city is also after a $2,500,000 park loan, although silent as to what in particular is to be bought; a $1,000,00 loan to house the People's Court and Juvenile Court, a $2,000,000 Lexington Market building loan, a $10,000,000 school loan for new buildings and reparirs and a $10,000,000 paving, bridge, and grade-crossing loan. All of these, of course, are only authorizations for the city itself to borrow the money.

The Council—but not the administration—is to present its own bill, as usual, for authority to pass an ordinance allowing movies and other entertainments every day in the week. This is another way of saying it wants power to permit Sunday movies, now denied it by the Blue Laws. It, at least, can count on opposition, and lots of it. The Council, too, will have its own bill on city zoning, seeking to get the control of building laws in its own hands. This, too, of course, will meet with lively opposition from those who doubt the Council's fitness for determining what will be to the city's architectural betterment.

The Public Service Commission will ask for two measures. One of them, identical with that which was bitterly and successfully fought by a strong lobby two years ago, aims at protecting public interests from the holding companies which have become so active in superfinancing of the utilities in late years. It is a rather moderate measure at that which would merely require that a holding company which controls any operating company doing business in Maryland maintain in Maryland an agent authorized to turn over relevant papers on demand to the courts or the commission.

At present, it is felt, the operating companies are able to look innocent and say they know nothing of the master-company's affairs, and the master-company can roost just outside the State line and defy efforts to make it reveal its revenues and expenses. Thus public bodies of inquiry can get no information from either. Beyond doubt the same lobby which fought off this investigating measure in 1929 will be on the ground with full armament against the 1931 bill.

The other Public Service Commission measures will seek to control the highly confused taxicab situation prevailing in Baltimore, so as to bring some responsibility and to compel fly-by-nights to assume responsibility in case of accident or quit business.

Automobile legislation in a quite different field is sure to be proposed too. This tims at some form of compulsion which will make the highways less perilous, freeing them from reckless and incompetent drivers with no financial responsibility for the wrecks they cause. Several plans will be presented and there is a promise of a fight.

Any theory that when women got the vote they ceased to have special political interests is promptly dismissed by the ladies themselves. The League of Woman Voters(whose most active agent, Miss Lavinia Engle, this year goes to the Capital not as a lobbyist any longer but as a delegate from Montgomery county) is marching down with a well-prepared program, partly made up of defeated 1929 measures, partly of new ideas.

These new ideas would require a three-year rather than a two-year teacher's course at the Normal School; would compel children to complete their elementary schooling even if they are past 14; would establish a State-wide juvenile court system; improve the University Hospital; better the almshouses; provide better facilities at the girls' training school, and do mueh better work for colored delinquent children than is now possible at either Melvale or Cheltenham.

But, as good as these things may be, there perhaps will be a livelier fight over one of the 1929 measures which the women are bringing up again, this time with a good deal of confidence that they can bowl over the notorious lobby that blocked them in 1929. The measure, euphoniously known as "the-board-bill," dims at radical improvement of the Maryland landscape by taxing the unsightly billboards so severely that they will be moved far back from the highways—which means, often that they will be torn down altogether. As they get their value from proximity to a highway for which the State pays, it is reasoned that the State can probably make them pay back some of that value as a direct tax.

This measure, whose chief purpose is, of course, not money raising but beautification, is to be pushed now in hope that the State's face can be scrubbed up before the tourist flood which the Washington bicentenary of 1932 will bring. Hence the league counts on hearty support from a great many patriotic and historical societies and on unorganized citizens of like taste who are already urging on the Governor and the Legislature the activities necessary for Maryland's cooperation in the Washington celebration and, of course, in Maryland's own tercentenary.

This comes in 1934. A preliminary report has already been made by the Tercentary Commission headed by William L. Marbury, with Richard M. Duvall as executive committee head. It urges a $500,000 appropriation, which would provide for small monuments at Cowes, England, from which the Ark and the Dove set forth in 1633; at Blackiston Island, where they first went ashore, and at St. Mary's City, where the colony itself was founded and where ground for a park, on the very site of the ancient Capitol, has been donated by the Episcopal church. The bulk of the fund would provide for a Hall of Archives at Annapolis, to house in a proper form the invaluable historic documents which are now stored over the State in quite inaccessible form. It is significant that the American Historical Association is now engaged in printing in de luxe form the Maryland Colonial Council proceedings of 1695-1730, without waiting longer for Maryland itself to make this valuable contribution to historical research.

Here, then is a rough survey of the chief measures which are assured attention at the biennial session of the Legislature—matters of dollars and cents, of traffic needs, of public welfare work, of political maneuver, of education, of beautification, of culture. When April dawns we will know a lot more about their success and will have a better idea as to whether Legislatures should meet once in two years, once a year, or—from other viewpoints—not at all.

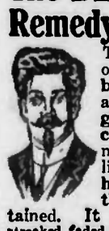
The BEST Gray Hair Remedy is Home Made



To half pint of water add one ounce bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and one-fourth ounce of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. It will gradually darken streaked, faded or gray hair and make it soft and glossy. Barbo will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.

JONAS J. BEACHY, MT. NEBO CENTENARIAN, PASSES ON

Born When Last Century Was Young; Died Near Where He First Saw Light of Day

Jonas J. Beachy, who was probably the oldest man in Garrett county, passed peacefully away at his home, Mount Nebo, near Grantsville, at six o'clock on Friday evening, January 2, the cause of death being infirmaties due to extreme age, the deceased being nearly one hundred years old, having been born on February 6, 1831, two miles north of Grantsville, the place of his birth being relatively close to the spot where he breathed his last. Mr. Beachy belonged to and was one of the forebears of a pioneer Garrett county family. He was the son of John and Christena Beachy, both of whom were of Swiss descent, and was the last surviving member of the family of eight children.

Mr. Beachy was married on September 2, 1864, to Miss Anna D. Yutzy, whose death occurred on June 6, 1926. In this family there were ten children, five of whom survive, as follows: Mrs. Christena Unzicker, of Elkhart, Ind.; Mrs. Mary Custer Orendorf and Miss Katharine Beachy, at home; Elmer J. Beachy and Edward J. Beachy. There are also 17 grandchildren and six great-grandchildren surviving.

From the year 1856 until the year 1863, Mr. Beachy made three trips to and from the far west, whence he went in search of adventure. In 1863 he returned to Grantsville and purchased the Warnick farm upon which he resided, worked and reared his family. By industry and ability he become prosperous but did not cease his labors on his farm until in recent years, when, owing to infirmaties of age, which later was the cause of his death, he was compelled to forego any further activity. As a neighbor he was extremely kind and considerate; always jovial and lived for the pure joy of living and helping those less fortunate.

Mr. Beachy had been confined to his bed for six months preceding his death and although almost entirely blind, his mind and memory of things in the far distant past remained clear and unobstructed. He was a strong and uncompromising Republican and at all times evinced an interest in county State and National elections. He was a faithful member of the Amish church. His funeral occurred on Monday with services in the Miller Amish church, near Grantsville, Rev. Jonas B. Miller officiating. Interment was made in the cemetery located at the church, the pallbearers being six of his grandsons: Ellsworth Beachy, Morris Beachy, Paul Orendorf, Wilbur Clark and John Guster.

Water Restrictions Off

The Owls Convene

All the owls, both hoot and screech, and their halves (some better halves, and some lesser halves) held a convention last Thursday night, and it must have been SOME convention for a sober party.

Neil Fraley has, as a resule, some very valuable New Year's resolutions which Scoop has been trying to get hold of, but Lawyer Fisher always has them in his other suit, the one that hangs at home.

If it were not for that Scoop would have enough material to fill the column and then some, and all about the following: Neil C. "Cusser" Fraley, Lawrence M. "Mastoid" Fraley; Frank A. "Astabula" Smouse, Harold H. "Horsefly" Harned, Franklin E. "Eely" Rathbun; R. "Raspberry" Carlton McComas, S. "Singular" Townshend Naylor, Grover C. "Caliope" Stemple, Paul B. "Baloney" Naylor, Ralph "Dead Eye Dick" Weber, Paul "Gloom" McIntire, Juilus C. "Cancer" Littman, W. "Warbler" Cecil Smith, Fred C. "Capricorn" Peddicord, C. "Corkscrew" Milton Sincell, and W. "What-a-man" Ernest Shirer.

For the Well Groomed

At last there has been discovered something that will best stop falling hair or dandruff——a blue serge suit.

The I-told-you-so sewing circle, feeling that false statements told in meetings are not for the best interests of the town have decided to first be sure of the truth and then go ahead. They all are of the opinion that a lot of trouble has been caused by idle roomers.

Another problem for the unemployment commission.

Sinee the first of the year Scoop has been taking inventory (of himself), and therefore hasn't had time to take much of an inventory of other people, enough to fill the column. There were a lot of empty shelves that had to be gone over, and others were overstocked.

The only annoying thing about doing a column is that the people who knock you invariably have a darn good reason to.

same time protect the independent dealer in business activities.

Dog License Tax Law Discussed—The dog license tax law was introduced by a citizen recommending a change in the present law, alleging that many escaped payment of the tax. Quite a discussion followed the introduction of this subject which resulted in information being given that the money derived from the tax is used for reimbursing farmers whose sheep are injured or killed by dogs.

This topic concerning the dog law brought about a discussion relative to what disposition is made of the remaining one-half of fines imposed by the court in the county for violation of certain laws, one-half of which is paid the informer. The matter was explained when it was stated that the other half goes to the Bar Association of the county for the support of the local library of the court. Several present took the position that the fund, instead of being used for library purposes, or a large portion of it at least, should be spent in helping to pay court expenses, instead of the court being supported wholly by direct or indirect county taxation.

Line Fencing Law—Perhaps the longest and most heated discussion of the day grew out of the proposal to change the present line-fencing law. Many farmers participated in this discussion due to their vital interest in all the matter and the difficulties they experience from various eauses in protecting their crops, especially from cattle permitted to wander and from their inability to pay the whole eost of a line fence about extensive areas. All suggestions pertaining to the proposed changes in the law were thoroughly discussed and was supported by several of those present.

During the discussion a request was made that the prssent line fence law be printed in the county papers.

The value of an equitable fencing law was emphasized by one of the recently elected officials of the county who had heard the whole discussion when he called attention to the fact by saying: "Good fences make goed neighbors; bad fences make bad neighbors, and bad neighbors make hell," which contribution to the discussion ereated much merriment due to its aptness and philosophy as related to the value of a good line fencing law.

Study of State Roads Fund—A request was made by a citizen who was supported by others present that the members of the General Assembly make a study of the allotments of State road funds that have been made during the last several years for the purpose of learning if Garrett county has received its full share of the fund. The point was made by the one who introduced the subject that he did not know that Garrett county has not been receiving its full share of State roads funds, but he was fully under the conviction and belief that many people in the county are of the impression that the county has not been receiving its proportionate share of these funds. Therefore, he suggested, that in order to do away with these eonstant rumors that such funds were being diverted, he recommended the study of the subject above. If, however, after investigation it became apparent that the rumors are based upon facts and that the county is not receiving its due share of State road funds, then steps should be taken immediately to have such funds come to the county to which it is justly entitled under the State roads law.

Road Engineer Advocated—Growing out of a request that snow fences be provided along county that had been piked by county authorities in order that such roads be passable in snowy weather, the need for a road engineer was pointed out and the suggestion was supported by many prominent and influential citizens and public officials who were present. It was advocated that the salary of a road engineer would be more than saved through having funds now spent for the upkeep of county roads spent with a greater profit and returns as well as the roads being better, especially to those people who live along such roads by having them in better and more passable condition. One of the number present pointed out that no new law was necessary in this connection for the employment of a road engineer to carry on the type of work described as supervising the contractors of roads and bridges, receiving larger returns from money expended, etc., due to the fact that there is a law which permits the employment of such a road engineer by the County Commissioners. Upon request the party who had called attention to the existing law stated that he would send a copy to each of the four members of the Assembly and to the Board of Commissioners.

Public School Matters Presented.—Mr. F. E. Rathbun, County Superintendent of Schools, brought to the attention of the members of the Assembly matters pertaining to the public school system in the county and expressed the hope that as opportunities may arise that they would take advantage of them for the purpose of furthering public health activities in Garrett county and that the delegation would be particularly interested this year in problems related to public health and that the results later shown would be gratifying. In this connection the County Commissioners were commended for the interest they had taken during the last few years in protecting the health of the puolic.

Mr. Rathbun pointed out the advisability of a bond bill for the construction of school buildings in the county as a means for providing the necessary funds instead of by direct levy. It was explained that the town of Accident is making efforts to secure an addition to its school building, which would cost about $25,000. Similar efforts are being made for an addition to the building at Kitzmiller for elementary school purposes which would cost about $40,000, and that a like effort is being made for further improvement of the Grantsville school building at an approximate cost of $40,000. Pressing needs were pointed out for other centers in the county, among them being Oakland, the total cost of all such needed within the next few years approximating $125,000.00. Such a bond bill, Mr. Rathbun stated, would result in immediate reduction of the county tax rate.

Attention was also called to the importance of the equalization fund as provided by the State for the support of the schools of this county which for this year alone approximates $110,000, with provision being made for its increase during 1932 and 1933. The members of the General Assembly were requested to see that these funds come to the county for support of the public schools without which the local taxation would be extremely burdensome—in fact, impossible.

Attention was also called to the fact that school expenditures for this year, according to the receipts, would necessitate an economical program as a result of which the present plans call for a decrease in expenditures during the school year of what is now estimated as $20,301.28 under expenditures made for similar purposes during the past school year, which emergency has arisen largely from the extended bus service in the county for the transportation of school children, and also due to increased high school enrollment, which has necessitated the employment of additional teachers.

The members of the General Assembly were greatly interested in the problems and suggestions called to their attention, and they expressed their appreciation to those who had attended the meeting and given them the advantage of their judgment upon each of the proposals advanced during the meeting.

The Assemblymen requested the stenographer who had made complete notes upon all of the discussions to send to each of them later a record of all that had transpired at the meeting, giving the names and addresses of those who had participated.

FIRE COMPANY RESPONDS TO 22 FIRES DURING 1930

Practically All Fires In Corporate Limits of Oakland Extinguished With Small Loss

ORGANIZATION IMPROVES

Twenty-two fire alarms in Oakland, Mt. Lake Park, Crellin and vicinity, were answered during the past year by the Oakland Volunteer Fire Department, resulting in very little loss except in calls out of town where the blazes had gained too great headway before the department was notified, according to a report of George Kerins, fire chief.

Practically all of the fires in the corporate limits of Oakland were extinguished with small loss, the blaze in the cellar of Hamill's Book Store causing the most concern. Several vacant and run-down dwellings were consumed to such an extent that they are now worthless.

Fire loss throughout the county, however, was quite heavy, a number of barns, one saw mill, one coal tipple, three dwellings being completely destroyed. Sixteen fires in the county were reported where the local fire department was not called.

Fires answered by the local department included the dwelling of Stanley Coal Company at Crellin, housing three families; damage, $500; cause, overheated flue; February 4.

J. Albert Shaffer dwelling at Aurora, W. Va., entirely destroyed on February 27; defective flue.

Outbuilding at the home of Mrs. R. Slider, Mt. Lake, March 24; destroyed.

Home of Mrs. Nannicne T. Offutt, on March 30; interior badly damaged; incendiary.

Vacant dwelling on west edge of town vacated by Alfonse Borelli; practically destroyed; March 31.

Two brush fires at Mt. Lake Park during week of April 12.

Mayle home at Deer Park, completely destroyed May 23.

Hamill's Book Store on June 10; slight damage.

Dwelling (unoccupied) on Water street, belonging to estate of George Giessman; June 22.

Gas explosion in basement at home of Walter Janoske, July 31; no property damage.

Home of Howard Rheinhardt, Mt. Lake Park, August 18; no resultant damage.

Monongahela West Penn bus backfired and ignited on August 19; call cancelled; no damage.

Grass fire at home of E. R. Jones, October 4; no damage.

G. A. Whorton residence on Sept. 19; no damage resulting.

Hen house at Paul Mitchell's home on State road; destroyed.

Automobile at Third and Alder sts., Nov. 1; backfire; no property damage.

Hay house belonging to Earl Fields near town; destroyed on November 19.

Flue at Gordon McRobie home on November 27; no damage.

T. M. Gilmore home at Crellin on December 3; slight damage.

Ford coupe of Wm. McRobie, Dec. 2; extinguished.

Barn of Arch Spiker and cattle of Owen Martin, near town, December 10; totally destroyed.

Members of the department fought one large forest fire on August 4, it being between Mt. Lake Park and Deer Park.

Sixteen Other Fires

There were sixteen other fires reported to The Republican from different points in the county and included barns of Raymond Beckman, North Glade; Edward Stanton, Grantsville; Jeff Burch, Blooming Rose; Bayard Lohr, North Glade; John W. Herman, Fort Hill; Thomas McKenzie, Finzel.

Homes burned included those owned by Jonas Glotfelty, McHenry, occupied at the time by Mr. and Mrs. Benj. Savage; Raymond Beckman, North Glade; L. K. Dixon, at Deep Creek Lake; Mrs. W. L. Thomas, two miles north of Oakland; John Peck, Sand Flat; A. T. Watson, Deer Park.

The saw mill of H. V. Leighton in the Ryan's Glade country was consumed as was also the Victoria theatre at Bayard, the Wolf Den coal tipple at Shallmar and the Essex coupe of David Hardesty.

Improvement in Department

During the past year the type "75" pumper has been replaced by a newer model and in addition to that a No. 99 500-gallon pumper, at a cost of $5,500 was purchased.

The city hall has been remodeled so as to give the organization more room for its equipment and two celebrations during the year—the Hallowe'en jubilee and the Fourth of July carnival—were jointly sponsored by the fire company.

RED CROSS BEGINS DRIVE FOR FUNDS FOR STARVING

Call To Raise $10,000,000 Is Issued By John Barton Payne, National Chairman

COUNTY'S QUOTA IS $1,400

A drive to raise $10,000,000 for sufferers as a result of last summer's drought was opened Monday, according to a telegram received by Mrs. E. Z. Tower, Red Cross chairman for Garrett county. The call was issued by John Barton Payne, National Chairman, who telegraphed 3,000 Red Cross chapters the amount of money they were expected to obtain. The Garrett county chapter's was set at $1,400.

Chairman Payne's telegram to Mrs. Tower follows:

Greatly increased demands during the last ten days have made imperative an immediate campaign for a Red Cross relief fund to meet the emergency situation through parts of 21 states in the drought stricken area.

A minimum of $10,000,000 is needed to prevent untold suffering and actual starvation by thousands of families.

Pollution of water supply caused by dying cattle has added to winter hardships in some sections. President Hoover in proclamation urges immediate and generous response. I am confident your people will not fail to meet their share of this humanitarian need, but because of general conditions I desire to impress you with the necessity of the most vigorous campaign.

Success of our efforts will be regarded as test of Red Cross by President and the entire nation and we must not fail. Your chapter quota is $1,400.

The entire amount raised by donations will be sent to national headquarters, Mrs. Tower stated. Anyone desiring to aid in realizing this quota may do so by sending check or money to John M. Jarboe, Oakland, treasurer of the local Red Cross chapter.

Additional Name

An additional name has been turned in for membership in the annual roll call, which ended on Thanksgiving, that of Oscar Shaffer, Crellin. This makes a total of 379 members in Garrett county, or 21 less than the desired quota.

Ritchie Inauguration A Triumph For Modern Rulers Likened Unto That Of Ancient Rome

Fourth Term Begins 'Midst Blare Of Trumpets And Peans of Praise

By Paul Winchester and Grafton Lee Brown, Special Correspondents of The Republican.

In ancient Rome, when the chief of State won a triumph and returned to take his place on the throne, he entered the city and in triumphal procession marched up the hill to his capitol amid the plaudits of the people.

In his train were his captive enemies whom he had conquered and who graced his triumph. Chained to the wheels of his chariot were the kings, generals and squires who had opposed him, and in humiliation they were derided and hooted at by the subservient populace.

In Annapolis was witnessed the triumph of the modern ruler of the free state of Maryland. His conquered foes were in the procession; it is true they were not bound to his chariots with chains of bronze and iron, they were not humiliated by the jeers and hoots of the populace, gathered from the four corners of the State, but they were bound with invisible chains which were equally as unpleasant and galling as those which bound the captives of their prototypes of ancient Rome, who were dragged at the chariot wheels of their conqueror. For in truth the greatest of all triumphs ever won by a Marylander was that which was on exhibition in the pomp and pageantry which surrounded the virtual enthronement of His Excellency, the Governor, who, through his own great ability, energy and statesmanship, had won the crown of state for the fourth time, despite the hostility of those who were his opponents. And there was carried out the emphatic decree of the people, that they wished him to rule over them for four more years. For eleven years he had been their ruler, he had been tried and the multitude had not found him wanting.

And as the people of Ancient Rome said to the conqueror more than two thousand years ago, when he triumphed over his foes and entered the capital, so said the people of Maryland to Governor Albert C. Ritchie:

"Juravit populus, et non poenitabit eum-tu es Dominus Altissimus Terrae Mariae, in aeternum, secudun, eon-

Oakland High Basketball Teams To Play on January 23

Both the Oakland High School boys and the girls teams in basketball go into action next Friday afternoon, January 23, at the school building court. Their opponents will be the strong teams from Friendsville High School, which are considered the best in the county, hence strong opposition is expected from them in both contests.

Among the veterans of the O. H. S. boys squad who will probably play are Maroney, Graves, Sollars, Glotfelty and Rice. Several promising new men have been added to the squad.

This will be the first game to be played on the O. H. S. floor.

The home rooms are selling homemade candy for the purpose of securing funds to enlarge the school fund. Each home room has produced quite a few excellent candy makers. The cooperation of the student body in this enterprise is appreciated very much.

STATE FOREST FIRE LOSS WAS $580,000 DURING 1930

Estimated that 90,000 Acres of Timber Land Were Burned

Fed by tinder-dry undergrowth, forest fires burned over 90,000 acres of Maryland timber land in 1930, causing damage estimated by the State Forestry Department at $580,000. Ordinarily the yearly loss is said to be about $70,000.

In revealing these figures, F. W. Besley, chief forester, blamed drought conditions, aggravated by the carelessness of campers and smokers, for the unusually heavy loss. He estimated the burned acreage, placed end to end in a strip one-half mile wide, would extend from Baltimore almost to the western tip of the State.

Western Counties Damaged

Aside from damage to timber it cost the State $55,116 to combat the blazes, the majority of which occurred in Garrett, Allegany, Washington and Frederick counties. Thirty thousand dollars was expended in these counties alone.

A total of 1,910 fires were reported, distributed about evenly between the fall and summer months, Mr. Besley said.

Forest fires caused more than $400,000 damage in the shore counties between January and June alone, Mr. Besley declared, adding that this estimate was based on lands valued from 50 cents to $20 per acre.

Green Foliage Parched

Green foliage, usually abundant in the summer months, was almost entirely dried up last summer, allowing small blazes to spread with rapidity, according to the forester. Several fires were started by incendiaries, and in some cases refired, Mr. Besley said.

A fire at Dan's Mountain, in Allegany county, he reported, burned for many days and destroyed more than 8,000 acres of timber land.

BEAR HUNT AT SANG RUN RECALLS DAYS OF MESHACK BROWNING WHEN ALVA D'WITT KILLS 420-LB. BRUIN

Hunting Party of Seventeen Had Been on Trail of Bear for Approximately Three Weeks

TO HOLD BIG BANQUET

The days of Meshack Browning, pioneer hunter of Garrett county, seemed to return to Oakland on Friday afternoon when a party of about 17 hunters from Sang Run appeared with a 420-pound black bear which had been shot about 10:30 that morning. The hunt had been in progress for about three weeks.

The bruin had been in the Sang Run section for four or five years, according to the residents, and had destroyed a number of sheep during that time. The enraged farmers and hunters at last decided to be rid of him. With the assistance of William R. Browning and Cecil Ramsey, of Oakland, along with Ramsey's dog, "Leeds", who joined the party last Monday, the hunters began to close in. In the past the bear always seemed to have a secret escape from his pursuers, but this time there was no escape.

Alva DeWitt, stationed at a crossing, saw him approaching and at a distance of 150 yards he fired, the bullet striking the bear in the shoulder. Two more shots were fired, both of them lodging in practically the same spot. Then "Leeds", the dog, who had never before seen a bear, dashed in.

Those in the hunting party included Alva DeWitt, the one responsible for his death, who is a great-great grandson of Meshack Browning, pioneer hunter, and author of the book "Forty-four Years the Life of a Hunter; Stewart Savage, William R. Browning, Cecil Ramsey, Nathan C. Browning, Ralph Hoye, Samuel Thomas, Bryce Thomas, Leonard Carr, Charles Carr, Fred Hoye, Roy Friend, Parker DeWitt, Jeffrey Hoye, Edward Hoye, Harris Casteel, and Richard Sines.

The head and skin of the bear will be preserved, and it is almost certain, according to Bill Browning, that a banquet will be held in the near futuure when the chief article on the bill of fare will be "Bear, a la Garrett county."

It is said that there are other bears in the Sang Run section of the county.

FOUR COUNTY BOYS WIN IN STATE VO-AG CONTESTS

Wayne Fitzwater Carries Off First Honors In Sheep Raising —Wayne Hamilton Is Second

OTHERS ARE SPUD CHAMPS

Four Oakland boys among the thirty-five contestants, representing 1,200 boys enrolled for vocational agriculture in the 47 Maryland high schools, were included in the list of winners in the State-wide Vocational Boys Project contests for 1929-30, and were awarded F. F. A. medals at the annual meeting of the Maryland Farm Bureau Federation held at Baltimore last week-end.

The Oakland boys, and their projects are as follows:

Allen Kelley, potato, second prize.
Willard Hauser, potato, third prize.
Wayne Fitzwater, sheep, first prize.
Wayne Hamilton, sheep, second prize.

The boys were accompanied to Baltimore by W. E. Spoerlein, of Gortner. Willard Hauser, having been confined to his bed with tonsilitis, was unable to go, but Earl Spoerlein substituted and brought the medal to Oakland. The group returned last Thursday evening.

The medals carry the design of the Future Farmers of America, gold for first place, silver for second, and bronze for third. The first prize in potatoes went to David Williams, Smithsburg, the only other winner in Western Maryland other than the Oakland boys. Boyd Hardesty's score on potatoes was only two points lower than Hauser's, which would probably have gained him fourth place in the State-wide potato project contest.

Prizes were also awarded for winners in calf, swine, poultry, field corn, sweet corn, tomato and tobacco projects.

$180 Reported in County Christmas Seal Sale

More than $180 has been reported in the annual Tuberculosis Seal sale campaign, according to Mrs. C. Milton Sincell, county chairman.

Returns are a little below the figure for the same period last year, but there are still a number who have not made any report, was the gist of the chairman's statement to The Republican. The chairman asks that those who have seals or money to turn in that they do so promptly so that a report may be made.

The seal sale is held annually from Thanksgiving to Christmas and the proceeds go towards the effort in decreasing the number of sufferers from tuberculosis in the State and in relieving those whose condition is such that they may be made as comfortable as possible.

Boy Scouts Receive Charter for Seventh Consecutive Year

A charter to further conduct a troop of Boy Scouts in Oakland for the seventh consecutive year was received during the past week and will be presented to the troop at the regular meeting on Friday evening, George Hanst, scoutmaster, has announced.

The troop was formed in 1924 by Rev. A. J. Torrey, who acted as the scoutmaster for a year. He was followed by Scott W. Shirer, Rev. Paul G. Linaweaver and the present scoutmaster.

At a recent meeting of the troop committee, Irvin Broadwater passed his Tenderfoot tests and will be enrolled as a regular member of the troop in the Eagle patrol. Horace O'Donnell will also be enrolled after the preliminary tests are passed.

A definite program will be arranged for the twenty-first anniversary of the organization of scouting, to be held from February 8 to 14, at the meeting on Friday evening.

What Brought Our Financial Depression? Asks Former Senator John W. McCullough, And Suggests that The Railroad Brotherhood as Well As the Railroad Management Let Well Enough Alone.

To the Editor of The Republican.

The Railroad Brotherhood got their eight-hour day and advance in wages as a war measure. When the Government took the railroads over as a war measure to help win the war, the railroad management had some fear that the government would keep the railroads. The management of the railroads passed the word down the line to all employes to be as worthless and extravagant as possible so the cost of operating would run so high that public sentiment would force Congress to turn the railroads back to the original owners, which was done, and the same system of management prevails today.

In 1914, the average freight rate for long and short haul the country over was $1.94 per ton. Today for the same haul the rate is $4.00 per ton. Passenger and Pullman rates were raised 33 per cent as a war measure and remain the same today.

In 1920, when the Harding Administration took charge of the government the Fordney-McCumber Tariff Bill was passed—the highest tariff that was ever imposed upon the American people up to that time.

The railroads consume over 60 per cent of all the iron and steel manufactured in the country and were well satisfied to pay the price for their material when the public was paying war time freight rates on all the commodities they consumed. What has been the result of high freight rates and high tariff? It has practically bankrupted the farmers, coal operators and lumber operators of the nation who produce the necessities of life and comforts of mankind. These are among the most worthy industries of the nation, and more than 50 per cent of the people depend upon them for their living. It is also far-reaching with the merchant and with business generally. Why? Because high tariff does not benefit any of these industries. They all produce more than the country consumes and the price of their products is governed by foreign markets, while all they buy is in a highly protected market. All of these industries have heavy tonnage, and on an average have the longest haul to seaboard and the large markets. The freight rates they have to pay are double what they should be. All of their products at this time are the lowest in price in the history of the country. Why should not freight rates be put back to the 1914 schedule and railroad labor be reduced to pre-war wages, and see that employes do a day's work for the wages they receive. Passenger and Pullman rates should also be reduced to pre-war prices.

The railroad operators would not need to go to the Interstate Commerce Commission and complain that the passenger busses and trucks are taking their business; they would have plenty to do.

The Railroad Brotherhood would not need to complain to Congress that they have one hundred and forty thousand men out of employment, and they want a six-hour day with no reduction in wages. They would have plenty for all of their number to do at ten hours a day with pre-war wages, and there are millions of men who would be glad to have such a position today.

Again considering the tariff question: A tariff for revenue and revenue only is all that any nation, in justice, should impose upon its people. The consumer is scarcely justified in paying a bonus for his necessities. People with large families consume the most and are the least able to pay a bonus to the government. Take, for instance, a high protective tariff such as we have had for the past ten years, and especially the Grundy-Hoover Tariff that is now in effect. What does that do for the people? For every one man that benefits by the present tariff a million people, if not more, are injured by it.

The tariff barriers, combines and railroads of the nation have pooled their interests. Years ago they fought organized labor bitterly. The unions gradually became stronger and stronger, until they had to reconcile with them and give them a share of the profits to which they were entitled.

They proposed to the unions: raise our tariff and railroad rates and we will consider your demands. The public voted for it and it was done. Here are the results: The tariff barriers, combines and railroads of the nation, along with all the large labor organizations, have combined for higher tariff, higher railroad rates, higher wages and shorted hours, and at the end of the year the laborer has only a living in most eases.

This condition developed in our country by class legislation since the Civil War. And what are the results? Two per cent of the people have accumulated 70 per cent of the entire wealth of the nation. This condition has increased more rapidly in the past ten years, and if the present system of government is not changed it will only be a short time until the combines and railroads will take the entire profits of the nation. Most of the wealth will accumulate in Wall street.

I still have faith in a democratic system of government and in the masses of the American people, especially since the election, November 4. I do not know of a man high in government affairs, running for office, that the people did not reward with high honors of office. There are several states in which, had I been a voter, I would have voted for Republicans because their records show that they are honest, fearless and stand by the people. I am an affiliated Democrat and believe in Democratic principles, equal rights for all and special privileges to none.

Referring again to high tariff: This has more to do with the present depression than any other cause. High tariff makes inflated values. The tariff barriers and stock gamblers control the majority of the stock of the nation. When prices begin to advance their stocks show large earning power and pay large dividends. They advertise their earnings and the public begins to buy. The stock still advances. Some sell when they feel they have a nice profit. The stocks still advance, and they buy again, possibly some other stock and make good on it, and so non through the inflated period.

At the close of the war when the Fordney-McCumber Tariff Bill went into effect the people all had plenty of money. They had plenty of work during the war period, and all they produced was sold at a good profit. Money came easy, and many of them took a chance on the stock market. Stock prices never would have gone so high or lasted so long if it had not been for this condition. Of course the stock gamblers and tariff barriers sold their stock to the public. When the crash came last fall the reports showed that the losses ran as high as a million a minute for days. The public should bear in mind that there is no intrinsic value in stock gambling. When one man makes money, some one looses. When a million a minute loss was going on the public was loosing the money, and the New York tariff barriers and stock gamblers got all the earnings of the nation during the war period, as well as all that was earned up to the stock crash and now have the money and the stocks. Every time we have had an inflated tariff since the Civil War the same thing has happened up until last fall when the Hawley-Smoot-Grundy Bill was passed, it failed. It had to fall, because the people had just been robbed of all their earnings, and blood cannot be squeezed out of a turnip.

Then the Hoover Administration called a special session of Congress to help the farmer on the same system. To put inflated values on farm products and advised the farmer to produce less, do less, employ less people and starve the people to make more money out of their products. This is the system under which the big manufacturer has worked with government protection. Chairman Legge, of the Farm Board, was chairman of the McCormick-Deering Farm Machinery Incorporation, and he worked it to perfection for the mammoth corporation. He made the farmer pay double what they should pay for their machinery, but when Chairman Legge undertook to help the farmer on the same system he utterly failed. He spent two hundred and fifty million dollars of the government's money and the farmer is in the worst condition now he has ever known in the history of nation. Why? Because the whole system is wrong. No government has the right to legislate in favor of manufacturers with a high tariff. If the government would keep hands off and let the law of supply and demand govern all prices this would take all graft out of politics and there would be no Grundy lobby organization in Washington spending millions every time Congress is in session, and spending millions every time we have an election, sending to Congress tariff barriers to force special legislation in favor of the classes against the masses and the consuming public.

Take our great Treasurer, A. W. Mellon, reported to be the greatest trasurer since the days of Hamilton. I would like to know what he has done, only to help the mutli-millionair in his own class. In the past ten years he has given back to large incorporations many millions of dollars—to help business—after the people had earned the money by inflated values by high tariff, and the money should have been used to pay off the war debt or kept in the treasury. At this time when millions of our people are out of work and starving that money should be used to relieve them, and it would help business. It did not help business to give it back to his class of people and never will. It only goes to show that the last three administrations believe in this system of government and are to blame for the conditions as they exist.

We have several representatives in Congress doing all in their power to put a stop to class legislation. I believe in two years more the people will be able to elect a Congress and President that will stop this class legislation. Such men as Joe Grundy and A. W. Mellon will not hold the reins of government. I believe in the system of government as our forefathers intended it to be and am ready to give my all to help maintain such a system of government, but the powers that rule today only make a cloak to hide behind of the great government that our forefathers gave us. It is up to the voters of our nation to drop party lines and see that men are nominated and elected that will stand for honest government. If the people fail to do this, this country will go Socialistic or Bolsheviki. The powers that rule today hold up their hands in holy horror at the Russian red flag, but they are to blame for the condition, and if the good people do not throw them out of office the Russian system will gain in this country thousands daily and the end will be a revolution, which we hope will never come to pass, but the American people will never bow their heads to the yoke that is set for them.

No nation has a right to legislate in favor of a manufacturer against a consumer, and a manufacturer has an equal right to buy what he needs in an open market. These should be inalienable God-given rights to the human family. Take the graft out of politics and out of business. Give every man an equal right to make a living. That is all honest people want and honest people are in the great majority if they have a chance to be honest, and by hard work make their living.

Under these conditions there would be no necessity for labor unions, but when people are robbed legally and loose their homes as millions are suffering today, is it any wonder we have bootleggers, bank robbers, murderers and outlaws generally? Ninety per cent of these very people would be good citizens if they had a chance to make a living by honest toil.

If the nations of the world would adopt these principles we would have no use for standing armies and battleships, and the people of the world would treat one another as human being, and the world would be a better and safer place in which to live.

J. W. M'CULLOUGH.

Suggestions for Orange Marmalade Service

Orange Marmalade Biscuits—Cut biscuit dough into small rounds, ¼ inch thick. Bake two rounds together, brushing lower round with melted butter before placing top round over it. Take from oven, lift top round and put one teaspoon marmalade in center of lower round of each biscuit. Replace top and serve immediately.

Marmalade Waffle—Butter hot waffle quickly. Cut in half and put one-half on the other, spreading marmalade between layers and on top.

Toast with Marmalade—Spread marmalade on hot buttered toast or French toast.

Bake Apple with Marmalade—Fill cavities of apples, which have been cored, with marmalade. Bake until tender.

Marmalade Sauce—Combine ¾ cup marmalade, ¼ cup lemon juice, ½ cup sugar and ¼ cup water and boil five minutes. Serve cold.

Marmalade Sundae——Serve marmalade over vanilla or chocolate ice cream. It is especially good with chocolate.

Orange Jelly and Marmalade—(Makes about 4 glasses jelly and 2 glasses marmalade)—Two oranges, 1 lemon, water, sugar. Slice unpeeled oranges and lemons very thin. Measure, and for each cup allow 4 cups water. Bring to boil. Boil 30 minutes.

For Jelly—Strain off 4 cups clear juice. Bring this juice to boil. Add ¾ cup sugar for each cup juice. Boil hard till it gives the jelly test of thick sheet like drops from the side of the spoon. Pour into sterilized glasses. Cover with paraffin when cold.

For Marmalade—Take remaining fruit and liquid, add ¾ cup sugar for each cup and proceed as when making jelly.

Find It In The Republican

Last Thursday the leading story in the rival paper across the way asked the people of the county to pick the history-making events in Oakland during 1930. It asked the people to do a little cataloging of the year's events—to jot them down in a book somewhere and file the record away for future reference.

But The Republican has saved its readers all that trouble. It has gone through its files for 1930 and has printed the happenings for 1930 in the last number, so if you follow the advice as given just clip the story out of The Republican and your labors are completed.

Meeting With Assemblers

A number of Oakland citizens, feeling that they had not been given a fair deal at the public meeting on Saturday at the Court House, arranged for a special meeting with the Delegates at 12:01 Monday morning to present a lot of matters for legislative attention. According to reports these will be given priority over the claims presented on Saturday.

In relation to the dog tax, Floyd Stahl, tonsorial artist, wanted a law requiring that if a person didn't get a haircut within six months that he would then come under the dog tax law and be required to pay license fees to barbers.

On Squatting—The Squatters Club demanded a law limiting the number who might be eligible for such designation. "There are becoming entirely too many squatters," Neil Fraley, the king of squats, exclaimed to Assemblymen Color, Mark and Bike. A law against squatting in public places was also suggested.

Rights of Pedestrians—The rights of pedestrians were discussed by members of the Amalgamated Society for the Prevention of Work. Slim Shaw, president, wanted the blame placed on the driver of a car when water from slushy streets spread over the sidewalks like a sprinkling wagon. Joe Spivis Betty Dawson claimed that a pedestrian had no rights. "He always gets left, no matter on which side of the road he is walking," Spivis said, and that closed the argument.

The Amalgamates tied up with the Squatters in favoring legislation continuing the unemployment situation.

Four high school boys, Bus Iman, Harley Dawson, Lou Lawton and Jumpin' Joe Sollars recommended the shortening of school hours from 11 to 1 with two hours off for lunch, three months vacation and all holidays free.

Johnny Waterfitz countered with a recommendation for a lengthening of the school term to thirteen months in the year. Water Colors suggested a compromise in which he suggested that the schools remain as they now are in respect to terms, administration, pay of teachers, but with steady advancement along the line as a goal.

Parking on Unimproved Highways—The menace of parking on improved highways was said not to be half as dangerous as the "parking" on unimproved roads. This was discussed at some length. Most of those who had children in the teens were in favor of prohibiting parking on unimproved roads, while a few stated that if parking was prohibited there, then the improved highways would be used.

An Interesting Fact

THE PURITANS

Vexatious questions naturally arise in any new and untried experiment, and espccially in the building of an empire. The experience of the proprietaries of Maryland was no exception in this respect.

One of the questions, difficule of solution and which for some time threatened the rule of the Lords Baltimore, arose in connection with the scttlement in Maryland of the Puritans.

When we consider that in the year 1643 the English Parliament was dominated by the Puritans and they desired to extend their influcnce to the American Colonies, we can not help but admire the manner with which Lord Baltimore met the situation. Aside from the fact that his Province needed inhabitants, the proprietary believed that if he could settle a portion of his territory with the religious sect then in the ascendency, he would be the better able to avoid any conflict with the British sovereign and his rule. Consequently he commissioned a Masachusetts citizen under the government of offer "liberty of religion and all other privileges" to anyone desiring to move to Maryland. This invitation, it seems, was not accepted. Later a similar invitation was extended to the Puritans of Virginia, which was accepted, and by 1649 a thousand had gone over into Maryland and settled, chiefly along the River Severn.

We arc very apt at this day to look upon the Puritans as a meek and nonresisting sect, but historical facts disprove this conclusion. Although they were informed that nothing would be required of them save obedience of the laws of the Province, yet they were so strongly imbued with characteristic bigotry and intolerance that with the advantages offered them they could not remain content.

In the very beginning, Baltimorc consented to a modification of the oath of fidelity, because his invited settlers objected to taking an oath of fealty to a papist. While they demanded religious freedom for themselves, yct they were much disturbed to be living under a government that granted religious freedom of worship to Roman Catholics, and when the opportunity came to join William Claiborne and Richard Bennett in the revolt against Lord Baltimore they welcomed the opportunity. The Puritan Revolution was the result, Governor Stone being put out of office, a council appointed to govern, with a prominent Puritan as president of the Assembly, which was summoned when Roman Catholics were disfranchised and a new so-called Toleration Act was passed, securing to all persons freedom of conscience—but such liberty of conscience was not extended to Catholics, Episcopalians or anybody else who disagreed with them.

But the Puritans did not reign for long. Lord Baltimore was not pleased when he learned that Governor Stone had surrendered the government without a struggle and reproved him.

In the "Battle of the Severn", which occurred when Stone sought to regain his seat, the proprietary forces were defeated and the Puritans, being in complete control, selzed the records of the Province and the property of those who had opposed them. Their high-handed and intolerant proceedings continued until, under Cromwell, the government of Maryland was returned to Lord Baltimore on his promise not to bring the offenders to justice and not to repeal the Toleration Act of 1649.

It is recorded that the flag carried by Governor Stone at the Battle of the Severn contained the colors and characteristic design of the Great Scal and was adopted as the legal flag of the State by the Generad Assembly of 1904 and ordered to be displayed from the State House during the sessions of the Assembly.

You can't go after elephants with bird shot; your methods must be in keeping with the type of people you are trying to reach.

There is developing among men of affairs a deeper sense of responsibility for the welfare of those who depend upon them for employment.

BABY OF SIX MONTHS IS CONSIDERED BIG CITIZEN

Health Department Advises how To Keep Child Well

By the time a baby in Maryland is six months old, he is of such importance that a special letter is addressed to his parents by the State Department of Health, in his behalf.

The letter advises them in regard to the care the baby should have to keep him well; to safe-guard him from the usual children's diseases and to protect him from smallpox and diphtheria. It also urges the parents to take the baby to their own doctor at regular intervals for examination and advice in regard to feeding and to the care necessary for healthy progress.

Here is what the letter says on some of these points:

Medical Oversight. A young baby should be taken to a physician at regular intervals, every month or two, for advice to the parents as to the feeding and care for the period ahead. This practice will enable the doctor to correct minor ailments before they become serious and will save money in the end.

Clothing and Care. The baby's clothing should be loose and comfortable, and adapted to the weather, not to the season. His feet should be kept warm. The baby is now actively interested in much that goes on in the home. Give him a chance to play and crawl, best on a blanket in a pen in a well ventilated room, or on a porch in good weather. Parents should enjoy their baby quitely, but should not have him perform for admiring friends or relations.

Protection from Infections. Most of the infectious diseases such as colds, measles, whooping cough, scarlet fever and tuberculosis, are spread through the secretions of the mouths and noses of persons already infected. Therefore, your baby should be kept away from any one who has a cough, cold or fever. If the baby develops a cold with even a slight fever, he should be kept in bed and the doctor should be called at once.

Smallpox and Diphtheria. It is now possible to protect your baby from these two dangerous diseases which used to destroy many infant lives. Vaccination against smallpox can be done with less discomfort between four and six months of age, and immunization against diphtheria between six and nine months. Consult your doctor.

Carlton Bowers Slips Away From Reform School But Is Recaptured

Carlton Bowers was re-arrested in Friendsville last Saturday and brought to the County Jail in Oakland, following his escape from the reform school in which he was placed following his conviction here last year on a charge of incorrigibility.

Reform school authorities notified Garrett county officials that Bowers had made his escape and to keep a lookout for him in this vicinity. He is being held in Oakland pending the decision of the judge as to whether to return him to the Reform school or to send him to the House of Correction to serve the remainder of his sentence.

TAKE STOCK OF PHYSICAL ASSETS DURING NEW YEAR

Must Always Remember One is in Business for Ones Health

No matter what other interests you have, remember you are also in business for your health. It is just as important—even more so—to face your resources and liabilities, so far as your health in concerned, as it is to check up on the capital and indebtedness in your bank account. So, don't forget to take stock of your physical assets when you make an inventory of your possessions at the beginning of the New Year, sums up the New Year's advice of Dr. R. H. Riley, Director of the Maryland Department of Health, to grown-ups throughout the State.

"Twenty years ago", Dr. Riley said, "twenty per cent of the deaths at all ages were those of babies under a year old. As a result of the more intelligent care now given, fewer babies die in proportion to the number born. Last year, out of 21,867 deaths at all ages, 2,386 or 11 per cent of the total, were under one year, 3.5 per cent were from one to five; 18 per cent were between five and forty; and 67 per cent—or two-thirds—were over forty.

"Heart disease, kidney diseases, cancer, tuberculosis, cerebral hemorrhage and apoplexy were responsible last year for 11,434 of the total at all ages, or over half of the deaths from all causes. Nearly all of these diseases have slow beginnings. In the majority, early recognition of the menacing condition, with prompt treatment in some instances, or with greater attention to the rules of hygienic living, as directed by the family physician, would mean the prolonging of many lives for much longer periods of health and usefulness.

"Every mother knows that the way to keep the well baby well, is through the regular medical supervision of the family doctor. Every school child expects, as a part of the regular school routine, to be examined by the school doctor, or the health officer. Grown-ups are slowly learning that it is better to prolong life, through periodical supervision, than to die prematurely.

"My New Year's advice to every grown-up in the State is:

Let you doctor be the auditor of your health account. If you have not been to him recently, go to him for a complete physical examination, with special reference to your heart and your circulatory system; your lungs and your breathing apparatus; your kidneys and your digestive apparatus; your hearing and your vision. Then stop in to see your dentist and let him complete the survey, and follow their advice.

"It is trite to say that you would do as much for your automobile, if you were starting out on a 365 days' drive. There is this difference. When your automobile begins to show wear and tear, you can buy spare parts, or if necessary, a new machine. You can't do that for the human machine. But you can do a great deal to preserve it and keep it running smoothly and capably, by having your doctor point out where weak places are beginning to develop and by adjusting your way of living, accordingly."

THE MINISTRY OF JOHN THE BAPTIST

LESSON TEXT—Luke 3:7-20.
GOLDEN TEXT—Bring forth therefore fruits worthy of repentance, and begin not to say within yourselves, We have Abraham to our father: for I say unto you, That God is able of these stones to raise up children unto Abraham.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus and John the Baptist.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus and John the Baptist.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—A Courageous Reformer.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Message of John the Baptist.

I. The Degeneracy of the Times (vv. 1, 2).

The Jews had sunk to a very low level of civil, moral and religious life. Luke carefully enumerates the civil and religious rulers in order to show the profligacy of the times and therefore the need of a messenger to call the people back to God and virtue. Caesar has been described as "talented, ambitious, cruel, licentious, infamous, inhuman." Civil rule was divided between four of Rome's vassals. Pontius Pilate a little later attained notoriety by unjustly and in a cowardly manner condemning Jesus to death. Herod, the son of Herod the Great, was a murderer. Annas and Caiaphas were corrupt ecclesiastical rulers.

II. The Nature of John's Ministry (vv. 3-6).

Out of the wilderness John flashed forth, preaching the baptism of repentance for the remission of sins (v. 3). The baptism was a sign of repentance. His ministry is declared to be a fulfillment of Isaiah's prophecy. He is described as one calling upon the nation to prepare for the coming of the Messiah. The only hope for the world is God's salvation through Jesus Christ. The valleys of righteousness need to be filled. The mountains and hills of sin need to be brought low. The crooked ways of commerce need to be straightened, and the rough ways of society and nations need to be smoothed. Let men

III. The Content of John's Message (vv. 7-18).

1. A denunciation of sin (vv. 7, 8). He called the people "a generation of vipers." He charged them with being essentially wicked and deceitful. Knowing the subtle hypocrisy of these Jews, he demanded evidence of their sincerity.

2. An announcement of judgment (v. 9.) He declared that the ax was laid at the root of the tree and that the tree not bringing forth fruit was to be hewn down and cast into the fire. John made it very plain that for their sins they should be called into judgment. To be brought face to face with judgment has a sobering effect upon men. Paul's preaching of a judgment to come made Felix tremble (Acts 24:25). While John preached sin and judgment, he accompanied it with the assurance of pardon on condition of repentance.

3. Instructions to the inquirers (vv. 10-14). (1) The people (vv. 10, 11). Each man was to turn from his besetting sin and show love and kindness to his fellow men. Clothing and food were to be given to those who had need. The people were to turn from a life of selfishness and greed and do unto others as they would be done by. (2) Publicans (vv. 12, 13). These taxgatherers who were guilty of greed and oppression were not asked to give up their occupation, but to exact only that which was appointed by law. (3) The soldiers (v. 14). These were probably the policemen of that day, at least men on military duty. They were to refrain from false accusation and doing violence to men, and to be content with their wages.

4. Testimony to Jesus (vv. 15-18). The people were musing in their hearts as to whether John was indeed the Messiah. When John perceived this he, with fine humility, declared that his mission was so lowly by comparison with that of Christ that he would be unworthy to perform the menial act of a slave in loosing the lachet of his shoes. John baptized with water, but Christ would baptize with the Holy Ghost and with fire.

IV. John's Imprisonment (vv. 19, 20).

Because of his reproof of Herod for his lewdness and other sins, John went to the dungeon and eventually was beheaded. God's faithful prophets are usually despised by the world, and some are even imprisoned, burned, or beheaded.

Faith

It is the wind that carries the ship across the waves; but the wind is powerless unless the hand of the boatman is held firmly upon the rudder, and that rudder is set hard against the wind. This is the attitude of steadfast faith to divine omnipotence. We hold the rudder; God fills the sails. It is not the rudder that carries the ship, but it is the rudder which catches the wind which carries the ship. And so God keeps us in perfect peace while we are stayed in him.—A. B. Simpson.

His Plaid Golf Socks

By HELEN ST. BERNARD

(Copyright.)

"A BIRTHDAY present for you, Gil," said Mrs. Gilbert Stone as she placed a package before her husband. "A little late but Lizette never gets her presents off on time."

It was an oblong box, securely tied. "Not handkerchiefs, anyway," remarked the recipient. "Ties, I s'pose?"

"S'pose you open it and see. Here let me untie it for you. You make me nervous. Mrs. Manning called today. Asked me to play bridge at her table at the Country club Thursday afternoon. They are so hospitable to strangers out here in Cloverlawn."

"Better go slow on accepting those invitations, Milly. As I told you when we bought this place, I will not join the Country club or play golf. They may argue it is good business, but by George! If I have to put on short plaid panties and those devilish loud socks and knock a little pill around through the grass. . . . Good lord! What—is—it!"

Mildred dangled his birthday gift before his eyes. "Golf socks!"

Gil groaned and rested his face in his hand. "Golf socks! Where in thunder did Lizette get the idea that I played golf!"

"Because we moved out here to Cloverlawn, I presume. I think I did mention that the links were just back of the house and that there was a pretty club house. You know, both she and Dave think that anyone who doesn't play golf . . . well, they are pretty socks, anyway."

The plaid golf socks were on the living room table in their tissue wrapping when Mr. and Mrs. Anthony, neighbors, came in for their first call.

"A-ha!" remarked Mr. Anthony as he fingered them between thumb and forefinger. "Pretty nifty, I'll say. The person who picked these out, knew her stuff. The wife?"

"My sister," informed Gil shortly. "She has been buying golf socks for my brother-in-law for years and knows good ones, I guess. Shall we play bridge?"

The next evening when Gil returned home, Mildred informed him Mr. Anthony had left a new mashie which he wished Gil would try out. He would look him up on Saturday for a foursome.

"Ye-ah, I'll try it ont," Gil growled. " erlawn until he was exhausted. It seems there's a group of men coming out Saturday to inspect the golf course with a view to bringing a tournament here, and I'll be darned if he hasn't put me on the committee to go around the course with them. His wife's going to ask you to be one of the hostesses at the club that afternoon. Manning has got the idea from Anthony that I'm a golfer! Of all the blasted. . .

"And that means?" suggested Mildred hiding a smile.

"Ye-ah," he growled. "Rub it in. Of course, it means short pants and those devilish socks Lizette sent me. I'll have to doll up like a luny Scot . . . but I warn you, Milly! If you look at me—once—I'll . . . I'll . . . But as a Cloverlawn investor and supposedly interested in the development out here, I must show my civic pride and make a darned fool of myself."

Mildred looked very cool and charming in her light georgette dress and big green hat as she presided over one of the tea tables at the Country club the following Saturday afternoon. She looked about for Gil. He was not to be seen anywhere. Mr. Manning was engaged in seeing to the comfort of the guests and Mr. Anthony, as usual, was telling about his recent admission to the "Hole-in-One-Club." Gil probably had had enough and had shed the golf outfit for a cold shower and flannels, or perhaps the oily overalls in the garage

"If you are as enthusiastic about Cloverlawn as Gil is, Mrs. Stone," said Mr. Manning leaning over the table, "we sure have gained two real live assets to our community. By George, that husband of yours. . . ."

"Yes, I know . . . but where is he? I haven't seen him. . . ."

"Where is he? He borrowed my clubs and is taking a lesson from Scotty, the pro. Says he is rusty on the game and wants to brush up before next week."

One week later, at the dinner table, Mildred asked laconically:

"Have you written Lizette and thanked her for your birthday present?"

"No, by George, I haven't. Too darned busy. Got a birdie on the fourth hole tonight . . . must ask her to send me some more like them. . . ."

"Just another pair of devilish plaid golf socks. . . ." grinned Mildred.

Finger Sensitiveness

As the result of an experiment dealing with the left hand, it has been found that the index finger was most sensitive. The middle finger and thumb are next, being about the same; then the little finger, and finally the ring finger.

...gton ...coun... ...lume ...rican People, says:

"When he (Washington) had written his farewell to the army from his headquarters at Rocky Hill (November 2, 1783), he embraced his officers and comrades in arms in a last affectionate leave-taking at the Faunce's Tavern in New York, December 4th, and delivering up his commission to he Congress sitting at Annapolis, December 23, he returned for a little respite to his home at Mt. Vernon to which through these long years his thoughts had reverted with an ever-increasing longing; but the very next year saw him upon the mountains again observing what lands were to be had there and studying once more the best means of communication between the East and the West. The primary object of his visit was to procure good lands for himself and for old comrades who had made him their agent and adviser in that matter; but this statesman's eye apprised him of the full meaning of the new migration now afoot along all the western border. For one thing he saw how serious a situation it might prove should this body of settlers, sure to grow greater and more masterful from year to year, continue for long to look back upon almost impenetrable mountains piled between them and the eastern ports and highways. Their natural outlet, when once the mountains were well behind them, would be the Mississippi, their natural highway and stream which ran to the Gulf. It was possible that they might see their chief advantage in a connection with the Spaniards at New Orleans rather than with the well nigh inaccessible eastern settlements on the Atlantic seaboard—even with the English again by the highway of the lakes and the St. Lawrence.

"The western settlers, he declared, stand as it were upon the pivot, the touch of a feather would turn them away.

"He returned home to push again with a renewed vigor the project which for twenty years he had at heart and which had in these new days of independence, as it seemed to him, become a sheer political necessity—the opening of the upper reaches of the Potomac to navigation. In order that the East might there at any rate be linked with the streams which ran down into the Ohio. This had been one of the plans of the old Ohio company of which the Washingtons and Fairfaxes had been members. The revolution had interrupted its plans; there was now added reason for renewing them."

If to Washington belongs the credit for being the first to see the importance of communication between East and West in maintaining the union of the new and rapidly spreading nation, it was Albert Gallatin who suggested its actual location.

According to an often-repeated incident, Gallatin made his suggestion unceremoniously to Washington before he had even been presented to that dignity, which vexed the Father of his Country not a little. It is said that while Washington was on his western survey trip, he sat before a rude table in his cabin puzzling, in his deliberate, painstaking way, over a map of that territory, seeking an outlet through the mountains. Gallatin who had also come West for the purpose of studying the topography of the country, came upon Washington thus engaged and, without troubling to announce himself, pointed with his cane to Laurel Hill saying, "There is the only practical route." Angry and startled, the courtly Washington took off his glasses and glared in speechless rebuke at the offending intruder. Then he put on his glasses again and re-examined the map. At last he turned to Gallatin and said: "You are right, sir."

"This," says Judge J. M. Lowe, president of the National Old Trails Road Association, "was the beginning of the ultimate definition or location of the Old Cumberland (National) Road. It was to begin at Cumberland, the end of Tidewater on the Potomac, and extend in a generally western direction to the Ohio River at or near Wheeling.

"But about this time, John Jay, who then held the office of Secretary of Foreign Affairs* * * *was bidden by Congress to negotiate a treaty of commerce with Don Diego Gardoqui, the newly arrived representative of Spain, to surrender the negative of the whole Mississippi, which he thought was not needed, in exchange for the commercial advantages which would redound to the profits of the merchants of the shipping colonies.

"In the instant cry of hot protest that came out of the West apprised the Eastern politicians of the new world springing into existence in the West, and notified them that the new frontier did not end at the Alleghany Mountains. The proposed treaty was not adopted. * * *

"The committee appointed by Mr. Jefferson to lay out and establish the road stated in their report 'That the tendency of this road will be to cement the states and thus preserve the union.' So its mission at the beginning had for its purpose the great and patriotic one of saving the Union which then was in great danger of dissolution, and which the farseeing statesman's eye of Washington alone seemed to comprehend.

"The act of Congress established it as a national highway was signed by Mr. Jefferson in 1806 and shortly thereafter the act of construction began, but the finances for its construction had been provided for in the act of Congress admitting Ohio into the Union in 1802, whereby a certain percentage of monies arising from the sale of public lands should be applied to the building of this road. This same provision entered into the acts admitting the states of Indiana, Illinois and Missouri, and a road was thus carried through to completion and pronounced by Henry Clay, when finished, as the greatest piece of construction work of its kind in all history, superior in every respect to the famous Appian Way.

"Then, from time to time, Congress by additional acts extended the road as nearly on an air line as was practicable westward to the Mississippi 'at or near' the city of St. Louis. In the effort to reach as many capitals as possible, the road necessarily bore to the southwest from Indianapolis in order to take in Vandalia, the then capital of Illinois. Had Springfield at that time been the capital, no doubt the road would have continued, as it had begun, on an airline through Springfield, and ultimately due west from that point.

"It is a curious coincidence that about that time, when the eastern end of this road was being established, Daniel Boone and his two sons, Nathan and Daniel, were busy surveying and cutting a road across Missouri, long known as the Boonslick Road.

"Afterward, in 1824, just after Missouri had been admitted to the Union, her first as well as her greatest senator, Thomas H. Benton, brought forward a bill to continue the old Cumberland (National) Road on west through what was then called the Indiana country to end at a foreign country—Sante Fe. The road was surveyed and established under that bill, and thus it came about that the Old Cumberland (National) Road was established throughout its entire length by acts of Congress as a national highway."

The Old Cumberland Road was long the center for bitter disputes, arising from disagreements as to whether its maintenance should be financed by the federal government or by the individual states through which it ran. The question even got into politics.

Says Mr. Lowe: "When the Cumberland Road was suggested as a national highway, leading from Cumberland, Md., to St. Louis, Mo., to be constructed by the general government, Jefferson doubted the authority of the government to enter upon such a system of internal improvement, and said it could only be done with the consent, at least, of the states. Thereupon Virginia, Maryland, and Pennsylvania enacted laws authorizing the general government to construct such highway through their states, to be taken up (as originally planned) at Cincinnati, which was then on the edge of the Indian country, and carried on from that point to St. Louis. As built, it was located considerably north of this line and through Zanesville, Columbus, Indianapolis, etc. Congress passed the necessary act, commissioners were appointed to survey and locate the road, and Mr. Jefferson approved it. At that time McAdams had not impressed his name upon road building and the road was not constructed in places of dirt, plank, or split poles (corduroy), and in a little while became absolutely impassable throughout much of its length. Its improvement afterwards became so necessary that it was a campaign issue in 1824—the "paramount" issue of that campaign. Mr. Adams, Henry Clay and John C. Calhoun advocated the rebuilding of the road, one of the few questions on which they ever agreed. Jackson and Crawford advocated it half-heartedly; so strong was public sentiment in its favor that they hesitated to oppose it, and when Congress convened the act passed the House of Representatives by a large majority and almost unanimously in the Senate, there being but seven votes recorded against it. Monroe, who was then President, vetoed the bill. This disastrous veto left the road in a hopelessly ruinous condition. Monroe's veto message, regarded at that time as a great state paper, was afterwards reversed by him.

"In 1836 the road was abandoned and turned back to the states."

The section of the National Old Trails Road running from Sante Fe to Socoro, New Mexico, a stretch of one hundred and fifty miles, is said to be the oldest road in America, established by a Spaniard, Don Juan Onate in 1608.

The National Old Trails Road is sponsored by the Daughters of the American Revolution, who have undertaken the marking of spots of historic interest along the route. It was also selected as a memorial or "gold star" road by the national society of relatives of World War veterans.

Aside from its historic interest, the famous old road possesses great attractions in the form of rare and magnificent scenery.

The BEST Gray Hair Remedy is Home Made

To half pint of water add one ounce bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and one-fourth ounce of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. It will gradually darken streaked, faded or gray hair and make it soft and glossy. Barbo will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.

WEDDING OF GEN. GEORGE WASHINGTON, JAN. 6, 1759

When the Young Virginian Met and Won Martha Custis

So much has been written on the more spectacular phases of George Washington's life that it is sometimes difficult to appreciate the really human qualities of the man. One of the finest stories ever told of Washington is that of his courtship of Martha Custis and their subsequent marriage. In this story are revealed some of the best and most attractive qualities of America's greatest hero. The firm, strong-willed leader of men who unflichingly would face death on the battlefiled found that he needed the companionship and helpful counsel of a woman. Fortunately, he met the sort of woman he wanted to preside in his home, and they were married on January 6, 1759.

The story of George Washington's marriage to Martha Custis is told by the Division of Information and Publication of the George Washington Bicentennial Commission, in a statement intended to call attention to the 172nd anniversary of this notable event.

George Washington first met the Widow Custis at the home of Major Chamberlayne in May, 1758. The lady had then been a widow for about a year She had married Colonel Daniel Parke Custis when she was seventeen years old, and was left at his death eight years later with two small children and a considerable fortune. Although it is said that Washington was formally presented to Mrs. Custis for the first time by Chamberlayne, it is almost certain that the famous soldier and the charming widow had at least heard of each other before that time.

Fate must have taken a hand in the events of that day in May when Colonel Washington was detained at [illegible]liam's Ferry over the Pamunkey by his friend, Major Chamberlayne, who earnestly pressed upon the young man an invitation to stay his journey and enjoy the hospitality of the plantation. But Washington was hastening to Williamsburg where he intended to ask the Governor in person for men and supplies for the frontier, which previous urgent letters had failed to obtain. Chamberlayne was insistent, however, and when it appeared that all his importunities must fail to alter the plans of the Colonel, he informed the latter that he was then entertaining the charming Mrs. Custis. This argument, apparently, was potent enough to convince the young warrior where all others had been vain, and Washington consented to remain only long enough to partake of the meal which was then being prepared.

Bishop, the personal servant of Washington, who had served under Braddock, was instructed to hold the Colonel's horse in readiness for a speedy departure as soon as dinner was over. The old soldier knew very well his master's reputation for punctuality, and since the business at Williamsburg was important, he fully expected that this wait would be a brief one. But the dinner hour passed, the sun sank lower into the west, and still Washington lingered. At last in the warm dusk of the May evening, the faithful Bishop received orders to stable the horses for the night and the journey was postponed until the next day.

There is something amusing in this scene of budding romance, although it is no wonder that Washington tarried. Martha Custis was beautiful, attractive and accomplished. She has been described as being short, slightly plump and of engaging personality. Certainly the Colonel's interest in the lady was matched by her own interest in the renowned young soldier, and such mutual agreeableness was surely sufficient to crowd prosaic business into the background.

However, the Governor had to be visited, so the next day found Washington on his way to Williamsburg. But as soon as the business which took him there was taken care of, the now fully smitten Colonel proceeded to the White House, the Custis home on the Pamunkey, where it appears Mrs. Custis expected him. When he left there he must have been in high spirits, for he took with him the lady's promise to marry him as soon as he should finish his military service on the Ohio.

Washington did not see his betrothed again for several months, for it was December before he returned from this expedition. His duties fulfilled, the Colonel resigned from the army and hastened plans for the wedding. It was during Washington's absence on the frontier that he wrote the only letter to Martha which alone remains of his prenuptial correspondence with her. This dignified and gravely tender note is dated Fort Cumberland, Md., July 20, 1758:

"We have begun our march to the Ohio. A courier is starting for Williamsburg, and I embrace the opportunity to send a few words to one whose life is now inseparable from mine. Since that happy hour when we made our pledges to each other, my thoughts have been continually going to you as to another self. That All-powerful Providence may keep us both in safety, is the prayer of your faithful and ever affectionate friend,

G. WASHINGTON."

It still is uncertain whether the marriage occurred in Saint Peter's Church or at the bride's home, the White House. At any rate, the Rev. Mr. Mossom, rector of Saint Peter's, officiated at the ceremony. Jared Sparks, one of Washington's earliest biographers, is the authority for the date of the wedding, which he established as January 6. But no matter whether the wedding took place at the White House or in the church, it was a notable event and was attended by a great number of Virginia's prominent people. The Governor himself was there with civil and military authorities, and many of the socially elite. Only a traditional account of the festivities on that occasion exists today, but ceretainly the celebration left nothing lacking.

Martha's wedding gown has been described by one writer: " . . . a satin quilt, over which a heavy white silk, inter-woven with threads of silver, was looped back with white satin ribbons, richly brocaded in a leaf pattern. Her bodice was of plain satin, and the brocade was fastened on the bust with a stiff butterfly bow of ribbon. Delicate lace finished the low, square neck. There were elbow sleeves revealing a puff and frill of lace. Strings of pearls were woven in and out of her powdered hair. Her high-heeled slippers were of white satin, with brilliant buckles."

The attractive appearance of the bride was equalled by that of the tall, well-built bridegroom. Always particular over his dress, Washington, on this occasion, was elegantly arrayed and, according to all accounts, was the most gallantly magnificent figures in all that assemblage.

At last Mount Vernon had a mistress, but months elapsed after the wedding before the young bride saw her future home. Washington had just been elected to the House of Burgesses, so the young couple remained in Williamsburg while that Chamber remained in session until May. When Washington did return with his wife to his beautiful estate on the Potomac, the place became home to both of them for the remainder of their lives.

Washington's marriage was a singularly happy one. In Martha he found all those womanly qualities which were needed to supplement those of his own character. Who can measure the value of the encouragement she must have given him during the weary days of the Revolution? Certainly she was always a faithful and devoted wife, and the Father of his Country owed a great deal to her for the measure of success he attained. Among the anniversaries of the many important dates in the life of George Washington this one of his wedding holds an element of human interest which no doubt is appreciated by all of his countrymen.

"DADDY"

By FANNIE HURST

(©, 1930, McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

IF THERE ever had been any doubts in the mind of Al Koken as to why the slim flower girl named Dot Feverill had married him, he was not entitled to them.

Dot herself, although too young to realize much of her own psychology, had never treated him with any more than the affectionate solicitude of the very young toward one who is considerably older and benign.

When Dot Feverill was twenty-one, as lovely as a jonquil, and with a voice that promised to be an operatic one, she developed a spot on her lung. There was nothing of the conventional "angel" about Al Koken. He was a fat, middle-aged stock broker, who had come to know Dot through a friend of his, a business manager of one of the largest operatic companies in America. Her case was pathetic, her beauty appealing, and her plight appalling.

It was Koken's money that sent her to Arizona for two years; it was the pudgy little hand of the fat old bachelor that wrote out the generous monthly checks.

Dot's recovery was only partial. Her condition responded to the high, clean western air. Her health did improve greatly and the old beauty flowed back into her face. But at the end of two years, when she returned to New York to resume her work, the sad truth revealed itself that there were only certain climates where Dot could thrive. The old lung condition began to reassert itself; she began to wilt again.

Humbly, reverently, secretly and deeply in love was Al Koken. It is doubtful, had the return of Dot to a state of health been a permanent one, that this deep-rooted love of Al for Dot would ever have found voice. He was a timid soul, kindly, naive to a degree that was incredible.

For a man-of-the-world, at least of-the-world to the extent that a successful broker on Wall Street is bound to be, he was as uncomplex as a child in certain of the ways in which you expect the average man to be versed. Al Koken had attained his bachelorhood (he was fifty-six when he met Dot) without more than a half dozen women having crossed his path, and those half dozen casually. There are more men like that in the world than we realize, chiefly because their stories are too eventless to project themselves.

The quality of gratitude that Dot Feverill gave Al Koken transcended even her own understanding. From her teens, life had been a precarious performance for her. Hers had been the perilous and somewhat melodramatic position of a really beautiful girl, without parents, obliged at an early age to get out on her own. The gift of a voice asserting itself had not made her position any easier. So many things could have happened to Dot which did not, chiefly because when she was barely in her twenties a man of the caliber of Al Koken had providentially crossed her path.

How it came about, after her return to the east from Arizona, and the subsequent relapse into ill health, that Al Koken was finally to find the courage to ask her to marry him was never clear in his own mind.

She seemed so beyond his reach; she seemed so out of his ken. From the first day he had clamped eyes upon her, he had realized that, and had felt humbly grateful for his capacity to serve her as a friend.

In any event, the pathos of it gave Al Koken the courage, and into the safe retreat of this kind man's sheltering arms there crept gratefully the wounded and the frightened Dot.

The marriage that resulted was one of those built on passionate adoration on one side and grateful, sweet humility on the other.

The happiest day in Al Koken's life was when he closed his affairs in the East, pocketed a large nest-egg of the money he had earned and saved throughout the long years of his bachelorhood, and turned his face, with the frail, lovely one of his bride, toward the more benign climate of southern California.

As Al Koken used to say to himself in the period that followed, those precious first years of his marriage contained more happiness than any one man had a right to expect of a life-time. The Al Kokens took up their abode in what was literally a castle in the air; a luxurious Spanish villa that hung from a mountainside that faced the placidity of the Pacific ocean.

And what happened subsequently was understandable to him, because in the depth of his happiness he was still capable of a strange wisdom; the wisdom of realizing the inevitability of what was to come. It was not that the lovely Dot loved him less, or that her gratefulness to him as her "Daddy" ever wavered. The sentiment which was inscribed in her sweet, scrawling hand on a photograph of herself that hung in his room, "To my darling Daddy from a grateful Dot," was none the less sincere because one day, one inevitable day, Dot was to answer the call of youth to youth.

A young engineer surveying on the mountainside strolled into the den one afternoon for a drink of water, which Dot herself served to him out of a dipper made of a gourd.

The subsequent thing that happened was as natural as the sunset dipping into the Pacific or the beautiful soaring of seagulls about the castle-in-the-air, or the sound of Dot's laughter before it became tinged with the pain and the ecstasy of what was happening to her.

Al, tied into a knot inside of himself with the pain of it, was conscious of the setting of the sun of his dream almost before the first shadows had come to assert themselves; Al knew that Dot and the young engineer were drifting and carrying with them his happiness, almost before they knew it themselves.

And the heartbreaking part of it was that she fought so against it, struggled with her little strength; and yet from the first she was helpless. One who knows inner tragedy might surmise with what complete heartbreak, what devastating wretchedness, Dot might have carried on her part of the compact with Al, had it not been for the delicate and subtle wisdom of the fat little man.

He saw it coming, and he braced himself; more than that, it was his initiative that was finally to bring about the collapse of his marriage. He made easy for these two young people that which without his assistance would have been intolerably difficult. He placed their happiness in their hands. He did the unthinkable, he stepped out of his paradise that another might step in.

And yet in his heart, Al Koken's shrewdness again asserted itself. He knew that in reality, whether he remained in it or out of it, actually his paradise was finished. His song was sung.

In the young engineer Dot had met her mate and had responded to the mysterious call.

Al Koken lives by himself in a small bungalow down near the sound of the sea. Dot, married to the young engineer, lives in another castle-in-the-air that overhangs another crag of another mountainside.

Her adoration of Al Koken is something that has never diminished, but on the contrary has increased. Her picture still hangs on his walls, "To my darling Daddy from a grateful Dot." The quality of her happiness with the young engineer is impeccable. There is but one fly in their ointment. As the babies come and the responsibilities grow, financial pinch is upon them.

Sometimes Al wonders to himself why he does not settle upon the young pair a substantial life income, but in his heart he knows why. Every so often, full of sweet distress at her mission, Dot comes down to the little bungalow by the sea secretly, asking her inexpressible friend for the largesse of a loan to tide them over a bad spot in their finances.

Al waits for these occasions a little relentlessly.

To him, there is nothing in the world left to give him happiness but the sound of her voice appealing to him. "Dear Daddy—please—will you help us just this once more—"

All Oceans Denoted by the Term "Seven Seas"

Today the term "the seven seas" embraces the Arctic and Antarctic, the North and the South Atlantic, the North and the South Pacific, and the Indian oceans. At one time in Europe it signified (1) the North sea; (2) the White sea; (3) the Baltic sea; (4) the Mediterranean sea; (5) the Adriatic sea; (6) the Aegean sea; and (7) the Black sea. If used at the time of the Dispersion no one knows what it designated; but, in Classic times, the seven seas were: (1) Mare Internum—the Mediterranean; (2) Mare Aegaeum—the Aegean, east of Greece; (3) Mare Adriaticum—the Adriatic—(4) Mare Tyrrhenum—the Tyrrhenian, between Italy and Sardinia, Corsica, and Sicily; (5) Mare Ionicum—the Ionian, between Greece and southern Italy, the land of the Sicuil (Sicilians); (7) Mare Sardoum—west of Sardinia and Corsica.

East of Suez the seven seas are (1) Caspian sea; (2) Aral sea; (3) Okhotsk sea; (4) Japan sea; (5) China sea; (6) Arabian sea; (7) Red sea. In Polynesia are the following: (1) Celebes; (2) Sulu; (3) Java; (4) Banda; (5) Arafura; (6) Coral; (7) Timor. In the Western hemisphere we have (1) Bering sea; (2) Beaufort sea; (3) Greenland sea; (4) Lincoln sea; (5) Baffin sea; (6) Caribbean sea; (7) the Yucatan channel, called by the Mexicans "Mar de las Antillas."

George W. Stimpson says, in his "Nuggets of Knowledge" (p. 161): "The seven seas is a figurative term denoting all the seas and oceans of the world. . . . It was part of the vernacular of several nations long before some of the oceans named were known. . . . The seven seas are referred to in the literature of the ancient Hindus, Chinese, Persians, Romans and other nations. . . . To the Persians the seven seas were the streams forming the Oxus river; the Hindus applied the name to bodies of water in the Punjab. Near Venice, Italy, is a group of salt-water lagoons which the Romans called Septem Maria, the Latin phrase for seven seas."—Literary Digest.

Name It and Take It!

A young bride who has just forsaken the teacher's desk in the schoolroom to give all her attention to home-making was telling at her club the other day of her experience in cooking:

"I had pie today, at dinner," she told the other clubwomen. "A custard with banana flavor, and it didn't taste like anything."

Billy Was a He-Man

By GENEVRA COOK

(Copyright.)

IT WAS an exciting day for Billy Burton when his father came home. Billy was standing in the middle of the roadway in front of Grandmother's, lifting with the sturdy strength of an eight-year-old the frail body of little Lou Ellen, and swinging her high over his head, while she made trills of delighted laughter. A breath-taking man in a khaki uniform with a shiny silver on the front swooped him up in strong arms, and called loudly: "Mary! Mary!" Then Mother came running with a funny crying sound, and Billy jumped up and down and shouting, "My father's a captain in the army. He's come home from China. My father . . ." and little Lou Ellen sat forlorn by on the sidewalk, quite forgotten.

After that they went to the Fort to live. Lou Ellen, who was a sort of second cousin of Billy's, and whose Daddy was only a lieutenant, went there to live, too. One night, when he was lying awake, he heard his father saying his name.

"It's a shame, Mary," Father was saying, "the way you've been bringing that boy up to be such a sissy! Why, he doesn't swim, or play football, or anything! Just plays hour after hour with a three-year-old baby—and a girl, at that!"

Mother's voice was low, and Billy couldn't hear her answer, but Father said, "Well, I'll take hold of him, and before long teach him to be a regular he-man!"

It was the next Saturday that Billy's father took him over to the riding hall and began to give him lessons in horseback riding. Billy went without question or comment, but he understood that this was the beginning of his being made into a "regular he-man." He watched wistfully for every sign of approval from his hero, his sober face breaking out into a delighted smile when Father would look down from his horse Ginger and say briefly, "Good!" On the way home, when he saw Lou Ellen waving at him from her front steps, he pretended to be busy with a button on his jacket, and he did not make any reply.

All summer Billy worked hard at his riding. And finally he was allowed to ride Chesty, and to learn to jump! And only when Father had gone away from the Fort did he swing Lou Ellen over his head, or play tag with her.

He felt a little guilty about Lou Ellen, she was such a plucky little sport about it. When he saw her playing all alone on her front porch (she was the only child at the Fort under seven) he felt like a deserter. But he hardened his heart. He knew his father wanted him to be a "regular he-man."

At the end of the summer there was a big horse show. Billy's father's eyes shone as he told Billy about it! "Look here, Son," he said, "if you get to be a really good horseman, I'll let you ride with me in the Pair Jumping!" And when it came time for the entries there were their names posted together: "Pair Jumping: Captain Lester, Captain Drummond; Lieutenant Glenn, Miss Rowen; Captain Burton, William Burton."

Day after day they put Ginger and Chesty over the fences, over the post and rail. And it was up to Billy to win, really, for of course Father would easily be the best! Up to Billy to win, for his father!

Everyone at the Fort came out to the horse show. When the six horses in the Pair Jumping came into the ring, every one applauded and shouted, especially when they saw Ginger and Chesty, with Captain Burton and Billy up. Billy sat proud and intent; he had to win for Father, to show Father he was a "he-man."

They had to take four jumps, two going away from the wide, open door that led to the street, two going back toward it. Riding easily side by side, they cleared the first! The second! It was just as they turned to face the door that Billy, eyes for a moment lifted from the course, saw through the open door Lou Ellen come dashing down the street, clinging wildly to the mane of a running pony. Just as they came opposite the door, the pony gave a lurch, and Lou Ellen spilled in a little white heap on the road.

Billy's mind working wildly. He would lose the race for Father! He would be a sissy to stop being a he-man to pick up a baby! The crowd gasped to see Billy Burton's horse make a sudden smooth dash for the door.

Without pausing in his stride, Chesty reached the still figure in the road, hesitated just long enough for Billy to dismount (he was too small to reach down), gather the limp Lou Ellen in his arms, and mount again, and went off at a smooth canter toward the Fort hospital.

Twenty minutes later Billy Burton came slowly out onto the hospital steps to face his father. He had not heard the doctor say: "Five minutes later, Captain Burton, and it would have been too late to operate. Your son. . . ." Billy, raising his brown eyes bravely to face the consequences, was surprised to see tears in his father's eyes, and to hear an unsteady tremble in his father's voice, as he grasped his hand, and said, "I'm proud of you, Billy. You won a race that shows you are a regular he-man, my son!"

Oak Lodge has been an outstanding organization in this community for the past thirty-five years. We wish each member a Happy and Prosperous New Year.

Fire has reduced the taxable property in Mountain Lake Park and Loch Lynn during the past twenty-five or thirty years to the extent of over $180,000. The loss in taxes to the two communities has been considerable. More, we believe, than it would cost to install an adequate system of fire protection. The list, with conservative estimate of values, is as follows:

Rev. Young, $1,500; Hayden & Eckles store and contents, $5,000; Assembly Hotel and three cottages, $8,000; Bailey house, $3,500; Miss Swann, $500; Col. and Mrs. J. W. Traver, $3,000; Cornwell house, $1,500; Yost cottage, $1,000; ice house, $3,500; the postoffice building, $5,000; Crane property, when three lives were lost, $4,000; Dare house, $4,500; Deveney house, $5,000; Baldwin cottage, $2,000; Stollifer house, $3,000; Hammond livery stable, $500; Mrs. Allen's garage, $300; Loch Lynn Hotel, $60,000; Hicks House, $8,000; O'Donnell home, $1,500 besides other properties, including the Mountain Lake Park planing mill.

C. & P. TELEPHONE CO. WILL SPEND $4,840,000

Many Extensions and Improvements to System Are Planned

Extensions and improvements to the system of the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company of Baltimore City in 1931 will involve gross expenditures of $4,840,000. This year the company estimates that 10,500 telephones will be added to the system as compared with 8,200 last year. On December 31, there were about 216,280 telephones in Maryland. At the end of 1931 the company estimates it will have about 226,800 telephones in service, according to a statement made by Frederick J. Irish, general manager.

Major projects contemplated, which will provide employment for the company's installation, construction and operating forces during the year include outside plant, consisting of additional pole lines, exchange and toll circuits, aerial and underground cable and underground conduit, $2,474,000; telephones, private branch exchange systems and other equipment on the subscribers' premises, $1,637,000; switchboards and central office equipment additions, $554,000; land, buildings and additions, and miscellaneous items, $175,000.

Additions and betterments to the telephone system in Maryland completed during the past year, in addition to routine construction in every section of the state involved expenditures of about $5,816,000. These projects included the conversion of about 14,500 telephones, formerly operated from the Homewood central office in Baltimore, to dial operation in the Chesapeake, Belmont, and University offices. This necessitated the erection of an additional story to the Homewood building. Buildings were constructed for the new Riverside and Curtis central offices which were placed in service during the year; new switchboards and associated apparatus were installed and placed in service at Hyattsville, Crisfield and Poolesville. Other improvements in Maryland central offices included new storage battery installations at Liberty and Gilmor, Baltimore; Cumberland, Hagerstown, and Salisbury; additional telephone repeaters for improving transmission on long distance lines were installed at Baltimore and Cumberland. At the latter office a new testboard was also installed.

A telephone typewriter service was installed in Baltimore for the police department, connecting the various precincts with headquarters. Other telephone typewriter services were established between Baltimore and Salisbury and Baltimore and Littletown, Pa.

Additional underground and aerial cables were provided in many sections of Baltimore also a new combination underground and aerial cable connecting Baltimore and Harrisburg, Pa., was placed in service and an additional underground cable to New York and another to Washington and Richmond, Va. Cables were constructed between Cumberland and Frostburg and Annapolis and Baltimore. Another portion of this cable which will ultimatcly connect Baltimore and Hagerstown was completed between Hagerstown and Middletown during the year. A submarine cable was installed across Sinepuxent Bay at Ocean City.

Cable facilities were also provided at Chestertown, Hagerstown, Frederick, Annapolis, Salisbury, Crisfield, Easton and Hyattsville.

In addition to the cables providing circuits connecting cities, towns and communities throughout the state, a large number of open wire trunk lines were established in every section of Maryland.

During the year 81 branch business offices were established throughout the state. At these offices the chief operators are commercial representatives for the transaction of business with telephone users. There were 318,921,000 calls made by telephone users in Maryland during the year, which was an increase of 4,086,000 over the year 1929.

COUNTY SCHOOL CHILDREN TRAINED TO FIGHT GERMS

Eight Health Rules Are Selected For Children's Protection

The school children in Garrett county are being trained to fight the germs responsible for coughs, colds and other diseases, according to Mrs. J. F. Fahey, public health nurse. Much time is lost each year by the pupils because of minor illnesses which might have been avoided if the following simple Health Rules were taught and enforced:

Rule 1. Every child should bring a handkerchief to school and be taught to use it to protect themselves and others when coughing or sneezing.

2. Keep fingers, pencils and any other article out of the mouth that does not belong there.

3. Do not use a public drinking cup or public towel. Have each child bring his own drinking cup and towel.

4. Wash the hands with soap and water before eating.

5. Remove overshoes, heavy coats, sweaters and caps during school hours.

6. Stand and walk erect. Breathe deeply, with mouth closed.

7. If remaining at school during the lunch hour, be sure to bring lunch with you. No child should be permitted to go without lunch. See that children are seated while eating lunch, for period of 15 minutes, at least.

8. Avoid overheated, poorly ventilated rooms.

These Health Rules were selected because, if observed, they will protect the children from the most common communicable diseases, and because it is believed they will help overcome the conditions existing at present in many schools.

A copy of the Health Rules has been sent to each teacher in the county, with instructions for maintaining and enforcing them.

RITCHIE INAUGURATION A TRIUMPH FOR RULERS

sultum populorum. Dominare in medio inimicorum tuorum."

And in this auspicous manner, 'midst the blare of trumpets, the beating of the drums and the enthusiastic plaudits of the citizens, he entered the capital of the realm, over which he had held almost undisputed rule for eleven years, entrusted with a continuance of his power, for no one knows how long.

The procession of official dignitaries, prominent citizens, friends and relatives, as well as subservient, conquered foes, entered the ancient State House through the ancient doors, marched in stately and measured style across the ancient colonial rotunda, out into the more modern marble halls and into the beautiful Senate chamber, to inaugurate for the fourth time the popular choice as Governor of Maryland. In the procession were the able and dignified judges of the Court of Appeals, headed by the Chief Judge in their black gowns, their scholarly and intelligent faces set as becomes the men on whom rests the final interpretation of the laws, and whose decisions settle for weal or woe the happiness and often the fate of the people.

Look down on this procession, which possibly marks the opening of a new era in Maryland, where the portraits of Charles Carroll of Carrolton, Thomas Stone, Samuel Chase and William Paca, signers of the Declaration of Independence in 1776—for more than a century the portraits of these eminent patriots have gazed down upon the predecessors of Governor Ritchie, as they had entered the venerable Maryland shrine of patriotism, to which he alone of all had been chosen four times. Two of his predecessors had been twice honored for this place, namely: Thomas Lee, of Frederick, in 1779, and again in 1792, and Robert Bowie in 1803 and again in 1811, both of whom were chosen by the General Assembly, which in those times and up until 1838 elected the Governors—and the present Governor is the only one of the long list of twenty-five State Executives who have held the position during the past century who has been chosen for more than one term. That he has kept the faith and performed his duty to the satisfaction of the people is clearly evident from the fact that for four successive elections the public confidence has been expressed by large majorities.

If the spirits of the departed are permitted to view the lives of their successors, it is not out of reason to believe that the predecessors of the determined and highly competent gentleman, who again has been so greatly honored by the people, may have been present Wednesday to view with interest the unprecedented event which took place in the ancient shrine, where at intervals they were privileged to reign in the years now long past and gone. Out of all the more than half a hundred noted men who have reigned at Annapolis since the foundation of State Governorment under Thomas Johnson, of Frederick, in 1776, two alone remain here to look back on the past, namely, Phillips Lee Goldsborough and Emerson C. Harrington, both of whom are natives of Dorchester county and both of whom served the Commonwealth with credit to themselves and the people.

And it is not out of place to say here that since 1776 Dorchester has given to the Commonwealth six out of the more than fifty gentlemen who have occupied the chief chair of State during that time.

The procession entered the Senate Chamber, on the throne of which was seated the President of the Senate, the Chief Judge of the Court of Appeals and other official dignitaries. The certificate of election was read, and the Chief Judge administered the ancient, Constitutional oath to the Governor-elect. The old test book, which contains the names of his predecessors, was signed and Albert C. Ritchie succeeded himself for the fourth time as Governor of the State where his paternal ancestors had been noted for several generations among the ablest citizens of the Commonwealth.

The Senate and the Governor, the distinguished guests and the crowd, then moved across the State House to the hall of the House of Delegates where the Executive delivered his inaugural address.

Envy yells at reputation: "You're an accident". And reputation wonders idly who is making that funny, squcaking noise way down at the bottom of the hill.

After Two Strenuous Trips the Driver Is Staunch Friend of Ford Cars.

Motor Service Company,
Grantsville, Md.,
Gentlemen:—

In September I purchased a Ford Sport Coupe of the Motor Service Company in Grantsville. I will endeavor to relate, just a little, about two very pleasant trips I have had in my Ford.

The 29th of September I drove up to New York and then on to Boston, Massachusetts. I added 1800 miles to the mileage on that trip and did not have even so much as a flat tire and was very proud indeed of my Ford. But now I think I am extremely fortunate in having such a good car, for on November 10th I left my home in Maryland and drove to San Francisco, California, alone in the Ford, and the only trouble of any kind was two flat tires, both flat in the morning when I went to get the car; so that wasn't really anything.

Outside of cities and towns I hit a pace of 50 miles per hour and held it at that.

While crossing Texas I encountered some very warm weather, but with the heat, a steady and fairly high speed, the motor did not heat up a bit.

I made the trip in thirteen days—driving eleven and loafing two. The mileage was 3992 miles. The gas consumption was 192 gallons; cost, $41.27; oil consumed, 32 quarts; cost, $9.75. Tire repair, $3. Total cost for Ford, $54.02.

From now on I am a staunch advocate of Ford Cars.

Respectfully yours,
ESTHER ZEHNER MARSHALL.

BOY SCOUT ANNIVERSARY WEEK WILL BE OBSERVED

Period Will Mark Twenty-First Birthday of Boy Scout Movement In The United States

TO HAVE PUBLIC MEETING

Mobilization for the purpose of doing some civic good turn, rededication of members of the troop to the scout oath and laws, attendance at Garrett Memorial Presbyterian church in a body, individual good turns thruout the week at home and at school, and a get together meeting of all citizens interested in scouting, will be the features of Scout Anniversary Week to be held February 8 to 14, it has been announced.

This anniversary will mark the 21st birthday of the Boy Scout movement in the United States and the 23rd birthday of scouting thruout the world.

Definite plans for the get-together meeting and other features on the week's program will be made at the regular meeting of Oakland Troop on Friday evening.

During Anniversary Week approximately 1,000,000 scouts and their leaders, 44 of whom will belong to Oakland Troop No. 1, will stand at attention and rededicate themselves to the principles of the scout oath and scout law.

During one of the days the scouts will mobilize to do some good turn for Oakland. Last year at the sound of bugles in different sections of the town, all scouts hurried to the scout hall and then each one inspected the town, listing all fire and safety hazards.

The scout uniform will be worn every day and members of the troop will participate in civic good turns—good turns for their parents in the homes and good turns in the schools.

On Sunday, February 8, the troop will attend Garrett Memorial Presbyterian church where Rev. Walter B. Brock will deliver a special sermon to the boys.

Court of Honor Monday

The regular meeting of the Court of Honor will be held on Monday, January 26, in the Masonic Clubroom, at which time a number of merit badges will be passed.

Oakland High School News

Oakland High School will give a dance and card party, Friday, February 6th, which will be held in the school auditorium. The proceeds will go toward buying books, magazines, etc., for the school library. The necessary economy program of the Board of Education does not permit it to give the usual amount for school libraries, hence it is necessary for the school to raise the money for this very urgent need. It is a very true saying that "A school cannot be any better than its library." The committees have been selected and are working hard to make this affair a success.

Boys' basketball practice began on Tuesday afternoon very intensively with eighteen boys reporting. Of these two are six-footers and two are five feet-eleven and we expect a combination from them that will produce results.

Thanks are due to all those who helped make it possible for us to have a playing floor. Special mention should be made of the agriculture class who planned, built and erected the screens, baskets, etc., and Mr. Welling who so kindly offered to paint the lines on the floor and the back-boards.

The games with Friendsville High are scheduled to begin at two o'clock on Friday afternoon . Admission, 15 cents for children and 25 cents for adults.

Hesen, vice-commander, was then named post commander. Mr. Gonder's resignation was due to numerous other duties connected with his regular work.

The Legion went on record as favoring the Patman Bill, which calls for payment in full of all adjusted compensation certificates. It was decided also to have a benefit picture on February 16 and 17 at the Maryland theatre. The picture, "Animal Crackers," stars the four Marx brothers.

With twelve entirely new members in the Legion during the recent membership drive, in addition to those who were already members, the local post went over the top with their quota for 1931, according to the committee in charge.

MARYLAND LEGISLATURE IS A GENERAL COURT

Assembly As A Body Not Responsible For Delay—Bills Come Slowly Forth

By Paul Winchester and Grafton Lee Brown.

ANNAPOLIS, January 21—Every session of the General Assembly is severely criticised, and often roundly abused, at the delay, which is evident in the consideration of measures of all sorts which are before it. And in nine cases out of ten there is little cause for such criticism.

It is unreasonable to expect prompt action on bills which are not before the General Assembly any more than it is to censure courts for not trying cases which have never been placed before the bench. And the vast amount of legislation, which comes before the General Assembly is made up of bills that are not introduced until the session is more than half over.

At least three-fourths of the measures are bills affecting the Baltimore City government, the public works and other matters in the counties, the several State executive commissions, the work of bar associations, the business and utility corporations and the scattered, and usually unimportant bills advocated by uplift reform and crank societies. And it has been a rare event in the past half century, during which time the writer has been in constant attendance at every session at Annapolis, that any appreciable number of bills have been ready for consideration during the first six weeks of the session. Indeed, a large proportion of them have never been presented before the first of March, when the session is two-thirds gone.

In fact the General Assembly is really a court. In Massachusetts and other Northeastern States, it is called the "General Court," and its duty is to consider matters of public interest as a court, and like all courts it can only try cases (in the form of bills of public interest) when they are presented, and when there are no cases on the docket the members have nothing to do.

Few of the bills are the work of the members of either House. They are prepared by the agents and attorneys of the public bodies, whether State commissions, municipal and other corporate or volunteer organizations, which are interested in their passage. The preliminary consideration of all these is before committees and in a large proportion of the cases, especially where any real interest is taken in the bill, the arguments pro and con are made by attorneys in practically the same manner as in the ordinary courts of law. Of course there is much less formality before the committee than in the law courts, the strict rules of evidence, which obtain in court practice are not neforced, and there is usually a free and easy manner in committee room hearings, which is absent in the court house, and the committee is more like a jury sitting in a case, presided over by a foreman, in the place of a judge on the bench. The outcome is the same, however, and the delays so often complained of because bills are not reported promptly, are caused rather by those who favor, or those who op-

WEIMER IS PAROLED BY WEST VIRGINIA JURIST

Former Oakland Boy's Youthfulness Saves Him from Pen

Alfred Weimer, of near Oakland, was released from the County Jail at Kingwood, West Va., on Wednesday by order of Judge A. G. Hughes on a parole order.

It is alleged that Weimer was the driver of a car stolen from in front of the Sheriff's office at Kingwood on the morning of September 3 and in which he and Dave DeWitt, also of near Oakland, made a sensational dash over the West Virginia highways only to be caught on the Monongahela River bridge at Morgantown after they had wrecked the car.

Following their capture on the bridge by Sheriff Williams of Kingwood, who had given them chase, they were returned to the Kingwood Jail and when court convened they were indicted for the theft of the car, entered pleas of guilty and were sent back to jail to await sentence.

Before sentence was pronounced upon them, however, and while court was still in session, DeWitt attacked Deputy Sheriff George Bolyard with a heavy club when he went into the "bull pen," and attempted to escape. The officer, only partially stunned, managed to protect himself by pulling his revolver and with it drove the prisoner back into his cell.

A few days later Judge Hughes called the two into court and in a severe arraignment sentenced DeWitt to serve ten years in the State Penitentiary. Weimer was again returned to jail that the court might further consider his case. Then the parole was granted.

Fifty Present at Monthly Meeting of Brotherhood

About fifty were present at the regular monthly meeting of St. Mark's Brotherhood last Tuesday evening. Miss Jane Robinson, accompanied by her father, Dr. J. G. Robinson, sang a beautiful solo. The program was in the form of a round table discussion of the history and problems of the church, and H. C. Sincell, T. C. Bittinger, Prof, Ervin Smith, T. C. Hinebaugh, Bert Welch, and Wellington Yutzy gave short talks.

It was decided to hold the annual Turkey supper on the evening of February 12, Lincoln's birthday. Seventy-five cents will be charged. After the program the members of the Brotherhood went to the Oakland Model Bakery where Henry Lauer had prepared an oyster roast.

The next meeting will be held Tuesday, February 17, and will be in charge of Ralph Smouse, D. E. Orendorf, Clayton Winters, Bert Welch, and Bud Winters.

Red Cross Receives Check

With the addition of two more names on the Red Cross Roll call, the county only lacks $18 of completing its quota, according to Mrs. E. Z. Tower, chairman.

A check for $10 was received the past week from Mr. W. B. Burruss, of Washington, D. C., a summer resident of Oakland, two dollars to be used for Mr. and Mrs. Burruss towards the Roll Call, and the remaining eight dollars to be turned over to the emergency fund, asked by the National Red Cross.

THE REPUBLICAN IS GATHERING DATA ON HISTORY OF OAKLAND'S BANDS, BUT NEEDS HELP OF OLD MEMBERS

Following the fourth annual concert of the Gilbert-Brown Boys' Band of Oakland, held the Sunday after Christmas, a remark was made by one of the "old timers" concerning the band history of Oakland.

For instance, Dr. J. Lee McComas, father of Senator Henry W. McComas, was the leader and mainstay of probably the original band organization of the town. This band was instructed by Capt. Stoye, of Stoyestown, Pa., who came to Oakland at stated intervals to carry on his work.

In a later organization Samuel Lawton, now dead for a number of years, played a baritone horn. In 1930, Lewis Lawton, his grandson, rendered a difficult solo on the same kind of an instrument. Leo Rasche, a member of Smith's Military Band around the 1900 mark, now has two nephews in the Gilbert-Brown Band.

And how many people know that George D. White, Thomas and Abel Browning, Silas Shirer were members of Oakland's first band?

In order to give the people an accurate history of Oakland's original band and those succeeding it, The Republican has been attempting to obtain a number of facts, pictures, dates, etc., relative to these organizations, so that a story may be published in a future edition.

There are still a number of dates lacking as well as the names of many of the members of the old organization. When was the Mountain City Band organized? Who belonged to Smith's Military Band? What interesting trips were taken in addition to the political tour through Garrett county around 1907, which lasted a whole week? Was there another organization between Smith's Military Band and the Mountain City Band? Was there any between the Oakland Concert Band of 1874 and Smith's Military Band?

The Republican would appreciate very much any facts which former band members might give that would make an accurate band history of Oakland.

"LADIES' NIGHT" OBSERVED BY LOCAL ROTARY CLUB

Rev. "Diek" Aspinall Was Chief Speaker at The Dinner

The Oakland Rotary Club celebrated Ladies' Night at the William-James Hotel last Friday evening, the program, which was arranged by Walter W. Dawson, chairman of the entertainment committee, being a well thought out and proving an interesting bit of work.

E. R. Jones presided following a few remarks by President Charles W. Ream. The program included group singing, vocal solos by Mr. C. B. Kendall, of Terra Alta, readings by Miss Elaine Boughner, a finished artist, of Confluence, Pa.. and an address by Rev. "Dick" Aspinall, former Governor of Rotary in the West Virginia District. and who is now connected with the West Virginia University as a publicity man.

Mr. Aspinall's address was a masterpiece of witticisms and philosophy, his subejct being the philosophy of Socrates, the Athenian pagan and wise man of his day, from whose teachings, the sepaker declared, philosophy and that good fellowship existing between man and man had its foundation.

The dinner was enjoyed by more than sixty men and women, the favors for the ladies being small bouquets of rose buds and sweet peas, while the men received carnations from the Weber gardens. A drawing for prizes was participated in by the ladies, which created a lot of interest and entertainment.

Dewey Harvey Dismisses Appeal and Begins Serving Term

Dewey Harvey, who appealed his case following a conviction at the December Term of the Garrett County Circuit court, for selling intoxicating liquor, dismissed his appeal and was taken to the Maryland House of Correction the latter part of last week to begin serving his sentence of two years.

Harvey was sentenced to serve nine months in the House of Correction and pay a fine of $600 and costs of the prosecution, or to serve two years in the institution. He chose the latter penalty, in order, it is said, that the government prohibition operative, to whom he sold the liquor, would not receive his share of the fine.

Harvey had been tried and convicted at a previous term of court on the same charge.

Mr. Gilmor S. Hamill Suffers a Slight Stroke of Paralysis

Mr. Gilmor S. Hamlll, dean of the Garrett County Bar, suffered a slight stroke of paralysis while seated at the breakfast table at his home in Oakland on Monday morning. The attack rendered Mr. Hamlll partially blind and also affected his lower limbs.

At Andrews, N. C., Mrs. Marcella Taylor, aged 97, has started to read the Bible through for the 39th time.

REPORT IS FAVORABLE ON PLAN FOR ROAD BUILDING

Mr. McCullough, Chairman of Committee, Reports 50 Miles of Highways Can Be Built Without Tax Increase

COMMITTEE IS ENLARGED

That roads in Garrett county could be built on a plan similar to the one advanced by Berne Teter and published in The Republican several weeks ago, in which the citizens of the county would not have their taxes increased. was the substance of a report made Saturday by John W. McCullough to members of the committee sponsoring the building of improved highways in the county. Mr. McCullough's report was based on an interview with G. Clinton Uhl, chairman of the State Roads Commission, and Assistant Attorney General Archer, in Baltimore last week.

The meeting, which was held Saturday in the Court House, was attended by quite a number of taxpayers from various parts of the county, and while some advocated the road building program there were several present who opposed it. Another meeting is called for Saturday afternoon, January 24, at 2:00 o'clock in the Court House to which the members of the Garrett county delegation in the General Assembly have been invited.

Whether or not the delegates will support a bond issue for the building of the roads, if in their opinion the majority of the people of the county wish it passed without a referendum, will be thoroughly discussed. In the meantime members of both the Republican and Democratic State Central Committees will be importuned to give their support as individuals and as members of the governing committees of the major parties to the movement.

Committeemen from each district in the county not represented on the committee as originally appomted, were named, thus giving every section of the county representation at future meetings of the body. Newly appointed members of the committee include William Miller and F. F. Spoeriein, District No. 5; Marshall Frankhouser and W. A. Smith, District No. 6; John Werner and Charles Layman, District No. 9; Charles A. Ashby and James W. Walter, District No. 10; John Merrill and Wade H. Broadwater, District No. 11; Milo Wilson and W. G. MacDonald, District No. 13; Robert Sheckells, District No. 1; Herman Robeson, District No. 13.

The original committeee include James A. Fitzwater, District No. 1; John W. McCullough, District No. 2; Claude Stanton, Wm. Winterberg and Harvey Gortner, District No. 3; Carroll Pattison, District No. 4; C. N. McIntire, H. V. Leighton, D. E. Orendorf and A. D. Naylor, District No. 7; George W. Harvey, District No. 8; J. B. Emory, District No. 12; E. R. Jones, C. W. Ream and Geo. D. Browning, District No. 14.

Mr. C. N. McIntire, chairman of the committee, had the following to say in regard to Saturday's meeting when interviewed by a Republican reporter, and the proposition at hand:

"As chairman of the committee sponsoring the building of good roads in the county, I urge every taxpayer to give this proposition careful consideration and if possible to attend the meeting to be held on Saturday of this week. If it is true that this work can be done without raising our taxes and in a manner that the credits due the county from the State will fully take care of these expenses, I believe that nothing more profitable could be done during this year and during this depression in business than to build these roads and spend money which would certainly benefit a great many of our people and give us the highways so badly needed."

405 Telephones On Oakland List of Subscribers.

There are now 840 telephones in Frostburg, a net gain for the year of 18; 405 in Oakland, an increase of 21; 152 in Mount Savage, an increase of 2. Lonaconing is now served by 311 telephones.

Ye Poor Editor

It is alleged that a schoolboy in Kansas wrote the following, entitled "An Editor" (they can blame a lot of things on Kansas):

"I don't know how newspapers and magazines got into the world, and I don't think anyone else knows, for there is nothin' said in the Bible about them. I think the editor is the missing link we read of and that he stayed in the business until after the flood, came out and wrote the thing up, and has been kept busy ever since.

"If the editor makes a mistake, everybody knows it and say he ought to be hung, but if the doctor makes mistakes he buries them and people don't say nothing because they can't read Latin.

"When the editor makes a mistake there is a big law suit and swearing and a big fuss, but if the doctor makes one there is a funeral with flowers and perfect silence. A doctor can use a word a mile long without him or anyone else knowing what it means, but if the editor uses one, he has to spell it.

"If the doctor goes to see another man's wife he charges for the visit, but if the editor goes, he gets a charge of buckshot. Any college can make doctors to order but an editor has to be born."

Poor old Betty Dawson (alias Joe Spivis, alias one of the Gold Dust twins of Harned's Drug Store) got laid up this past week when he tried to life a hefty box of mortar, or somethin' or other, and his foot slipped. Bet says he didn't know there were so many muscles in one's back that could be strained, but he must have reached them all. No muscles, however, seem to be strained which might impede his speech.

Since Sunday he has been taking sight seeing trips in McIntire's Packard three times a day.

A Good Argument

The Farmer's Guide Magazine has given an excellent argument for paying up one's subscription to the county papers instead of borrowing from one who has paid. It says:

"A farmer, who thought he would save on the subscription price, sent his son over to the neighbor's to borrow the Guide. In his haste the boy ran over a $4 stand of bees and in ten minutes he looked like a warty summers quash. His cries reached his father, who ran to his assistance and failing to notice a barbed wire fence, ran into it, breaking it down, cutting a handful of flesh from his anatomy and ruining a $5 pair of pants.

"The old cow took advantage of the gap in the fence, got into the cornfield and killed herself eating green corn. Hearing the racket, the mother ran, upset a four-gallon churn of cream into a basket of kittens, drowning the entire litter. In her haste she dropped and broke, beyond all hope of mending, a $35 set of false teeth.

"The baby left alone, crawled thro the cream and into the parlor, ruining a $40 rug. During the excitement the eldest daughter ran away with the hired man, the dog broke up eleven setting hens' nests and the calves got out and chewed the tails off of four fine shirts. All to save a dollar."

So, if you don't want this to happen to some of you, you had better subscribe for The Republican.

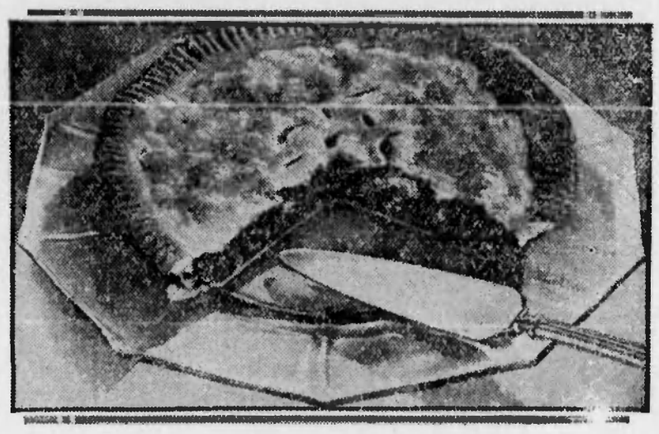
THREE LUSCIOUS PIES FOR FESTIVE DINNERS



At every American family gathering, luscious flaky crusted pie adds the favorite touch to the dinner. And when there is a large family circle with many tastes to be catered to, hostesses can add an extra touch of home sweet home to their hospitality by baking a batch of pies with several different fillings.

For anniversary or birthday dinners throughout the year there are three pies which make a worthy ending to any dinner, simple or elaborate. And because they are as different as they are delicious, hostesses at Thanksgiving, Christmas and New Year's celebrations will find them a happy change from the traditional pumpkin and mince pies.

Here is a date pie where tapioca combines with the fruit to make a moist, luscious filling. Tapioca, being a delicate, neutral ingredient will not mask the date flavor but will keep the filling from being too heavy and rich.

Date Criss Cross Pie

- 1½ tablespoons quick cooking tapioca
- 2 cups dates, seeded and halved
- 1½ cups hot water
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- 2½ tablespoons butter
- ⅓ cup brown sugar
- Juice 1 lemon
- 1 recipe pie crust

Add tapioca, dates, and salt to water, and heat to boiling point. Remove from fire, add butter, sugar, and lemon juice, and let stand about 15 minutes, or while pastry is being made. Line a 9-inch pie plate with ½ of pastry, rolled to ⅛ inch thickness. Fill with date mixture, and arrange lattice of pastry strips across top. Bake in hot oven (425° F.) 10 minutes, then decrease heat slightly (350° F.) and bake 30 minutes longer. Cool. Arrange wreath of sweetened whipped cream around edge of crust just before serving.

Golden Surprise Pie with its spicy, smooth, custardy filling is light enough to melt in the mouth. It will not run when it is served, for the quick cooking tapioca will keep its moisture evenly distributed.

Golden Surprise Pie

- 4 tablespoons quick cooking tapioca
- 4 tablespoons sugar
- 1 tablespoon salt
- ½ teaspoon ginger
- ½ teaspoon cinnamon
- ⅓ cup Maple Syrup
- 1 cup raw carrots, grated
- 2 cups milk, scalded
- 1 egg yolk, well beaten
- 1 baked 9-inch pie shell, or 12 small tart shells
- 2 tablespoons sugar
- 1 egg white, stiffly beaten

Add tapioca, sugar, salt, spices, syrup, and carrots to milk. Cook in double boiler 35 minutes, stirring frequently. Pour small amount of tapioca mixture over egg yolk, stirring vigorously. Return to double boiler and cook until thickened. Cool. Fill pie shell or tart shells. Cover with meringue made by folding 2 tablespoons sugar into egg white. Bake in moderate oven (350° F.) 15 minutes.

And who doesn't like a pie filled with sugar sweet juicy raisins?

Raisin Pie

- 1 cup raisins
- 2 cups water
- 2 tablespoons quick cooking tapioca
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- 1 egg, slightly beaten
- ½ cup sugar
- 3 tablespoons lemon juice
- Grated rind ½ lemon
- 1 tablespoon butter
- 1 baked 9-inch pie shell

Soak raisins in water overnight, or for several hours. Add tapioca, and salt, and cook in double boiler 25 minutes, or until tapioca is clear, stirring frequently. Pour a small amount of tapioca mixture over egg, stirring vigorously. Return to double boiler, add sugar, and cook until thickened. Remove from fire, add lemon juice, rind, and butter. Cool. Fill pie shell. Cover with whipped cream.

Ford Digs Two Mile Tunnel for A Billion Gallons of Water a Day

NEARLY a billion gallons of water a day—more than is used by the cities of Detroit, Philadelphia, Cincinnati and Washington combined—will be the capacity of a huge tunnel now nearing completion at the Roage Plant of the Ford Motor Company, Dearborn, Michigan.

The tunnel will replace the present water intake system which supplies the Ford plants with 500,000,000 gallons a day. At the same time the company is remodeling its power house to greatly increase the power output. Both improvements, costing several million dollars, are being made to enlarge the production facilities of the Ford plant.

Sixty Feet Under Ground

In constructing the waterway, the largest of its kind ever undertaken by a single business concern, the engineers are burrowing sixty feet under ground for a distance of two and a fifth miles. They have gone under main highways, railroads, street car tracks, bridges, a cemetery and a creek.

One of the most difficult tasks was that of tunneling under Baby Creek at a point which is crossed by a railroad bridge and where also a large sewer is under construction by the city of Detroit. The piles that provide the foundation for the bridge and those driven by the company constructing the sewer formed a network on each side of the creek. It was the task of the Ford engineers to burrow under the creek, sewer and bridge, going between the piles without striking or weakening them.

Boring of the tunnel is accomplished by means of a shield—a large steel cylinder fourteen feet long and twenty-one feet in outside diameter with a solid steel shell or skin two and a fourth inches thick. This shield has a bulkhead which is made fast near the front end. There are four openings through which the mud streams, like toothpaste from a tube, as the shield is shoved forward by twenty powerful hydraulic jacks.

When the shield has been pushed forward sufficiently concrete blocks two and a half feet wide and five feet long, each weighing 3,420 pounds, are placed to form a ring around the circumference of the tunnel. One of them acts as a keystone so that the lining of concrete, which is eighteen inches thick, withstands the pressure of the earth. After this steel forms are set up and filled with concrete to form a solid inner lining which is also eighteen inches thick.

The present intake system of the Ford plant has a capacity of 500,000,000 gallons a day. The new tunnel will be able to carry 913,600,000 gallons.

Feed the Game.

Scientific investigation carried on in every state in the Union have thoroughly proven that the agriculturalists, orchardists and those interested in the growing of forests are compelled by nature to have the presence of birds, game, song and insectivorous, to assist them in combating the insect pests which prevail throughout the continent, according to E. Lee LeCompte, State Game Warden. To assist in the growing of crops, fruit and forest an appeal is being made to those interested at this time to cooperate in trying to save all beneficial species of birdlife, whose presence are very necessary to our existence.

Sportsmen's organizations, teachers and pupils of the public schools, rural mail carriers, boy scouts and other similar organizations have for the past few years very heartily cooperated in carrying out the winter feeding program.

The drought of 1929 and 1930 has very seriously affected the wildlife supply, not only in Maryland, but throughout the entire continent east of the Rocky Mountain range. It becomes very necessary that we use every effort possible to save the remnant of wildlife left within the State of Maryland to furnish brood stock for the coming propagating season. The drought has caused a very serious shortage of natural food, covers are bare and weed seeds which are very injurious to the farmer's crops and on which the game and song and insectivorous birds feed, are scarcer than they have been in the covers of Maryland for years.

There are numerous methods which can be used by the farmers which are inexpensive but very effective. Feeding stations composed of a trestle bench at each side of which stalks of corn should be set in tepee style, affording shelter, each end open to permit entrance and exit in case of attack, is effective. A barrel with both ends knocked out, suspended from an overhead limb or placed on a stationary post in which grain is placed, becomes a suitable dinner table for the birds and assures us they cannot be attacked by vermin. It is not expensive to those residing in the counties of the State to furnish scratch feed, corn, wheat, rye, buckwheat, oats, or, in fact, most any kind of grain, any of which furnish nutriment and a well-fed bird can stand bitter cold weather, whereas when they are underfed they die very quickly from exposure.

The agriculturalist, orchadists and those interested in the growing of forests need the presence of birdlife 365 days a year, if possible, and unless the general public responds to this appeal the agriculturalist will not receive the benefit of the presence of the birds and the hunters of the State cannot expect a bountiful supply of game when they go afield during the season of 1931.

The Game Division of the Conservation Department of Maryland, thru the District Deputy Game Wardens of the 23 counties will gladly furnish feed gratis to those interested who are not able or willing to provide it.

"LEFT-HANDED CHILDREN"

Weekly Educational Article—by Dr. J. Fred Andreae

The study of the influence of heredity upon the physical condition of any individual is interesting. Much more important, however, is a collection of such facts from a large group of individuals from which helpful conclusions may be drawn.

Optometrists find, for instance, unexpected relationship between the eyes and the so-called master hand. Many children develop cross-eyes in their early years, that is, one of the eyes turns inward or outward and does not join with the better eye in seeing. When the eye which turns is on the side opposite to the master hand the correction of the eye defect usually effects a cure. In some individuals it has been found that persons who were naturally left-handed but have been diverted by some unwise parent or ignorant teacher into the use of the right hand as the master hand have also developed crossed eyes. It is said that about 90% of stammering and speech difficulties are cases where the master hand and the dominant eye are not on the same side of the body.

Left-handed persons should be encouraged to use their left hand and no influence should be brought to bear upon them to do otherwise. The child should be allowed to develop naturally in this respect and by so doing the co-ordination of the eyes, the ability to estimate size, distance, proportion and position will be greatly benefitted. These are all essential in the safe driving of motor cars or motor trucks.

THE RUFFLED FEATHERS OF AN ANGEL

"While the Republicans are busy running the government of the nation, the traditional and happy lot of the Democratic party is to sit on a fence and criticize. Sometimes a lone Democrat pitches in and helps—Senator Robinson, at the London naval conference, for example. Generally speaking, normalcy for the Democratic party means the cool and comfortable job of the wise outsider looking in," comments the New York Herald-Tribune.

"It is easy to find fault and hard to accomplish anything in this world of trial, error and human frailty—as Mr. Hoover has learned to his sorrow. Hence the contrast which our Democratic contemporaries have been stressing now these many months, between the efficient, contented and united Democracy, zooming along toward promised victory in 1932, and the wrangling, sweating, confused Republicans trying to help the nation weather a major financial storm, and getting called all the names in the calendar for their pins. To complete the scene of bucoli pece, the Democratic party had at last secured an angel in the person of Mr. John J. Raskob, who relieved it of the major practical worry to which parties are heir.

"What a rude shock, therefore, suddenly to discover, thanks to Mr. Raskob's highly explosive nature, that the Democratic dovecote was not the happy family home which had been pictured. One rubs one's eyes in amazement at the virulence of his attack upon Mr. Frank Kent, of The Baltimore Sun. To be sure, the latter had spoken out with his customary frankness and freedom of phrase. But he had called no names; he had not remotely suggested a religious issue or any other inflammatory topic. He had simply said what he thought of the power which Mr. Raskob was securing over the party. To quote the essential point in his column:

> "Add up all these items, and the Raskob ownership of the party seems pretty well established. Never in the 135 years of its history has it been so heavily obligated to a single individual. Never has any party been so deeply in debt to one man. The thing is unprecedented. It is real news. It is amazing that not more has been made of it."

"Mr. Raskob replies to much other matter in Mr. Kent's article. He repulses hautily the foul slander that he could have ever been a Republican, making it plain that he is a Democrat by inheritance, environment and marriage—though conceding that, like many another Democrat, he fell from grace in 1896, and over subsequent Presidential votes preferring to draw a veil. He attacks Mr. Hoover's Republicanism, somewhat irrelevantly, and accuses Mr. Kent of conspiring with the Ku-Kluxers, wholly irrelevantly, since the evidence upon which he makes this charge is not visible to the naked eye.

"But he makes no reply to Mr. Kent's real point. And now that the indiscreet Mr. Kent has brought it up, we wonder if any one can reply to it. Let it be conceded that every corpuscle of blood in Mr. Raskob's body is 100 per cent Democratic, uncontaminated and undefiled. Grant that his motives are nobler than those of any other angel that ever flew these mortal airs. What business has a self-styled party of the people to be financially dependent upon any one rich man?

"When Mr. Raskob gets his feathers smoothened down we shall hope to hear from him on this point. In the meantime, at the risk of grieving our Democratic friends, we cannot escape expressing the conclusion that it will be necessary to hold an election in 1932, after all."

A SOUTHERN VIEW

Every once in a while Henry Mencken fills his allotted space in the Baltimore Evening Sun with a prophecy that Governor Ritchie of Maryland will be the choice of the people to lead the Democratic hosts against the Republican nominee in the next national election. In this, as in other particulars, Mr. Mencken is tricked by his provincialism. Since he seldom sees or thinks about any part of America except that portion lying between Baltimore and New York, he quite naturally falls into the error of thinking all virtue and civilization are monopolized by this narrow belt. Maryland is the only civilized State; Dr. Ritchie is the great man of Maryland; ergo, Ritchie is the greatest of the great. But the truth is that relatively few people outside of Maryland know the gentleman exists. He makes a big splash only in Baltimore newspapers. Elsewhere those who have heard his name have forgotten it or else remember it vaguely as something significant of wetness—like swamp or suds.—Robert Quillen in Fountain Inn (S. C.) Tribune.

FAMILY DESERTERS

Social workers report more cases than usual of men who desert their families. "Non-supporters are disappearing into the unknown distance. It must always be so following periods of business depression.

Supporting a family calls for real work. Men of indolent disposition should not attempt it. They would do better to avoid beguiling some good woman by their wheedling ways, to join their doubtful fates. They are not fitted to assume the cares of family life, and have neither earned its joys nor have they prepared themselves to carry its loads.

After a man of that type has worried along for some years with bills for food and clothing and rent, life looks dark to him. Some women aggravate the situation by constant nagging and failure to do their share toward a happy home. But whether or not the wife is partly to blame, the man begins to regret the freedom of his single life.

Then if hard luck comes, unemployment, illness ,etc., the joys of family life have turned to dust and ashes and he dreams of making a new start free from all encumbrances. Some fine day his place is vacant and the pathetic and shabby wife is left helpless with hungry children clinging to her frail skirts.

Marrying a woman and having children and then not standing by these dependent ones is about the limit of meanness. If a man has hard luck, any good woman will make allowances, and either help earn money or at least refrain from reproaching her husband for things he can't help. The man who drops out of sight and leaves a woman to fight her battles alone should be pursued and led back by the ear and made to work if work can be had, or else he would better go to jail.

NATIONAL CAPITAL NEWS LETTER

Washington, January 19—That the country stands squarely behind the President in the controversy with the Senate in regard to the three members of the Federal Power Commission, is attested by scores of newspaper editorials from all parts of the country scoring the Democrats and "assistant Democrats" who chose such a time as the present to indulge in cheap political maneuvers.

"As for the President," says the Democratic New York Times, "he acted promptly, courageously and in the highest tradition of his great office. His statement of the law was absolutely crushing to his opponents, while his explanation of the policy of the Administration in the matter of regulating hydro-electric companies was clear and convincing. . .When the Senate of the United States turns its 'advice and consent' into device and contempt the people of the United States will know what to think of it."

The Detroit Free Press views the Senate action as "pernicious" and "impudent," adding that "there is every reason to believe that it was deliberate and malicious. The member who attempts to explain it away by denyin or by soft pedaling the plain meaning of the action either tries to deceive or is too stupid a man to have a place in the Congress of the United States. Indeed, as far as cleanliness is concerned, we can see no great difference between what the Senate has done and that form of lawlessness which in these later days is included under the general term of 'racketeering.'"

"The President's statement on the matter," declares the Democratic Birmingham News-Age-Herald, "gives the Senate as well deserved a dressing down as that body has ever had at the hands of any Chief Executive. . . . The Senate has been entirely in the wrong in this affair. Its actions have not only been spiteful but petty and childish. It has attempted to dictate to the Power Commission concerning a more or less trivial affair with which it had nothing to do in the first place. It has attempted to encroach upon the President. It has acted with indiscretion and poor judgment. It has acted unfairly. It was in no respect whatever in the right in its attitude."

In an editorial entitled, "The Senate Mastered," the Washington Post observes, "Nothing that Mr. Hoover has done in the Presidency has met with such an electric and delighted response from the public as his rebuff to the Senate. The clique of Senators who invited this staggering rebuke from the President of the United States do not possess sense enough to quit. They have the vanity of small men who vainly hope to ward off public derision and contempt by persisting in further frantic excuses. . . . . The full effect of this plunge into insanity will fall upon the Democratic party. Democrats engineered this attempt to usurp executive power. Democrats bulldozed Senator Robinson, their floor leader, into supporting them, and he will now have abundant leisure in which to repent. . . . The immoral majority that committed the Senate to this disastrous collision with the Executive makes itself ridiculous. . . The Democrats who conceived this brilliant futility seem to be determined to reap the full harvest of public derision."

The New York Herald-Tribune is of the opinion that the Senate has surpassed all its previous records of "pettiness, stupidity and attempted usurpation of power." Heaping abuse upon the 44 members who voted to avoid the confirmation of three of the Federal Power Commission, the article continues, "A man may not be blamed for stupidity—although the Senate is no place for such. But what must be said of the 'public servant' who will waste five days of the all too short time before the adjournment of Congress, playing politics, seeking to embarrass the President and in a cheap attempt to get a fake reputation for guarding the interest of the people?"

"Pure partisan peevishness," is the interpretation placed on the Senate by the San Francisco Chronicle, which sees the incident as "just another exhibition of insurgent ghost dancing, abetted by the Democrats, with the hope of annoying the Administration."

The New Orleans Times-Picayune views the tactics of the Senate Democrats and insurgents as a serious threat of relief legislation, while the Portland Oregonian fears the establishment of a precedent for illegal actions, declaring, "If Presidential appointments that are legally made, confirmed and put into effect could be upset by the Senate at one time, why not at another?"

"The rebuke administered to the Senate," declares the Indianapolis Star, "should be understood and its importance recognized in every quarter of the land. The Chief Executive was not merely fighting back at a group of bumptious Senators . . . . He was defending a vital principle in our plan of government. . . . Nothing the Senate has done demonstrated so forcibly, as has its recall resolution, the depths to which that body has fallen. A majority apparently has lost, or never had, a proper conception of the Senate's function in our theory of government."

Asserting that the Senate has been "thown for a loss" the Philadelphia Public Ledger observes: "There never was any doubt that President Hoover would not repel the Senate's latest and most flagrant attempt to invade the Executive's rights and independence, but the vigor and propmtitude with which he has put that belligerent body in its place will command the special admiration and applause of the country."

The Baltimore Sun, one of the nation's leading Democratic dailies, takes a pessimistic view of the entire affair but concedes that "the President has the Senate by the short hair."

Taking a grave view of the situation which adds weight to its indictment, the Washington Star declares, "It thus clearly appears that the Senate has done a futile, idle thing and it must be assumed that it knew the futility and idleness of such an action, else it does not know its own rules or the law. By voting as it has for a return of the nominations it has set no precedent except for folly."

Analyzing the reasons beneath the Senate action the Boston Herald charges, "Once again the Senate has indulged in tactics which will further impair its standing. When he (the President) imputes malicious motives to the Senate majority, he voices the belief of the great mass of the people, and their 'unerring judgment' will sustain him."

A Correction.

In listing the Board of Directors for the First National Bank, Grantsville, in The Republican last Thursday, the name of Guy S. Stanton was given as having been elected a member of the board. This was an error. Mr. Guy S. Stanton acted as one of the judges, but was not elected as a member of the board.

At Luray, Va., Perry Housden, 86 years of age, is the father of 21 sons and daughters, including two sets of twins and one of triplets.

A reception by the young ladies of Oakland was the grand event of the season. The gentlemen were received by a quartet of girls, all of whom looked sweet and pretty, as the Oakland girls usually did (and do yet). An Interesting Fact

FREEDOM OF THE PRESS

The question of just how far the public press may be justified in voicing criticism of public officials, their acts and motives, to what lengths it may proceed to commend on judicial determinations of courts of justice and the jurisdiction of the courts and their judges in demanding the source of secret information upon which the comments of the press are based, is frequently raised. The present day is not alone in these discussions.

As far back as 1735, one John Peter Zenger, one time employed as a public printer in Maryland under an act of the General Assembly, was put on trial in New York state for publishing a sharp criticism of an act of the chief justice of that colony. He was acquitted of the charge, which acquittal helped to establish in this country the dictum that the press has immunity from arbitrary ecclesiastical or governmental interference.

To have decided this question otherwise would have made for subservience on the part of the press and would have prevented true conditions from coming to the attention of the great mass of citizens.

But the courts went further and extended the above dictum to include the publisher's right to print independent points of view, regardless of prevailing public opinion, even in time of war. However, in the World War this right seems to have been abrogated.

In 1777, the Maryland Journal published a Tory argument, said to have been written by Samuel Chase under a pseudonym. The Whig Club of Baltimore took exceptions to the article and demanded that the editor of the paper divulge the writer's name. As the result of Goddard's refusal he was compelled to attend a meeting of the club and was ordered to leave town within twenty-four hours. It is true the action of the Whig Club was an autocratic assumption of authority, but we should remember the tenseness of the situation at that time. Goddard did obey the mandate of the club, but the result of his going was a matter of surprise to the Whigs, for he laid his case before the Committee of Safety at Annapolis, which committee turned the matter over to the Assembly.

Within a few days the Committee of Aggrievances handed down its report in which it was held that the action of the Whig Club in regard to Editor Goddard was a manifest violation of the Constitution and contrary to the Declaration of Rights.

The freedom of the press was upheld. But this stormy petrel of journalism was not satisfied. In his pamphlet, "The Prowess of the Whig Club," he gloated over his victory. Again he was tried by the Club. Again he took his case to Annapolis and again he was upheld, and although the Whig Club represented a powerful group, the officials received a formal summons to appear at the bar of the House at Annapolis and were required to publicly apologize. Governor Johnson was especially directed to provide the editor ample protection against "all violence or injury to his person or property."

WHY NOT NATIVE PLANTS?

W. R. Ballard, Specialist in Landscape Gardening, University of Md.

In some sections a prejudice seems to exist against the use of native plants in home grounds. Part of this is due to ignorance of the number and quality of plants available. A few types such as the flowering dogwood and the mountain laurel are known and appreciated, but even these might be used more extensively. One great advantage of the native forms is that they are adapted to climatic conditions and are usually more resistant to the attacks of pests than are some introduced species.

Trees are more generally recognized by home owners than native shrubs. Excellent types for the home grounds are several species of oaks, American elm, maples, black gum, the sweet gum, birch, tulip poplar, beech, hickory, ash, hackberry and, among evergreens, the holly and hemlock.

Among the smaller growing trees the Allegany shadblow, Judas tree and the native crabs might be mentioned.

One of the finest shrubs, producing showy berries, is the deciduous holly, usually found growing in moist locations but adapting itself to upland conditions, if not too dry. The scarlet berries, known in some parts of the State as "coon" berries, are often tied up with laurel leaves for Christmas decorations.

The white frings, while not common, is a very showy shrub or small tree with many fragrant white flowers in late spring followed by large purplish olive-like fruits in summer. The native thorn tree (crataegus), spice bush, black haw, arrow wood and the highbush blueberry are excellent in informal plantings.

The sumacs, while somewhat coarse in texture, are excellent for heavy mass effects, especially when showing their brilliant fall coloring. They are adapted to dry, hot conditions.

The sweet pepper bush(clethra), the pink azalea, the rhododendron of the mountain section, and even the lowly elderberry are not to be despised.

Then, too, some of the most satisfactory vines are native to Maryland. One of the most decorative of these is the Virginia creeper. For rustic arbors and for climbing over trees some of the summer grapes are ideal. The trumper creeper is showy in summer bloom, in addition to having excellent foliage. The bittersweet is somewhat difficult to transplant, but it is a decidedly ornamental vine, for lattice or ardor, and is particularly desirable for furnishing decorative berries for winter bouquets.

Many of these native plants are adapted to use on the home grounds. Whether they are to be collected from the wild or purchased from the nursery is mainly a question of cost, although nursery grown specimens will usually have a better root system and will transplant more readily.

MARYLAND LEGISLATURE IS A GENERAL COURT

pose bills, than by any design on the part of the members to help up the semi-judicial proceedings, of the Assembly. Usually the committees are ready and anxious to get all important bills out on the files of the House or Senate, and it is only on rare occasions that measures of importance are intentionally held back. And when that is done the delay is brought about by the influence of outsiders who have "axes to grind" which will be helped by the delay.

The impression that prevails that there is a vast amount of corruption in connection with the Legislative sessions, is greatly exaggerated, so far as it affects the members. The truth is, few of the members ever receive any large sums of money for their votes, and while at times considerable amounts are used by corporations and individuals who wish to pass or defeat certain bills, a very small proportion of the money ever goes into the pockets of the members. The agents and attorneys who attend to such matters often promise members to pay them if they will vote in their interest, but, generally they do not keep their promises—usually giving as an excuse for their failure to come up that the people who were back of them have welched and left them in the lurch, and so they cannot pay. At times a shrewd member whose vote is especially needed, will insist on his pay in advance and thus receive some of his reward. But generally the members who have been promised rewards for their votes are not paid until the end of the session and as a consequence they get little and the legislative agents are enabled to keep all that has been entrusted to them to secure the action they may want.

In the next issue of The Republican many interesting facts relative to the workings of the lobby at the State House during the past half century will be published. Practically all of the old-time lobbyists are dead. They were an interesting lot of men. The present day lobbyist and the present day system are in no way like them, and by comparison are a sordid and vicious class.

Echoes of drough-suffering complaints which have been ringing over the nation for months were heard in the Maryland Senate today with the introduction of a bill designed to bring relief to the farmers of Howard county through the declaration of a three-month moratorium on tax payments which became delinquent January 1.

The measure, introduced by Senator Joseph L. Donovan, Howard county Democrat, featured an otherwise normal day in the upper chamber, which saw only four other bills, one providing for general registration in Baltimore city every eight years instead of every four years as at present dropped into the hopper before the session adjourned until noon next Tuesday.

Under the provision of Senator Donovan's bill, the contemplated relief would be extended into 1932, with the same respite accorded 1930 tax delinquents granted those in arrears on January 1 of next year. By that time, in Senator's Donovan's view, the existing economic disturbances will have settled themselves or, failing that, other measures of assistance may be initiated.

By the terms of the Donovan bill, payment on delinquents on the county books as of the first of the year would be made on the installment plan, the first payment falling due on the first of April, the second on the first of June, and the final one, August 1. Under the existing statues, the property of defaulters would become liable to sale for taxes on April 1.

Dissention over the policy of extending the retirement limit for judges which enlivened the opening days of the session, again was threatened in the House of Delegates, when two measures on that theme came up for consideration, but failed to develop. The joint resolution extended the limit for Judge Walter Preston of the third judicial circuit was passed and another—affecting Chief Judge William H. Adkins of the second circuit—was introduced and forwarded on to second reading.

Delegate George L. Edmunds, of Montgomery county, reiterated the objection to the policy which he made last week, but other opposition failed to develop and the Preston measure went on to the Senate, joining a similar one for Judge Albert S. J. Owens, which has been referred to the Committee on judicial proceedings in that body.

A like Adkins resolution was introduced into the Senate by Senator Withgott, Democrat, of Talbot, and immediately was referred to committee.

It is in the upper chamber that opponents of the practice of extending the retirement ages of members of the judiciary, a practice evident at many past assembly sessions, will make their final stand. To date, there has been no test of strength on the question in the Senate, and foes of the policy predict that the resolutions already received by that body will receive careful and protracted consideration in committee.

The biennial influx of local measures started in today in both houses, with bills affecting Washington county appearing in the Senate and Allegany and Wicomico county measures being introduced in the House. Annual municipal elections in the town of Williamsport were the aims of two of the three Washington county acts, introduced by the Democratic Senator William Bryon.

A measure paving the way for issuance of $900,000 in bonds for the construction of a dam and improvement of the Cumberland city water system was introduced into the House by the Allegany county delegation, while the Wicomico county delegation sought authorization of a $75,000 bond issue for water system improvement in Salisbury.

After an hour or two of hard walking through laurel thickets they discovered that the bear tracks were the tracks of a large deer. The army was mustered out on the spot.

HEALTH NURSES OF STATE ACTIVE AGAINST DISEASE

Fifty-one Were On Duty in the Counties During the Year 1930

When you catch a glimpse of the public health nurse as she starts out on her day's work, just remember that there are fifty more working in the counties of Maryland, as she is doing, for the prevention of disease and the promotion of health among young and old.

Some idea of the many sided activities of the group whose service uniform has become a familiar sight in every section of the State, may be gathered from a recent report from the State Department of Health showing that fifty-one nurses were on duty in the counties last year.

Every county has one or more. Nine had one each; eight had two; four had three, and two—Allegany and Baltimore—had seven each. Baltimore county started the year with four and added three in the early fall. Included in the total were two colored nurses, who were engaged in work among their own race.

The nursing work in each section is carried on under the direction of the County Health Officer and is adapted to the needs of that particular district. During the year the fifty-one nurses made a total of 56,019 visits, an average of over a thousand visits for each nurse. Their activities took them into 26,786 homes. They assisted the health officers and examining physicians at clinics or health conferences for persons suffering from, or who had been in contact with tuberculosis; for mothers and young children; for crippled children; for children needing dental care; for mental cases and for venereal diseases.

The nurses also assisted the health officers in diphtheria immunization clinics; in the administration of typhoid vaccine, and in the medical examination of school children and the control of communicable diseases in the schools. The number of children examined was 69,156, and of the total 24,701 were found to have some condition requiring correction. Many of the visits to homes were made by the nurses in connection with this work of the schools. They also gave instruction in the home care of the sick to 129 groups of women and young girls in high schools and at health centers, and aided local communities in arranging celebrations of Child Health Day and of Negro Health Week.

Federal Farm Board to Aid Drought Areas

In response to numerous requests that assistance be given in meeting the requirements for food and clothing in the drought-stricken communities, the Federal Farm Board announced Monday that it is ready and willing to make available immediately any quantities of stabilization wheat and cotton that may be needed.

While under the Agricultural Marketing Act such supplies cannot be donated, the Board will cause the Stabilization Corporation to furnish their commodities to any responsible unit of Government or to the American Red Cross upon easy terms, which will enable these agencies to promptly alleviate distress.

The Board is aware that wheat and cotton are not adequate to meet the situation, but these products can readily be exchanged for the processed commodities that are derived from grain and cotton. The Stabilization Corporation will render every assistance in effectively carrying out the proposal here made.

Lesson for January 25

JESUS TEMPTED

LESSON TEXT—Luke 4:1-13.

GOLDEN TEXT—For in that he himself hath suffered being tempted, he is able to succor them that are tempted.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus True to God.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus True to God.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How to Overcome Temptation.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Conflicting Ideals.

I. The Place (v. 1).

The wilderness of Judea. The first man, Adam, was tempted in a garden with the most pleasant surroundings. The second man, Jesus Christ, was tempted in a barren wilderness, surrounded by wild beasts (Mark 1:13). Adam shamefully failed, involving the whole race in ruin (Rom. 5:12); Christ gloriously triumphed, bringing justification of life as a free gift upon all who believe (Rom. 5:18).

II. The Purpose (v. 1).

Christ was led into the wilderness by the Holy Spirit. His temptation was Messianic. Men today are not tempted as he was, but the same methods are employed by the Evil One. The time had come for the Redeemer to enter upon his mediatorial work. Therefore, he went from the place of anointing and heavenly recognition as the Son of God to meet and to spoil the enemy of God and men (Heb. 2:14).

1. It was not a preparation for his work but rather his first conflict with the enemy. In his baptism we have the symbolic act of the dedication of himself to the work of redemption through the work of the cross.

2. It was not to see if Christ would stand fast, as to whether he would fail under the most crucial test. Being the eternal Son of God, incorporated with the perfect humanity, sin and failure were impossible.

3. It was to exhibit Christ as an object upon which we may rest our faith with unshaken confidence. He came as the second man, the head of a new race, the very source of its life. The temptation was, therefore, a demonstration of the inseparableness of the divine and human natures in the incarnation.

III. The Method (vv. 2-12).

Christ as the world's Redeemer sustained a threefold relation—Son of Man, Son of God, and Messiah. Therefore, Satan made each one a ground of attack.

1. As Son of Man (vv. 2-4). Satan made his first assault upon him as a man by appealing to the instinct of hunger. Satan urged him to use his divine power to convert a stone into bread. The temptation was in satisfying a right hunger in a wrong way. To have yielded in this case though his hunger was desperate would have been to renounce the human limitations which he had taken for our sakes. To do right in a wrong way is to sin.

2. As Messiah (vv. 5-8). Here the temptation was to grasp his rightful dominions by false means. The Devil offered to surrender unto him the world if he would adopt his methods, would worship him. The force of this temptation was in the fact that the kingdoms of the world are Christ's by God's covenant with him. Satan has forfeited his right to rule. God's method by which Jesus was to possess the world was his sacrificial death on the cross.

3. As the Son of God (vv. 9-12). Here Satan tries to induce Christ to presume upon God's care. He quoted a Messianic psalm to induce him to so act. To do the spectacular thing in order to get notice is to fall into Satan's temptation. For Jesus to have placed himself in danger in order to get God's special help in delivering him would have been to sin. To test God as to whether he will keep his promise is the greatest distrust.

IV. Christ's Defense (vv. 4, 8, 12).

It was the Word of God. He met and repulsed the enemy with "It is written." In the most crucial hour of the world's history Christ quoted from the Book of Deuteronomy, which the rationalists of the day reject as not being fully inspired.

V. The Issue (v. 13).

Satan was vanquished. He could not stand against God's Word.

Let the Light Shine

Christian, rest not until thou knowest the full, the unbroken shining of God in thy heart! To this end, yield to every stirring of it that shows thee some unconquered and perhaps unconquerable evil! Let the light shine upon it, and shine it out!—Andrew Murray.

Enmity With God

Friendship of the world is enmity with God because the leadership of the world is directly against godliness; and for this reason it is out of the question for any child of God to forsake the ways of godliness and conform to the sinful ways of the world. —Doctrines of the Bible.

The Empty Cup

Do not let the empty cup be the first teacher of the blessings you had when it was full.—Maclaren.

OUT THERE

By FANNIE HURST

(©, 1930, McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

JAMES G. MORRELL was a graduate of two American universities and a French one. He had a Bachelor of Arts degree, a Master of Arts degree, and a Doctor of Laws degree. He spoke four languages fluently, and knew the piano, violin, and organ, all three of which he played with brilliancy, to say nothing of such lesser instruments as the guitar and banjo.

When he was twenty-five, his patrimony consisted solely of his magnificent education and what natural talents were so generously his.

The senior Morrell, his father and sole surviving relative, had died a week after he had lost his enormous holdings in a Wall Street crash.

The incredible sequel to that procedure lay in the fact that young Morrell, instead of feeling the crush of sudden poverty, realized within himself a sense of elation and release, that at first was incomprehensible to him. What had happened was that a vagabond, who had all his life been imprisoned by circumstance, felt himself suddenly freed.

For the first time in his carefully designed life, the young Morrell dared to admit to himself that he despised the profession of law that had been mapped out for him as the son of his wealthy father; that he despised the social routine in which he had been born and bred; that he was a freelance at heart and that at last he was at liberty to be himself.

That is how, during the next five years in the Bohemian quarters in practically every large city and seaport the figure of James Morrell was to become a familiar one. The tall slender young fellow, cultured, nonchalant, but a vagabond in dress and manner of living, became a wanderer in the various Bohemias of the world. A small ukulele, his only bit of luggage, he tinkled for a living.

James Morrell wandered from capital city to capital city, from seaport to seaport, from Shanghai to Seattle; from Seattle to Boston; from Boston to Trieste; from Trieste to Constantinople; from Constantinople to Rome; from Rome to Paris; from Paris to Marseilles; and so on and on, tinkling away on his ukulele for which, in return, he received his simple board and lodging.

For the first time in his carefully cultivated, extremely sophisticated young lifetime, James Morrell was happy. A vagabond. A minstrel. New scenes, new peoples, new pastimes. No struggle for existence because existence could be so simple. The world was what you made it. Young Morrell had made his a playground, a careless garden in which to sun himself. Big business, big destiny, big responsibility passed him by. There was never anything but loose change in his pockets, a loose jingle in his fingertips and a nonchalance in his heart.

James Morrell, Jr., who had been reared as the only child of a millionaire, turned gratefully to Bohemia.

It was in the Bohemia that is New York's, some five and a half years after the death of his father, that young Morrell walked into a situation that was to deter his footsteps from their willy-nilly wanderings.

Tinkling away his evenings in a Greenwich Village cafe, where he received in return a cot in an attic and his three meals a day, young Morrell met and fell in love with a girl named Rachel Taylor, eighteen, bizarrely beautiful, and an art student in the quarter.

She was the daughter of a coal merchant in Pittsburgh and her foray into Bohemia was the equivalent of a year abroad after a finishing school.

The spirit of Bohemia was no more the spirit of Rachel Taylor, than the spirit of Madagascar.

Young Morrell was not to know that until after he had married her. He fell in love with her in the physical environment of Bohemia; he first beheld her in the candle-lit shadows of garret studios and cellar cafes. To him she was drenched with this spirit of vagabondage, and it must be said for Rachel Taylor that she believed herself to be filled with that gypsy instinct.

They were married on the capital of two dollars and forty cents between them, and the young troubadour felt himself on the pinnacles of romance. For the first year they lived in a garret, while Rachel painted futuristic ladies on satin cushion tops, and tried to sell them at women's exchanges, and James tinkled his ukulele for their evening meal and the slant roof over their heads.

At the end of the second year, with their romance lying in ruins about them, James, no longer able to withstand the importunings of a wife who was with child, accepted a position of apprentice in a Pittsburgh law office, which had been obtained for him by his coal merchant father-in-law.

That is the beginning. If ever a man was predestined for commercial success that man was James Morrell. As his father-in-law, who had in the beginning secretly despised him, put it, everything that Morrell touched turned to gold, and the curious part of it was that it did not seem to be due to any genius that the fellow brought to his work.

There was something of a chained wild beast about Morrell. He endured his success in much the same way he endured his environment, his wife, and even his child. He saw it piling up about him and he let it pile. He stood in the courtroom declaiming in behalf of the great corporations he represented, and it sometimes seemed to him that some one on the outside of him was doing the speaking, while he, the shell of an individual, stood there caring not at all.

It could almost be said of James Morrell that he did not turn a hand, considering the magnitude of his so-called achievements. He had an eye for the law, and a tongue that could, on the proper occasion, grow eloquent, but so had other men of less success.

When she was thirty, Rachel Taylor, who loved the life of creature things, creature comforts, and creature magnificence, saw herself slowly climbing toward the very pinnacle of such attainments.

James Morrell was easily the foremost lawyer of the state to say nothing of the prospects of political power and position which lay ahead.

They used to say laughingly of Rachel Taylor Morrell that she had more than once referred to her husband as the future President of the United States.

Be that as it may, there was no doubt that the beautiful reddish eyes of Rachel were directed toward the seat of the mighty which she expected Morrell one day to occupy. One aspect of realization came to her in a vicarious way while James was still in his highly successful role of corporation lawyer. The lovely daughter of the James Morrells, Annice, aged eighteen, eloped one day in a hydroplane with the only child of one of the great oil magnates of the world. In Rachel's opinion, that was the greatest plume in the cap of the Morrells that had yet been planted there.

Ten years later, the two grandchildren of the James Morrells had been presented with a trust fund of five million each by their paternal grandparents, and James Morrell had fastened on his wife a lifetime income that amounted to over one million a year.

Two months subsequent to this legal act, the cities of Pittsburgh and New York awakened one day to headlines announcing the mysterious disappearance of James Morrell. Secret searchings had been going on for over a period of weeks before the general alarm was finally given out to a disquieted world.

After months of publicity, searchings and expeditions of secret service men to various parts of the world, the publicity was suddenly hushed up.

Mrs. Morrell resumed her haughty impressive life as social leader. Newspapers, for one reason or another, left off their playing up of this meaty story of disappearance of James Morrell.

It was whispered about among those "in the know" that it had cost Mrs. James Morrell a king's ransom to thus stamp out the conspicuous happening of her husband's disappearance.

The truth of it, of course, was that James Morrell had finally been ferretted out, playing his ukulele in a fantastic harbor cafe at Marseilles.

After one conference with her husband, Rachel Taylor Morrell, who had a good head on her, realized the futility of attempting to bait or lure or threaten her husband back into his proper setting. As she talked to him in his slit of a room in Marseilles, she realized that here was a man twenty-five years younger than the one who had left her a few months before; here was a man who had grasped back his happiness after it had all slipped from him; here was a beloved vagabond in his proper setting.

James Morrell is pretty well forgotten now, even by Rachel who divorced him and is married again.

He may be found tinkling his way through the different Bohemias of the world. His ukulele is always with him and his worldly possessions are the few pennies that jingle in his pockets.

Just a Customs Incident

She was watching the passengers of an ocean liner as they opened their bags for inspection.

"What have you to declare?" the customs officer asked of the timid little woman.

"I have only a silver tray I bought," she replied as she delved into her bag. "You see, I had to bring something to my daughter, and I didn't have much money . . . I didn't buy anything else, it cost such a lot."

She presented the tray to the man with a little spirit of pride. "Pretty, isn't it?"

The man looked at it and looked at the woman. "But, madam, it is so evidently not silver . . . er, that is, yes, I suppose it cost quite a lot. There's no duty; you see, you are allowed to bring in a hundred dollars' worth."—New York Sun.

Forest Waste Alarming

Both the supply of timber and the expected growth fall far short of the needs of the nation, writes E. P. Meinecke in the Journal of Forestry. Devastation of productive forest land through forest fires and destructive logging, promoted by waste in the woods, in manufacture, and in use, is progressing at an alarming rate. The main difficulty in dealing with the decline of American forests lies in the chaotic condition of the lumber industry which controls four-fifths of the forest lands of the country. This condition is due partly to oppressive state taxation but mainly to internal disorders of an economic nature arising from land speculation and ill-advised financing in the past.

Fish Salad Californian

One-half cup lemon juice and pulp, 2 cups shredded lettuce, ½ cup chopped celery, 2 cups canned salmon (or tuna), 3 tablespoons minced pimiento. Pare lemons, saving all juice and cut in small pieces, as free as possible from membrane. (Scissors are good for cutting out membrane). Mix with lettuce and celery. Add fish, which has been flaked, with pimiento. Mix thoroughly. Serve with mayonnaise. The lemon pulp replaces the chopped pickle often used in fish salads.

The BEST Gray Hair Remedy is Home Made

To half pint of water add one ounce bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and one-fourth ounce of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. It will gradually darken streaked, faded or gray hair and make it soft and glossy. Barbo will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.

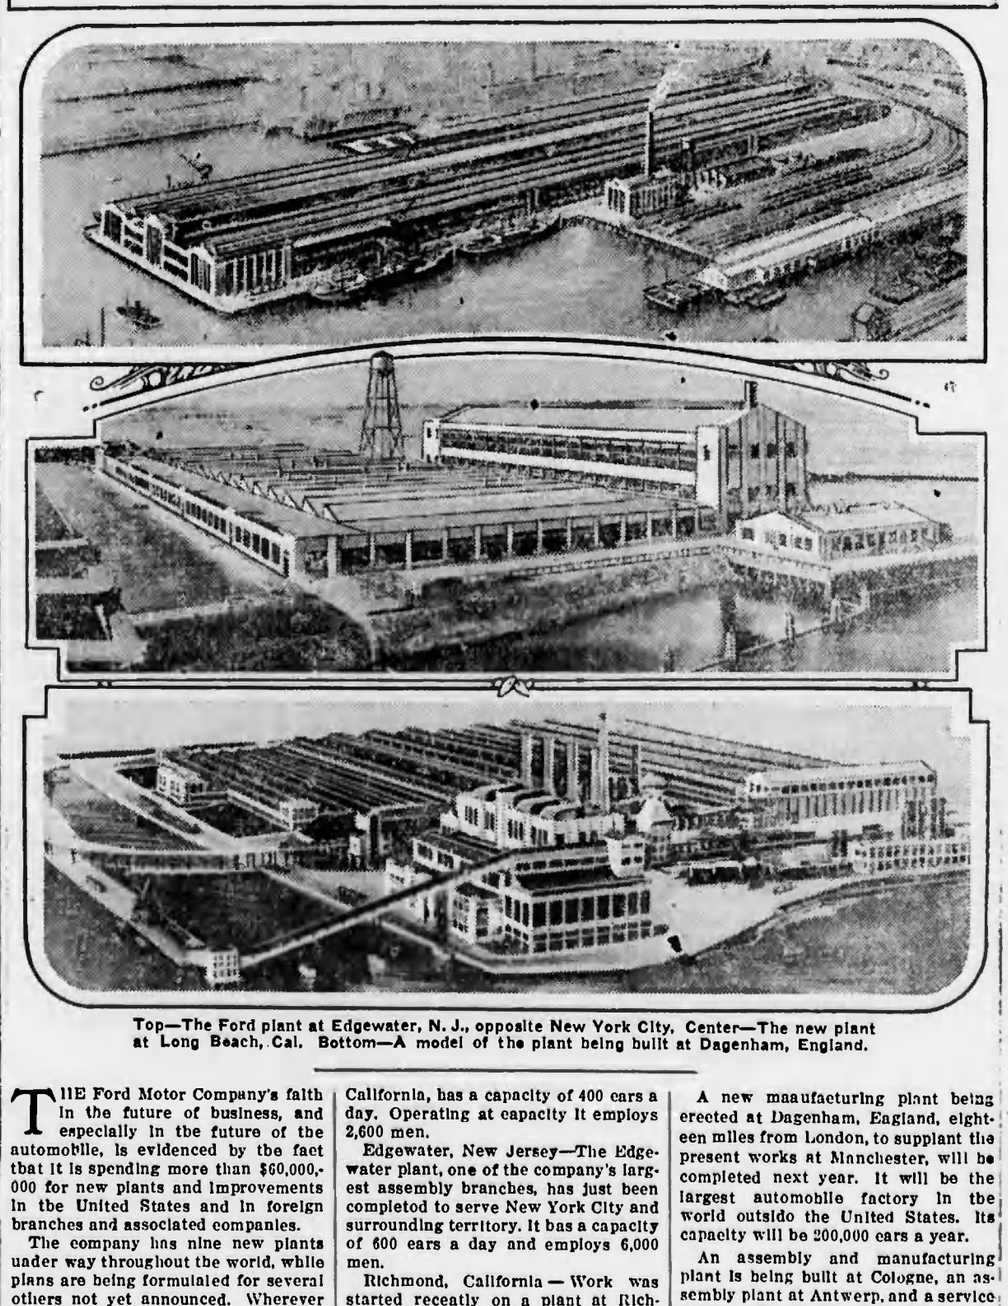
Ford Shows Faith in Future by World Wide Construction Program



Top—The Ford plant at Edgewater, N. J., opposite New York City. Center—The new plant at Long Beach, Cal. Bottom—A model of the plant being built at Dagenham, England.

THE Ford Motor Company's faith in the future of business, and especially in the future of the automobile, is evidenced by the fact that it is spending more than $60,000,000 for new plants and improvements in the United States and in foreign branches and associated companies.

The company has nine new plants under way throughout the world, while plans are being formulated for several others not yet announced. Wherever possible the new plants are being erected on sites accessible to both rail and water transportation so that, with each form of transportation supplementing the other, substantial savings will be effected.

Five of the new plants are in the United States, as follows:

Long Beach, California—This plant, recently completed to serve Southern California, has a capacity of 400 cars a day. Operating at capacity it employs 2,600 men.

Edgewater, New Jersey—The Edgewater plant, one of the company's largest assembly branches, has just been completed to serve New York City and surrounding territory. It has a capacity of 600 cars a day and employs 6,000 men.

Richmond, California — Work was started recently on a plant at Richmond, to be completed next year. It will have a capacity of 400 cars a day and will employ 2,400 men. It will supply cars to the San Francisco area.

Buffalo, New York—This plant will have a capacity of 400 cars a day and will employ 2,500 men.

Seattle, Washington — A site has been acquired and plans for a plant are being drawn.

A new manufacturing plant being erected at Dagenham, England, eighteen miles from London, to supplant the present works at Manchester, will be completed next year. It will be the largest automobile factory in the world outside the United States. Its capacity will be 200,000 cars a year.

An assembly and manufacturing plant is being built at Cologne, an assembly plant at Antwerp, and a service plant at Stockholm. Two branches—one at Perth, Australia, and one at Port Elizabeth, South Africa—were completed.

In addition the Ford Motor Company is spending several million dollars to increase the power capacity of the Rouge plant at Dearborn, Mich., and several million more in miscellaneous improvements.

Maryland's Interest in Washington Plans

By ALBERT C. RITCHIE

Governor of Maryland

From Review of Reviews

THE future of that large part of Maryland which lies contiguous to the District of Columbia is in a very real way linked with the future of Washington. These sections of Maryland are not now independent or self-sufficient, in the sense that they can plan ahead without regard to the plans and the conditions on the other side of the District line.

Good roads and the automobile have affected more completely the rural life of America in twenty years than all the occurrences of generations before put together. Primarily because of these two things, the American farmer is no longer isolated or economically self-supporting; he has become an integral part of our vast national economic life.

In the same way good roads and the automobile have contributed immeasurably to make common cause of the development policies and opportunities of the District of Columbia and that section of Maryland which is adjacent to the District. Neither of these sections can work out its future plans without regard to the plans of the other.

The boundary line between Maryland and the District cannot be considered as a barrier separating one from the other. In a legal sense, of course, the development policies of both sections must be separately formulated but the interests of both require that this be a matter of form only. The plans and hopes and possibilities of this part of Maryland and of the District must be cooperatively worked out for the common good of both, because they are interdependent.

Similar considerations with respect to the portion of Virginia adjacent to the District, make Virginia a natural third partner in our common undertakings.

I am happy to say that during my administrations as Governor of Maryland, my state has recognized all this, and has contributed measurably to the fulfillment of our joint interests.

In 1927 we created the Maryland National Capital Park and Planning Commission, and gave it jurisdiction over zoning, parking, a permanent system of highways, and other public works and utilities necessary to the proper and adequate physical development of the area extending for an average distance of ten miles from the District line into Montgomery and Prince George's counties.

That Maryland commission cooperates with the National Capital Park and Planning Commission. It first zoned the suburban portions of these two counties, and for almost two years the property in all this rapidly growing area has been enjoying the benefits and the protection of intelligent zoning. That this has been effected in a way acceptable to the communities concerned, is shown by the entire absence of any serious attacks either upon the law or its administration.

Along with this work the commission has proceeded with plans for an extensive park system.

As a practical recognition of the very vital importance of this, I recommended to the Maryland Legislature of 1927 an appropriation of $100,000, which was provided, for the acquisition of park lands in Montgomery and Prince George's counties. In addition to this, local taxation in those two counties is making available several hundred thousand dollars more for park purposes and an adequate amount for park maintenance.

The parking program has been tied in with the Regional Plan, and it has progressed to the point where existing parks are now about to be extended and new parks established. Rock Creek Park will have an extension into Maryland, and Sligo Valley, the valley of Cabin John Run, and the valley of the Northwest Branch will be added to the system.

WASHINGTON'S park and parkway system, as now planned, extends far beyond the boundaries of the District. In Maryland it includes ambitious projects in Montgomery and Prince George's counties. In Virginia it provides for improving the Potomac shore from Mount Vernon to Great Falls.

One of the great opportunities along this line which should receive cooperative consideration is the main valley of the Potomac River. This, with its glorious scenery, is the natural setting for a park unsurpassed in all the world.

The Cramton bill, passed by the last Congress and signed by President Hoover, provides adequate funds for the immediate creation of the park system recommended for Washington City by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, at a total cost of $16,000,000. It also makes available a federal gift of $1,500,000 for the purchase of park lands in the seven main valleys of suburban Montgomery and Prince George's counties, in Maryland, extending from the District of Columbia; and it provides a further federal loan of $3,000,000 for eight years without interest to those counties.

This total of four and a half million dollars is the estimated cost of the entire park system in the Maryland valleys extending from the District of Columbia.

It seems probable that Montgomery and Prince George's counties will combine to avail themselves of this loan from the Government in order that this great park system may be brought into immediate realization. In such event, title to the park lands in these Maryland valleys will continue in the state, with recreational improvements and maintenance paid for and administered by the Maryland National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

One of the principal agencies we have established to protect the health and meet the necessities of the Metropolitan District is the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission. The purpose was to acquire the existing municipal and quasi-public water and sewerage systems in the area, to coordinate them, and to see that water and sewer service keeps pace as far as possible with the growth of the area.

This commission has jurisdiction over about ninety square miles in Montgomery and Prince George's counties. At the time of its organization, eleven years ago, there were about 100 miles of water and sewer facilities in the area, serving less than 2000 houses. Today the commission has acquired or constructed almost 500 miles, serving nearly 11,000 houses. This work represents a bonded indebtedness of about $7,000,000.

We also have a regional water and sewer committee functioning with the National Commission, and the Maryland State Department of Health and the Suburban Sanitary Commission contribute efficient engineering services to this work.

Zoning, parking, water and sewerage are not all. Maryland is now in the midst of the most extensive highway construction program ever undertaken since the good roads movement was started by Governor Austin L. Crothers twenty years ago.

A large part of this program directly benefits not only the people of Montgomery and Prince George's counties, but also the great number of people who live or work in Washington and its environs.

The Baltimore-Washington Boulevard has already been widened to forty feet from Baltimore to Laurel, and the widening is being continued this summer from Laurel to Hyattsville.

The extension of Rhode Island Avenue from Hyattsville to the District gives a direct and much shorter entrance to the Northwestern section of Washington, and is a connecting link between the towns of Mount Rainier, Brentwood, North Brentwood, and Hyattsville. The road which is being completed from a point near Laurel to connect with 16th Street, at the District line, will enable people in this area to reach their destinations without going through the crowded business section of Washington.

The elimination of the Hyattsville grade crossing is a major undertaking of the greatest importance, which will not only remedy what has frequently been an intolerable inconvenience on the Baltimore-Washington Boulevard, but will make impossible for all time the tragedies which have occurred at that point.

The grade crossing at Silver Spring has also been eliminated, and it is also expected that others at Rockville, Kensington, and Gaithersburg will be removed this year. The crossing at Gaithersburg is of great importance, because it is on the main highway between Washington and the West.

The communication between Washington and its surrounding territory and the part of the state known as Southern Maryland is also of great interest because of the business and social relations which exist between these sections.

The Robert Crain Highway and the National Defense Highway, together with the new road now practically finished in the lower part of Southern Maryland, bring all that section of Maryland into much closer and better comunication with both Washington and Baltimore.

We should not overlook the benefit to the public schools which such an extensive highway program affords. Better roads make better schools. They furnish improved facilities for getting to the schools, and thus increase the convenience and the attendance of the pupils, and facilitate the consolidation of elementary schools in proper cases. The progress of the public school system all over Maryland—including, of course, Montgomery and Prince George's counties—has been recognized as notable throughout the country.

The spirit of cooperation which Maryland is anxious to manifest in all these regional improvements is not confined to the subjects I have specifically discussed. New undertakings will be proposed from time to time, and we want to consider and do our part in all of them in the same spirit of mutual help.

SEED CATALOG NIGHTS

About now the householder who has a garden is supposed to sink down into his soft easy chair and pass midwinter evenings dreaming over the latest seed catalogs. The pictures of those gorgeous flowers, fruits and vegetables may be more glorious than anything he would know how to raise. And yet they are simply perfect examples of nature's abundant good things which can be grown by those who know the secrets of nature's lavish heart.

Many of our dreams are of costly and perhaps unattainable things. We dream of big strokes in speculation, or getting our pay or business profits doubled. Those dreams do not usually come true. It is better to have a vision of something that is in our own power to create.

The seed catalog is a book of such dreams. It simply shows us what we can do in our own garden with a moderate amount of work and experience. It paints a picture of things that will give us more real happiness than any good fortune that comes without merit or effort.

"MADAME"

By FANNIE HURST

(©, 1930, McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

THE business of importing and exporting human song-birds is almost as precarious as dealing in tropical birds of plumage. In fact, in many ways it is more so. It is the human equation, and the human equation to be reckoned with in a songster is subtle, sensitive, and all too intricate. Those who deal in the precious merchandise of human song-birds need to have patience and far-seeing knowledge of their intricate mechanism.

The back-stage of an opera company is as colorful, as vocal, as full of flutterings as a bit of tropical forest.

If you are a song-bird and without the so-called "artistic temperament," your press agent is sure to regard you as difficult, and the Sunday rotogravure sections will have none of you.

Blessed the diva or the tenor who can whip up the suds of a good spectacular brainstorm out of the slightest incident. It helps immeasurably with a public that loves naughtiness in its idols.

The famous Fraulein Elsa von Hogarth, imported from Vienna, Salsburg, Prague, Munich and Berlin at a fabulous price, was the kind of song-bird to delight the heart of the press agent entrusted with her exploitation. The beautiful Elsa, blond, blue and of Brunhilde beauty, could not only sing like an angel, but could throw a fit of temper like a vixen. Her temperamental exploits were legion. There were stories abroad about the fierceness of her tempers, the unreasonableness of her demands, the impishness of her whims that had already become legendary.

The great Elsa von Hogarth, lyric soprano of hundreds of triumphs, a woman in her beauty, incomparable of voice, was what is known as a "holy terror."

The furor she created in America was not one that had solely to do with the glory of her voice. Before she had been a member of the International Opera company for a week, stories of her temperamental exploits were rife about the town. Her press agents regarded her as too good to be true. Every time Von Hogarth opened her mouth she was good copy. Newspapers clamored for stories of her latest exploit, brainstorm, or conquest.

The beautiful Elsa, long awaited in America, shot into public consciousness with the colorful explosion of a sky rocket.

Her every appearance at the opera was a signal for an ovation. They stood up and cheered her voice. They stood up and cheered her beauty. They stood up and cheered her personality. They stood up and cheered her blazing temperament.

One night, because some one in the audience had coughed during her second act in the role of Margherita, she stepped out to the footlights, interrupting the performance, and berated in no uncertain terms, and a thick German accent, the restless noises of an American audience. And the great jammed opera house of spectators loved it, and applauded for more berating, and the following day the newspapers, not only of America, but of the world, carried tales of the latest temperamental exploit of the diva.

It was said that Von Hogarth traveled with six pet panthers. It was said that no cooking, except that of her own Vienna, was palatable to her, and two Viennese chefs accompanied her on all tours. It was said that the only color that was endurable to Von Hogarth in a dressing room was canary yellow of a subtle and difficult tone to achieve. Consequently, there traveled in her entourage a painter whose exclusive job it was to see that in each city in which Von Hogarth appeared her dressing room, properly tinted, awaited her.

It had been decades, so they said in the realm of the opera, since any one diva had attracted as many "fan letters" (known to an older generation as "mash notes") as Von Hogarth. It was said, and with truth, that the songster's mail addressed to the opera house was delivered to her in bucketfuls. At the end of her performance, as she swept from the stage door to her car, the spectators stood rows deep on the sidewalk awaiting the deep thrill of the sight of her, wrapped in furs, followed by maids, as she darted into the dim perfumed interior of her limousine.

It was further said that Von Hogarth, with her retinue, one that included German barons, Austrian fraulein, vocal teachers, accompanists, secretaries, companion, chefs, chauffeurs, masseurs, occupied an entire wing of the fifteenth floor of the Ritz-Carlton hotel. The private elevator up to Madame's fifteenth floor was said to be tinted in canary yellow and the rugs on her floors, the brocades that hung on the walls, were of the same preferred tone.

In an age threatened with the invasion of the short-haired musician, and the simple, American-girl prima donna, the advent of Von Hogarth brought some of the voluptuous illusion of "the good old days" back to the opera. It recalled bygone opera eras, when adoring mobs had unhitched the horses from the carriage of the prima donna of the hour and dragged her chariot through the streets.

Von Hogarth had all of the glamor, all of the mysteries, all of the subtleties, and all of the scent, the firm entrenchment of the prima donna capricities to attract the mash note that belonged to the more spectacular details of her art.

Small wonder that the opera officials, the press department and the entire organization connected with the exploitation of the foreign singing bird, felt elation, excitement and gratification at the coming of Von Hogarth.

And when you look in upon the following in the imagination of the public is all the more extraordinary: Take the Madame at the conclusion of any of her triumphant operatic appearances. As she leaves the wings, after ovation after ovation, a freazled maid folds her into a sable wrap that half drowns her in the luxury of its nap. Another maid appears to help get her through the labyrinth of moving scenery, congratulations, fellow artists, and dim figures that seem to appear from nowhere, who clamor for Madame's autograph, as she forces her way toward her canary-colored dressing room.

On several of these occasions, Madame treats her onlookers to a burst of hysteria, or a flare of temper towards one of her attendants who has probably wrapped the sable too tightly, or the maid who has led her around the wrong way through the bulwarks of scenery. In Madame's dressing room it is a matter of gathering the avalanche of flowers, entrusting the great packages of letters to one of the attendants and beginning to force her way through the jam of admirers who intervene between her and her limousine.

There are more letterers awaiting the arrival of Madame at the hotel entrance, a repetition of flowers, the maids, the pekinese dogs, the furs, the bustle and the hullabaloo. The canary-colored elevator shoots Madame to her fifteenth floor. The retinue follows her down the hall that is hung in canary-colored brocade, but at the canary-colored door which leads to the apartment of Von Hogarth, the retinue disappears.

Madame enters her apartment alone. It is a plain, rather conventional suite of rooms and more often than not there is a big, blond, fattish sort of man, irresistibly good-natured and good-looking, lying asleep in a dressing gown upon the couch. A table is spread in the middle of the room. The man on the couch is the Baron von Hogarth, who has been married to Elsa for 22 years. The spread table is to contain their midnight supper. Before she awakens him out of the series of light snores, Elsa tiptoes to the adjoining room, also a conventional one. Three children, ranging from eight to twelve, are in bed there asleep. Von Hogarth tucks them in a bit more tightly, and in that same room removes the sable coat, her opera grandeur, and slips into a warm blue flannelette kimono.

Usually, while the baron is still asleep, Von Hogarth prepares their supper. There is no one in the world who can prepare these foods to her liking but herself.

Then she either awakens him by kissing him lightly on each eye, or the savory fumes of what Von Hogarth has been preparing on an electric stove, begin to tickle his nostrils and awakens him.

About twelve o'clock Von Hogarth and the baron sit down to a midnight supper of imported frankfurters, steaming sauerkraut, and great slices of rye bread. They are a relaxed pair of creatures, content, well-fed and middle-class in their enjoyment.

Sometimes, before they retire, the baron, great, sleepy, good-natured, good-looking fellow, dumps the packages of fan letters onto the table and begins the laborious process of answering the scented and adoring letters that have been addressed to the mysterious personage of his scented and adored wife.

Australia's Paper Supply

Australia's paper requirements may eventually be met by the product of native mills, although at present all paper used in the commonwealth is imported. Eucalyptus fiber has been successfully made into paper on an experimental scale by two Australian scientists. Hitherto attempts at utilizing hardwoods like eucalyptus have not been successful because the mechanical methods of producing pulp will not work with hardwoods, and the standard alkali processes for producing chemical pulp have resulted in paper that is too bulky, soft and "short" when tried with eucalyptus. However, a modification of one of the alkali processes has been worked out by the two Australians which gives a paper of satisfactory finish and strength.

Veteran Stage Driver

George M. Trask drove the stage between Columbia, Calif., and Sonora, four miles distant, for an even half century, starting when Grant was President. His driver's career was closed shortly before he died, after he had been for 40 years the United States mail carrier between the two communities. For a decade and a half he had used a motor-driven vehicle.

Hasn't Begun Yet

American newspapers are credited by the national conference on highway safety with accomplishing much toward keeping down automobile accidents, but any editor who drives out in the country and observes the bone-headed drivers must feel in a discouraged sort of a way that he hasn't got started on the job.—Milwaukee Sentinel.

Her Manuscripts Were Duds

By DOROTHY DOUGLAS

(Copyright.)

WHEN Jean Barry returned home after collecting a number of rejected stories from editorial offices she had so settled it in her own mind to give up story writing that she didn't really mind the fact that she had left the bundle of "dud" manuscripts somewhere.

"I don't know and I don't care," she told herself defiantly and swished a sudden tear from her eyes. She wondered vaguely if she had left them in the subway and whether the person who found them would return them.

John Winter, who found the packet on the subway when he went home from the office, glanced through them for an address, found the name, Dudley De Voe, and a street and number in the West Sixties, and wondered what to do with them.

"I'll just take them along to old Binks; he'll know what's best and may give him a plot as well."

Old Binks happened to be St. John Binks, a writer of no small fame and Winter's best pal.

"Picked up some poor chap's ravings coming home tonight," he told Binks, and handed over the packet. "Thought you might like to give them the casual before sending them back."

"Look's as if he had shopped them all over the place," was Binks' interested comment.

Consequently, a day or two later, Jean Barry received a letter that first enraged, then amused, then interested her.

It began, "Dear De Voe," and Jean laughed as she habitually did when addressed as a man. "Your stories have come into my hands. I am going to rewrite and sell them for you. You must be very young and inexperienced in women's wiles. Your women characters are feeble—women aren't like that nowadays. Your plots and manner are splendid but characterization awful. I don't want to meet you yet as it would perhaps weaken my conception of these characters or you might try to talk me into something I could not see. These stories are quite unsalable as they are, and I see they have been rejected, so feel confident you won't mind my collaboration. Will post on half the check to you as each story is published. Yours, XXX."

"Well, of all things! Nerve! Conceit! I don't know anything about women, don't I? Oh, well, I should worry anyway. There may be nothing in this letter but the ravings of a slightly demented old thing or—better still—I might get some checks."

Then one sunny morning Jean opened a letter in which was a check so big as to make her gasp and clutch her hair and cry and then sing. After all that she glanced through the short note.

"Watch Post week of ninth."

Jean scarcely ate or slept until that Friday morning dawned when she could get the Post.

There it was with her own title, "Triflers," by Dudley De Voe and St. John Binks.

"St. John Binks—seems to me I know that name," muttered Jean as she rushed home to read the story. There was no slightest doubt of it being an extraordinarily good yarn now that it was masterfully written.

Jean's next act was to write a short note to Binks, care of Post.

"Have reserved third table on left at Golywog, Thursday evening. Please don't disappoint. Will have magazine lying on table. De Voe."

When Binks stood in the low doorway of the Golywog to survey the human contents of that quaint dining place of upper Bohemia he fell to a sudden wish that some one sitting across the room could be his dinner partner. She was very, very alluring.

Then, Binks turned hot, then cold, was possessed of a wild desire to escape and a still wilder one to be dragged to his fate.

Suddenly she smiled. St. John Binks knew that in some purely feminine way she had recognized him as her collaborator. He went swiftly over and before sitting down opposite her had felt the warming glow in her finger clasp.

"You have been perfectly wonderful to me," she was saying, and little sparkles of electricity seemed to be snapping all about her. "If there is that much-talked-of place called a Seventh Heaven you have certainly put me there. I do want to thank you."

St. John Binks finally found his voice and to very good advantage. "You are thanking me—there was only one thought that entered my brain when I stepped through that door and it was that I might be sitting right here—and here I am. Isn't life great—sometimes?" He was gazing unbelievingly right into Jean's intelligent eyes.

"Sometimes," responded Jean, alias Dudley De Voe. And there was something about the manner in which she cast down her eyes that augured well for the future happiness of Binks.

Indians and Maple Sugar

The Indians taught us to make and enjoy maple sugar, says the American Tree association. In northern Minnesota one tribe still continues this ancestral industry, selling pure maple sugar in birch bark containers, much the same as their forefathers made before the coming of the white man. Today the chief center of production is in the northeastern states.

The Wedding Party

By SIDNEY BLAIR

(Copyright.)

HELENA settled down happily into her seat in the special train that was taking the guests to Phyllis Ewing's wedding. It hardly seemed possible that she was part of that gay throng—and an important part, too, a bridesmaid. She'd been in her own little home town ever since last June, when she and Phyllis and the other bridesmaids were graduated from school, and all these other girls had been having such gay times since then—how sweet it was of Phyllis to want her now. They'd been roommates, of course, but Phyllis knew that she hadn't much money, and most girls wouldn't have thought of asking her!

There were gay greetings all about her—"Hello, Sue; I hear you're going to Paris next month. So am I—see you on the Rue de la Paix!" "Nannette, did you hear about Madge? She eloped, my dear, and her father's raving; says he'll cut her off without a cent."

"Oh, well, she'll soon get a divorce! Madge will try anything once, even love's young dream," retorted Nannette, dropping into a chair near Helena's. Then, suddenly recognizing her, "Oh, hello, Helena. Haven't seen you since you used to help me with my themes at school!"

Nannette turned her back when the inspection was over. "Speaking of love's young dream," she remarked, "wait till you see the best man. He's absolutely the best looking thing I ever saw. And with a whole week of parties and things in romantic scenery ahead of us—well, girls, just give me a free hand. I warn you all. I'm going to do my best to land the handsome Daniel."

"Is that his name?" "Who is he, Nan?" "What's he like?"

"Daniel Gray. He's just out of West Point a year. I've never met anyone like him. I had luncheon with Phyllis and her best beloved and him when she was buying her trousseau in town, and lost my heart right then."

Helena met Daniel Gray that afternoon, but Nannette ran over to him with a tale of the latest joke, and pulled him away before he had much more than acknowledged the introduction. Helena liked him, liked the nice, steady look in his eyes, his square chin.

There was a dance that night, a very gay one. Daniel Gray danced with Helena, and told her a little about his life; he'd been stationed near Chicago this last year, but his regiment was going to the Philippines in just two weeks.

"Oh, how wonderful!" cried Helena, her blue eyes glowing. She was so small that she had to look up very far to catch the answering gleam in his dark ones. "How happy you must be at the thought of seeing so much of the world."

"I am," Daniel Gray answered. "I wouldn't want to stay all my life in the same place."

She saw little of him during the next few days. There were polo games between the men and girls—and she couldn't ride horseback. Nannette could, perfectly. They all went swimming a lot, too, but Helena couldn't swim way out to the raft, as Nannette could.

"Can't you do anything?" cried Nannette that night at dinner, disgustedly. Helena blushed, when everyone turned and looked at her. Then, suddenly, she threw back her head spiritedly.

"I can cook and straighten up a house, sew," she said, her voice trembling a little. "And I can make preserves, and play the piano a little, and take care of little children. That's all."

"Bravo, Helena!" cried Mr. Ewing. "You're a dear, old-fashioned girl, and I wish Phyllis was going to make John half as good a wife as you'll make the man you marry!"

A dreadful thing happened two days later—two long days, they were, in which Helena spent most of her time with Mr. Ewing, except for one golden afternoon when Daniel Gray and she went for a long walk together, and talked as if they'd been friends all their lives. The dreadful thing was that the maid of honor came down with mumps.

"It's so inconsiderate of you!" wailed Phyllis. "If you'd just had something that didn't show!"

"Well, she didn't, so pick another maid of honor, Phyl," urged Nannette. "I'm an applicant for the position; in fact, I insist on having it—the dress will just fit me, and—"

"And it will fit Helena, too," said Phyllis, quietly. "I choose her."

So it happened that little Helena walked down the aisle alone just in front of the bride, her lovely blue eyes starry with joy, straight toward where Daniel Gray and the groom waited.

And it happened, too, later that evening, that Daniel Gray took her to a secluded corner of the moonlit lawn.

"I can't help rushing you, Helena, but—well, I fell in love with you at first sight, and I'm sailing so soon, and I'll be so far away from you, for so long—unless you'll go with me, to cook, and straighten up a house—and play the piano a little—won't you marry me, please, Helena dear?"

Helena didn't answer in words. But Daniel found the answer quite understandable and satisfactory.

For Value Received

Mrs. Jones shook her head in puzzled disapproval as she stood in her neighbor's doorway. "He's a sullen, stubborn child, not one tear did he shed when his mother was dead, not even at the grave!"

Miss Murphy, the little seamstress, said gently in defense of the boy: "Jack was very good to his mother while she was alive, Mrs. Jones. He sold papers during the week and worked in the grocery store Saturdays. Many a time I saw him late Saturday night, carrying home old boxes for firewood."

"I know that, Miss Murphy, but he's been cold and ungrateful since she died, hardly giving anybody a civil answer."

"What will become of him?" Miss Murphy asked.

"The Lord only knows. There will be no money left when the burial expenses are paid. He is only thirteen, so I suppose the State will take him. Well, I must be getting supper. I'll feed him until things are settled. A lot of thanks I'll get, I suppose," she added crossly.

Mary White, one of Miss Murphy's customers, had been sitting silently in the background. From time to time her eyes had rested on the boy in question sitting on the stoop in front of his empty home. He was whittling a stick and to a casual observer there was something brazen in his square set shoulders, his sullen eyes and defiant mouth.

Mary had known of the love which existed between mother and son so she was not misled by neighbors' talk or by the boy's conduct, either.

"I think I will go out and speak to him, Miss Murphy," she said, "he must be very lonely."

Miss Murphy nodded sympathetically and Mary walked down the path and crossed the court to where the boy sat.

"Hello, Jack," she said.

"Hullo," he answered, looking indifferently away from her.

"Jack," she said softly, but he drew away impatiently as if resenting her pity—the attitude which had antagonized the shocked neighbors.

Mary studied him for a moment, then leaned forward quickly and said: "Jack, my mother died, too."

The lad was taken off his guard. He raised his eyes and in the fleeting glance, Mary read the agony in their depths. The lids dropped again once more. He was the sullen boy and Mary struggled to keep back the tears, to do the right thing to ease the pain which was eating at his heart.

The opportunity came from him.

"Those were pretty roses you sent, Miss White. She liked roses."

There was no break in his voice, so Mary swallowed the lump in her own throat and answered:

"Mine did, too."

She rose to her feet and said briskly:

"Getting near supper time, Jack. My aunt will be waiting. I want you to come home with me to supper and stay tonight."

She did not give him time to refuse but began to close doors and windows.

"We'll tell Mrs. Jones to keep an eye on everything until you come back."

That night after Jack had gone to bed in the pretty guest room, Mary and her aunt sat talking. Her aunt was arguing gently, but not convincingly for her own heart had been moved at the boy's silent suffering.

"It's another of your impulsive acts, Mary. Too bad your purse isn't as big as your heart."

"But, Auntie, I really can get along with this piano, it has a good tone; it will last a few years more."

Auntie gave in and Mary comforted herself with the thought that her music pupils would rack a new piano anyway, and instead of buying the new one she took Jack with her for a summer on her Uncle's farm, back in the hills.

A new world opened for Jack, wonderful rides with Mr. Wilkins, Mary's uncle, to the village or the county seat. He enjoyed all the activities of the farm, feeding the animals, gathering the eggs, watching the milking, or wandering for miles with Mary White and the two dogs, King and Duke.

Gradually the hardness left his face. When the time came to leave in September, the Wilkins offered to keep him and send him to school if in exchange he would help with the chores. He gladly accepted.

Mary received an occasional letter from him but two years later a maternal uncle appeared, a man of moderate wealth, who took the boy to his home in a western city. Mary was married that year and Jack faded out of her life.

Twenty-five years passed quickly, and Mary White, now Mary Martin, sat talking to her husband in the sitting room where they held their confidential chats. The years had taken their toll from her freshness and youthful good looks but had left her with a spiritual beauty. Her impulsive generosity had been sobered by experience, and she still possessed the valiant heart.

"Joe," she asked anxiously, "do you really believe they have dug up that western land case?"

"I know they have, Mary, they are holding it ready to spring the last few hours of the campaign. We received some inside information."

"But it was long ago and not your fault. You were the victim of circumstances and on one with any justice could consider you did wrong. Your record, public and private, is spotless since then."

Joseph Martin laughed bitterly.

"What do they care about clean records when they set out to drag a man down? Barker swore he would get me. I heard he employed one of the best lawyers in that state and he is on his way East at the present time."

"See how crafty they are. They will wait until the eve of the election and spring the stuff—scare headlines and all that. You know how hard it is to fight a lie which is half a truth. The public gets worked up and the other man walks in."

He rose and began pacing the floor.

"Honest Mary, I don't care about the Governor's chair, but I do care about my good name. God help me, if I could only protect it from those vultures."

"You shall protect it." Mary rose to her feet and stood beside him. "God is good; a way will open for you out of your difficulties."

Her husband gave her a loving smile.

"Just you wait and see, Joseph Anthony Martin, two weeks from today you will be governor-elect with your troubles behind you."

"I hope so," he said with a sigh, and even as he spoke, he felt the contagion of her unswerving faith and her brave spirit.

A few days later, Mary was hurrying through the great Union Station, anxious to catch the late afternoon train. She threaded her way hurriedly through the crowd and had almost reached the gate when she collided with a passenger from one of the incoming trains. Her hand bag went flying and the man with many apologies sought to recover the scattered articles.

"I am sorry," he said.

"I was at fault myself," Mary answered. "I am sorry I delayed you and caused so much bother." For the first time she really looked at him and he returned the glance with puzzled wonder. Then the discovery was mutual. He cried out "Mary White!" and she answered, "Jack."

It was a wonderful meeting. There was so much to talk about and Mary insisted on taking him home with her.

"I am East on important business, but as I am a day ahead of schedule, I will go with you," he agreed laughingly.

On the way home, Jack questioned Mary about her frequently worried expression. Mary explained how she was anxious to save her husband's reputation from the plotting of his enemies, and how she earnestly prayed for God to deliver him from his persecutors.

Jack listened intently. He read the situation at once and as the sweet-voiced woman at his side talked on a thousand memories awoke. White roses on a casket, a pain which stabbed at his heart, a tender-hearted young woman who had taken him from his misery and given him that glorious summer and his golden opportunity.

When they reached the house, Joseph Martin greeted him hospitably. Any friend of Mary's had a thousand welcomes.

After dinner they talked over the election until the candidate was obliged to leave to keep a speaking engagement. They met again at breakfast but Jack was obliged to leave immediately afterward.

They waved goodbye to him from the doorway begging him to visit them soon again. When they returned to the living room Mary discovered a package addressed to her which she opened.

Suddenly she gave a cry which bought her husband to her side. She held up a letter and began to read: "Dear Mary:

Your prayers have won out. I am "the smart lawyer from the West" you talked about. Enclosed you will find all my memoranda, the data and affidavits on the Rogers land case.

This was to be a big thing for me but as yet I have not accepted a penny from my client. I am making you a present of my work.

It cannot be duplicated. It took me months to get it together.

I am glad I had the opportunity to save you from a heartache in part payment for the comfort you brought to the aching heart of the boy, Jack."

478 BIRTHS 221 DEATHS ARE RECORDED IN COUNTY

Male Births Outnumber Female Births by Twenty—Four Sets of Twins Are Registered

MORE CHILDREN'S DEATHS

There were 478 births in Garrett county during 1930, an increase of 47 over 1929, and 221 deaths recordcd, an increase of 13 over 1929, according to a report made by Miss Julia Rowan, county statistician.

Of the deaths, 127 were adults and 94 were children, a decrease of 17 adults over 1929, and an increase of 30 children. Of the 478 births 229 were females and 249 were males. There were four sets of twins, the report stated.

When compared with other counties in the state of Maryland during 1930 Garrett county had the fourth highest birth rate, 24.0 per 1,000 population; and the third lowest death rate, 9.9 per 1,000 population.

Importance of Registration

"There is hardly a relation of life—social, legal or economic—in which the evidence furnished by an accurate registration of birth and death may not prove to be of the greatest value," Miss Rowan said.

"Following are some of the reasons: "As evidence to prove the age and legitimacy of heirs; as proof of age to determine the validity of a contract entered into by an alleged minor; to establish age and proof of citizenship and descent in order to vote; the right of admission to professions and many public offices; legal age to marry; claims of widows and orphans under the widows' and orphans' pension law; settlement of insuranec and pension.

"To prove irresponsibility of children for crime and misdemeanors, and various other matters in the criminal code; to determine relationship of guardians and wards as proof of cltizenship in order to travel abroad; in claims for exemption from or the right to serve on juries or in the military service.

"Birth or death certificates for all the above reasons must be certified. It is therefore wise for the informant to be quite sure the statements are true. A great many times the information as given on the death certificate of a deceased is incorrect. It is wise for some member of each family to gather the history of his mother's and his father's families, so that in case of a deceased member, the certificate given by the undertaker or doctor can be filled out correctly, not guessing at the birthplace, name and age of the father, or the maiden name of the mother, etc. If in doubt consult an older relative or the family Bible, because when death certificates are certified they are to be true, otherwise the information is false and not valid.

"It is a well established fact by years of experience that an accurate record in all eases cannot or will not be made unless the law requires it. Certificates of birth and death are constantly required in court and elsewhere to establish necessary facts. Pension or life insurance may depend on proper evidence of the eause of death. Title and right to inheritance may be jeopardized by failure to send in such records," Miss Rowan concluded.

All births and deaths are first recorded in the County Register, then in the State register and from there they are recorded in the Census Bureau, of Washington, D. C.

"WESTERN BILL" HARVEY HAS NOVEL LIQUOR ALIBI

Caught Working Still, Claims He Was Seeking Stolen Tire Pump

"Western Bill" Harvey, whom the Cumberland office of the Prohibition Bureau considers, by virtue of several appearances in both State and Federal courts, to be Garrett county's leading bootlegger, had a good story and stuck to it but it did not get him far in U. S. Commissioner Anderson's court Friday. Harvey was arrested at a seventy-five gallon open air still near Altamont. He was said to have been operating the pump attached to the pressure tank of the gasoline burner when the agents arrived.

Harvey's version of his presence was quite different, however, as given to the commissioner.

"I lost the pump from my car," said the defendant, "and I thought that if I took a walk through the woods I'd find some of those bootleggers using it on their still. And I was right, too. I did find the pump just where I expected."

"Then you knew of the still?" asked Agent in charge George T. Danforth.

"Oh, no! I just discovered it when looking for my pump."

Harvey was held in $1,000 bond on charges of manufacture and possession.

Two other Garrett county men, George and John Nails, were held in $1,000 each on the same charges. They were found operating a ten gallon open air still. A small quantity of whiskey was found in each case.

Change in Bus Schedule To Be Made

That the Monongahela West Penn Public Service Company contemplates revising its bus schedule, effective on February 1, was reported in Oakland during the past week.

The number of busses coming into Oakland under the new schedule would be cut to two, arriving here approximately at 11:15 in the morning and 3:30 in the afternoon. There would be no night service from Crellin and Hutton to Oakland under the new schedule.

A protest against the change has been made to the Public Service Commission by Mayor Grover C. Stemple, but nothing definite has been done by the commission. No official announcement of the proposed change has been made by the West Penn Co.

The four brothers, Orval, Jack, George and Junior Savage, all of near Sang Run, are being held under $500 bond each for their appearance.

CENSUS REPORT REVEALS 8,651 UNDER AGE OF 19

Check-up on Boys and Girls in County Shows That 4,994 Children Are Attending School

157 MARKED DEFECTIVE

There are 8,651 children in the county under the age of 19 years, an official report of the census, taken by the State Board of Education, reveals. Four thousand nine hundred ninety four of these children were in public and non-public schools during November when the census was taken. This leaves 3,657 who were attending no school, practically all of whom are either under or above the school attendance age requirement.

These figures were given out by John L. Fitzwater, attendance officer, who compiled the report of the school teachers in this county. This census is taken every two years through an order by the State Board of Education and the assistance of the teaching staff of the county makes the figures accurate and complete in every detail.

Other figures compiled show that there are 124 physically defective children in the county, but that 77 of these are attending school.

Thirty-three children in the county under the age of 19 are mentally defective, the report states. Ten of these, however are attending school. One of the remaining 23 is under school age, seven are over school age, and 15 are not being taken care of in institutions.

Six hundred fifty-six of those not defective were employed in some occupation, while 2,931 not defective, were not employed. Of this number, however, 2,193 were under school age.

NEW COMMUNITY HALL IS DEDICATED AT CRELLIN

Program in Charge of Crellin Parent-Teacher Association

The Stanley Coal Company, Crellin, formally dedicated its new hall as a community center with special services on Monday evening. The program and dedication was in charge of the Parent-Teacher association of the Crellin school, with Mr. Stanley Ashby presiding.

The following program was carried out: Concert by Crellin Band, with H. S. Mickey, director; song, How do you do, group of girls; play, Jerry and the Ice cream; song, Grandma's Garden; play, The Whipping Johnny Didn't Get; a folk dance; selection by the band; play, Bertha as Teacher; song, Garrett County Hills.

The address was made by Rev. C. A. Shilke, Oakland, who traced the history of the community as a center from the early tribal life to its place in the complex civilization of today. He showed the value of the development of the social life of the community as made possible by community centers such as Crellin. He further emphasized the educational side of community life as the basis of the moral and spiritual development of the day.

Following the address a prayer of dedication was made and Stanley Ashby, in behalf of the coal company, announced that the building was now given over to the people to be used for their educational, social and spiritual uplift. The band concluded the program with several selections.

The new hall is located over the Company store. It has a hardwood floor, an adequate stage and a fully equipped kitchen.

Mr. Charles Ream, president of the Stanley Coal company, was unable to be present at the dedication as he was called to New York on business.

THE THIRD HOUSE AT ANNAPOLIS SINCE 1868

Compulsory Payment of Wages To Unemployed Urged; Repeal of 18th Amendment Asked

SHORT SESSION YESTERDAY

By Paul Winchester and Grafton Lee Brown, Special Correspondents

The Lobby or Third House at Annapolis, which has been functioning since the session of the General Assembly was organized in 1868, before the inauguration of Governor Oden Bowie, who was elected as the first Executive under the Constitution of 1867, is still ready for work, and will be on hand as soon as the legislative body settles down.

The foundation of the organization to control legislation was the result of a conference between William Pinkney Whyte, later Governor, Attorney General and United States Senator; George Colton and Arthur P. Gorman. It has always been conceded that the plan to require all those who had schemes of a valuable character, which would require legislation, whether these schemes involved the election of the United States Senators, State Treasurers, Police Commissioners for Baltimore City, the grant of privileges of value to corporations or individuals, the confirmation of officials by the Senate after their appointment by the Governor, and other matters of a monetary value, was formulated during the early days of the session of 1868, and carried on to an unholy degree of perfection later on—and that the inspiring genius of the combination was William Pinkney Whyte,

FATHER'S NIGHT HELD BY P.-T. ASSOCIATION

Mayor Stemple and E. R. Jones Give Helpful Addresses

"Father's Night" was observed at the regular meeting of the Parent-Teacher association held in the Oakland Grammar school last Thursday evening, and was featured by addresses by Mayor Grover C. Stemple and E. R. Jones.

Mrs. W. W. Grant, president, called the meeting to order, and then turned the program over to the men. The program was as follows:

P.-T. A. song, "Together"; song, "Long, Long Trail"; music, string instruments, Cogley Brothers; address, Mayor Grover C. Stemple; address, Attorney E. Ray Jones; music, Cogley Brothers; song, "Till We Meet Again." Mr. William Gibson presided at the piano.

The mayor's talk centered on "Co-operation", and was enjoyed. Mr. Jones talked on "Yes—But, and But—Yes," and contained many practical thoughts and suggestions.

Invitation for membership was extended. A report of the gain in weight by children who were drinking the milk furnished free by the association led to a request for increased funds for milk for the undernourished children. Mrs. C. Milton Sincell made clear the fact that while help might be had from the Christmas Seal Sale, it could not be a great deal as the fund had to be distributed over the county.

It is planned to have a "Mother's Night" at the next meeting.

Masonic Lodge Installs New Officers Tuesday

S. Townshend Naylor was installed as worshipful master of Oakland Lodge No. 192, A., F. and A. M., at the regular communication held Tuesday evening. Other officers installed included Delbert M. Gerard Everstine, Cumberland, deputy grand lecturer of Maryland, was the installing officer. Wellington E. Yutzy, retiring worshipful master, was presented with a Past Master's jewel by Rev. Shilke. An address on the Masonic apron was given by Mr. Everstine, after which refreshments were served.

PROMINENT FARMER IS ATTACKED BY MAD BULL

Thomas Johnson, a prominent farmer of this county, is a patient at the Miner's hospital, Frostburg, suffering with a fracture of the left leg, resulting from being gored by a bull in the barn at the Johnson farm Tuesday morning about 9 o'clock.

At the time of the accident Mr. Johnson was accompanied by his son, Thomas, whose presence probably prevented the bull from goring his father to death.

After the animal was driven off, Mr. Johnson was taken to the home and an examination by Dr. J. C. Cobey disclosed a serious fracture of the left leg. Mr. Johnson, who is about 80 years of age, is resting comfortably.

AN EMERGENCY LOAN FOR FARMERS IS AVAILABLE

Loan Is Made Possible Through Appropriation by U. S. Congress

An emergency loan of money to farmers in drought or storm stricken areas, for the purpose of buying seeds, fertilizer, feed for livestock, and gas and oil for tractors, is now available through the U. S. department of agriculture, according to J. H. Carter, county agent.

This money will be available for farmers who cannot secure a loan from their local banks, and in no case will one man receive more than $600. This loan is made possible through an appropriation by Congress, and a resolution to that effect was approved on December 20, 1930.

Applications for this loan may be had at the office of the county agent, Court House, Oakland, and the county agent, if he is wanted, will help fill out all applications. The county agent, however, has nothing to do about granting the loan. The United States department of agriculture has sole authority on granting or rejecting the application. Pamphlets explaining the requirements necessary for securing this money may also be had at the office of the county agent.

As security, each individual who obtains a loan for seed, fertilizer, feed for livestock, or gas and oil for tractor, must give an absolute first lien on all of the crops growing, or to be grown by him in 1931 in such form as to entitle it to filing in the county in which he resides.

The plan of making the loan was explained to all county agents at the annual conference at College Park during the week of January 19, by W. C. Warburton, director of Extension Service, U. S. Department of Agriculture, and Mr. Carter, local agent, will be glad to discuss the question with all interested parties, and distribute all necessary blanks.

Held on Assault and Battery Charge

Floyd Fazenbaker, of Bloomington, was arrested Monday, charged with assault and battery upon Oliver Paugh, also of Bloomington. A hearing is to take place tomorrow before Justice W. A. Gonder. It is alleged that Fazenbaker used a poker in the assault upon Paugh, while Fazenbaker asserts Paugh was the aggressor.

At a hearing on Saturday before Justice Gonder, Louis Waingold entered a plea of guilty to the charge of using automobile markers after his license had been revoked, and was fined $125 and costs. He was also fined $10 and costs for having no registration card. Both fines were paid.

George Moreland, of near Table Rock, is charged in a warrant with driving a motor vehicle while under the influence of liquor. It is alleged that the Moreland car was in collision with a car driven by "Barney" Barnard, near Gorman, last Saturday. The hearing in this case has been postponed.

Donations Made to Red Cross

Two checks of $5 were received during the past week by the Red Cross chapter, to be used in the special drought relief of the National headquarters. The checks were received from U. M. Stanton, Grantsville, and M. C. Clayton, Fairmont.

G. M. McClelland Friend, of Mt. Lake Park, sent in his membership fee of $1 for the local Red Cross Roll Call, bringing the total to 383, only 17 less than the quota asked at the beginning of the drive in November.

PROPOSED ROAD BUILDING PROGRAM NOT FAVORED

Members of the General Assembly Stand By Their Pre-election Promies to the Taxpayers

MEETING WELL ATTENDED

What was probably the final meeting of the road committee, composed of representative citizens from each of the districts of the county, along with quite a large number of other interested residents, was that held last Saturday afternoon at the Court House in Oakland.

In addition to the members of the committee, Road Commissioner Uhl, District Road Engineer Leo T. Downey, Senator McComas and Delegates Markley and Cullers were present.

Chairman McIntire of the committee presided. Former Senator John W. McCullough addressed the meeting at length, reviewing the work of the committee with regard to the arrangements made for the advancement of the funds by the State for the undertaking, dwelling at length upon the fact that an opinion had been given by a member of the Attorney General's staff that in case bonds to the amount of $1,000,000 were issued the interest money could be taken from the principal and in this manner the roads could be built at no direct cost whatever to the residents of Garrett county.

Mr. Uhl followed Mr. McCullough. The Roads Commission chairman said that it did not become him as a member of the commission to urge the building of roads in any particular section of the county—that should be left to the Board of County Commissioners, but that he was anxious to see Garrett county have a system of highways equalled by no other county in the State and suggested that probably the County Commissioners were in position to advance some practical proposal by which funds could be secured without raising the local tax rate.

The Commissioners in turn, replying to Mr. Uhl's suggestion, stated that with the numerous heavy demands being made upon the county's finances the County Commissioners could not aid the proposal without adding to the already burdensome tax rate.

Others in the audience spoke, and then Delegate Cullers took the floor, stating that he was in honor bound by his pre-election promise not to introduce nor support a bonding measure, but that if it appeared to be the desire of a majority of the taxpayers that such a measure be introduced and passed he was willing to abide by their decision.

Senator McComas followed Mr. Cullers by invitation of Chairman McIntire. The Senator, also bound by his pre-election promise respecting a bonding measure, said that he could not honorably recede from his position at this time.

Mr. Markley, of the House, took the same stand as that of the Senator, and he was followed by Mr. William Miller, of Accident.

At an unexpected moment, when it was apparent that the meeting would accomplish absolutely nothing, a motion was made to adjourn.

A great many of the people attending the meeting expressed their disappointment in the outcome, especially those who live at some distance from an improved highway, while others, feeling that the condition of business with little or no relief in sight in the immediate future, while favoring the building of a system of highways under normal conditions, went away from the meeting well satisfied with its decision not to take further action at this session of the Legislature, although it has been intimated that a measure is now being drawn to be sent to Annapolis for introduction directing the building of some forty miles of roadways in the county, the interest charges to be taken from the principal sum realized from the sale of the bonds.

Dr. Broadwater Taken to Hospital in Cumberland

Dr. N. I. Broadwater, of Oakland, who recently suffered an attack of rheumatism affecting his legs and back, and who was confined to his bed as a result for two weeks, was taken to Memorial Hospital, Cumberland, on last Saturday afternoon, in which institution he is being given treatment. Yesterday his condition was somewhat improved.

SCOOP'S COLUMN

By SCOOP—HIMSELF

Four Out of Five Have It

While during the past few years science has assured men that small pox, and malaria can be ex-communicated; that the diphtheria germ can be annihilated; that the leper sufferers can be isolated; that tuberculosis can be cured; that practically all of the dreaded diseases of the past are now treated successfully—there is creeping into a man's life the joy-killing tribe who warn that society's downfall is at hand because of the dreadful dandruff, pyorrhea, and halitosis, not to mention B. O. and athlete's foot.

This kind of advertising of antiseptic and other preparations reputed to save us from all the ills to which the flesh is heir, has done much harm to the timid, shrinking, self-conscious soul who abounds in Garrett county and everywhere.

While real science is relieving the human mind of many former bugaboos, modern "fear factories" are manufacturing new horrors to alarm the gullible and shorten their lives through sheer fright.

Consider the effect on the heart to suddenly read in a magazine where nine chances out of ten you have halitosis. Why it's enough to freeze ones blood to learn that four out of every five have pyorrhea and that Three in One have oil.

Even though you walk to work on a street car, or sit upon a stool the entire day it's a twenty to one shot that you are bothered with athlete's foot.

And unless you are a user of Misterine (buy a good mouthwash with what you save) the barber is going to find out that you have dandruff, and oh, imagine the embarrassment!

Even if you don't dance, or never have to wait on a customer at close range, it's enough to give you chilblains if you read that six out of seven have "B. O."

Man is indeed tormented with a new list of physical horrors, which without treatment, are fatal to popularity and that alluring come hitherness so sought after by offsprings of Eve.

Believe it or not, dread in the heart is worse than dandruff in the hair, and fear in the soul is more unsightly than film on the teeth.

Oh well, since you have asked me outright, I do use Listerine toothpaste, and a mouthwash occasionally. You see, there is a possibility that I have acid stomach. I have read somewhere that eleven out of eight have it and never realize it. If they ever find out that flat feet is a social handicap, I am as good as kicked out of the 400.

Our New Prognostieator

Although the Boss editor still believes in the old groundhog story of February 2, Scoop is of the opinion that the famous weather prognostieator should be replaced by one who is more competent of bringing us sunshine and warmth, instead of the usual "six more weeks of winter weather."

It seems all the groundhogs of Sang Run, Snaggy Mountain, Hoopole Ridge, and Canaan Valley manage to come out in the open just as Old Sol is peeping from behind a cloud, and seeing their shadow, they scurry for shelter and then the snow begins.

Now Scoop has secured a very valuable specimen of the Dodo bird, which was guaranteed by Dr. Africanus Huntibus, to foreast the breakup of winter in February. Back in the old days the groundhogs burrowed under the village of Dodoville, making their houses cave in all around them, and ever since the Dodos have vowed vengeance on the burrowing species.

The Dodos believe that if they can prognostieate with more accuracy than the ground sausages, their popularity will be unquestioned, and that of the ground hogs will go lower than the dust.

The Republican's Dodo bird will broadcast its message every morning from the ledge over Ikey Sincell's store. If Dodo yawns and scratches with its left hind foot six times, there will be six more weeks of winter. If he doesn't do any of these things, there probably will be six weeks anyway.

Firemen Rescue Henry

Having only one key to a door often has its disadvantages, as Henry Lauer will testify since his experience Saturday night, especially when the lock is on the other side from where you are, and doors have a habit of swinging shut of their own accord, leaving you on the inside of the room.

Not wanting to spend the evening there he called to Cotalina, the hired girl, to have someone bring a ladder. She called Fred. Peddicord, and the ladder was forthcoming,—also the fire truck with several other firemen. They made the rescue from the second story window in their usual efficient manner.

Since girls as a general rule are no longer getting their hair bobbed, a checker tournament is being planned at Bittner and Stahl's barber shop, to keep things looking lively. The details have not been announced, but it is thought all entrants will be required to get a shave every two weeks whether they need it or not. A. S. Ours is ready to challenge all comers.

A Meditation Medley.

To the Editor of The Republican.

I have chosen the above caption because of the combination of subjects which I wish to present to the public for its serious thought and appropriate action for the general good of the county and for the country at large.

Although not a citizen of this county, I have been for more than a third of a century a taxpayer therein and have spent about one-third of that time as a close observer of the moral, religious, educational, economic, legal and legislative activities while I paid prolonged visits herein each summer during the past thirty-eight years save one.

While I have not been a legal resident, I have been, like all other taxpayers, a very interested party in the use made of the money which I, in a comparatively small way, have paid into the public treasury.

Last Saturday I attended the public meeting in the Court House to consider ways and means to build seventy miles of improved roads in this county, and I saw that meeting turn down that proposition on account of the expense to the whole county because only a part of the county would get the immediate and direct benefit.

While I did not think that I had voice or vote in that meeting, it looked to me like a rather short-sighted and selfish stand to take. Personally, I do not want to pay more taxes neither do I feel the need of more improved roads for my own use, yet I pay no money more willingly and for a more satisfactory public investment than that part of my taxes which goes toward improved public roads, provided the money is kept free from graft of any kind.

To my mind, graft in one form or another is the vulnerable part of road building; and legislation and all public effort should be concentrated upon that phase of the subject. The strictest sort of laws and the closest inspection into how the public money is used and kept free from politics ought to be enacted to go with every bond issue.

The Commissioners' plea for economy sounded good as far as it went. But do they have the legal power and exercise it to curb or prevent undue expenditure of funds as they did last Saturday? Do we not need adequate legislation to help them to tighten the county's purse-strings against useless or extravagant bills here and here all along the line? Of course, the Commissioners must be governed by the law in spending and they are constrained by their duty to save for the taxpayers. They are the best judges to recommend what additional laws they need to make them the best possible public officers.

I have no criticisms for any particular public officers, but since I have been a close observer of the administration of justice about the Court House, the most of which is governed by statutes interpreted and applied by the Court, I have come to the conclusion that the people should protect themselves, their property, their homes and even their lives at much less expense and more efficiently by the enactment and prompt enforcement of laws making personal offenders personally responsible when proven guilty.

Technical delays almost without number, useless costs and fees, the winking at of perjury, the laxness of respect for the court, etc., amount to little short of robbery of the people's money and rebellion against all government when we sum up the so-called administration of justice by many courts of justice which I have personally observed in many states.

Despite many objections that have been made and many more that may be offered against the simple, cheap and effective personal punishment of a large percentage of criminals by the old-time whipping post, I join with many jurists and publicists who are now advocating a return to that means of deterring crime as the fairest way to deal with criminals whose conscience and sense of manhood are so hardened that fines and imprisonments do nothing more than to mock justice and exalt them to mooted martyrdom.

To visit our courts and penal institutions without maudlin sentiment should convert anyone that the country is in crying need of a change along this line to correct crime and cure the afflictions of multitudes who are trying to pay for the crimes of others who are living in jails kicking because they don't get chicken or turkey, and have occasional meals of bread and molasses.

T. D. RICHARDS.

P. S.—I am enclosing an article taken from The Presbyterian, published in Philadelphia, on the subject of the whipping post, which is well worth reading.

A public meeting at Frederick, Md., last week, took similar action and asked that our State Legislature pass appropriate laws. Indeed there seems to be a general uprising demanding such laws because there seems to be a general necessity for them, while the criminal class regards nothing but their own ill-gotten gains and ill-deserved sympathy.

T. D. RICHARDS.

The article from The Presbyterian bears the caption:

USING THE LASH

Two judges of higher courts, one of them Judge Buffington, of Pennsylvania, an honored jurist who has been a Federal Judge for thirty-eight years, have come out in favor of lashing of criminals. They argue with good reason that arrest and incarceration exalt the self-esteem of a certain type, and they become heroes to their kind. But the lash applied will not only hurt physically, which such criminals greatly dread, but will also humiliate them in their own sight and that of their pals. A legal and guarded use of the lash might do much to check crime.

Mr. Casteel Has a Word To The Farmers of Garrett County

I was at the bond bill meeting in the Court House last Saturday and was glad to see so many out. I want to ask all you farmers of Garrett county if you are in favor of a bond bill of thousands of dollars and give a mortgage on all you have and let a few men spend any amount where they please.

One hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars for school houses when we have lots standing idle where the children can run home and get their dinners, or do you want them to meet an old bus and be hauled to one place and forced to stand along the road in the snow and rain until it comes, or if they don't get there until after it goes, to stand about until they are about frozen. Some have had their feet and hands frozen so far, and $14,000 is paid for hauling them.

Now I would like to say more, but I would like to hear from about 6000 of you good hard working farmers and your wives that work twelve to fifteen hours per day and lots of times don't make a dollar a day, who are paying out large sums of money that does not benefit you any.

I hope you will all say a few words and let our good representatives know what you want and let us vote for the men to run the schools.

T. W. CASTEEL.

Oakland, January 27, 1931.

THE PRESIDENT'S POSITION ON REPEAL

In concurring in the view of his Law Enforcement Commission that the Eighteenth Amendment should not be repealed, President Hoover is adhering strictly to the position which he took in his pre-convention compaign of 1928; in his speech of acceptance at Palo Alto in the same year, and his inaugural address on March 4, 1929.

Both in his acceptonce speech and in his inaugural address he promised the country that he would appoint a commission to make a thoroughgoing study of the whole question of prohibition and the abuses that have grown up under it. This commission, consisting of eleven prominent jurists and others, has made its report.

Whatever action is to be taken rests with Congress.

While the President has expressed his opposition to the form of the revision of the Eighteenth Amendment suggested by the Law Enforcement Commission, the New York Times says Mr. Hoover has not closed his mind against a change in the amendment should further experience prove a revision to be desirable.

This paper says the President has been described as feeling that his statements against specific revision have been misconstrued by some newspapers and political leaders as placing him against any revision of the amendment in case a further trial should show the law could not be enforced.

"Those close to the administration," the Times asserts, "said that it was only fair to the President that his position, as defined in his message, should be correctly interpreted."

In this connection emphasis is laid by the Times upon that portion of the President's message in which he said that he was in unity with the spirit of the report and seeking constructive steps to advance "the national ideal of eradication of the social and economic and political evils of this traffic to preserve the gains which have been made and to eliminate the abuses which exist," but, "at the same time facing with an open mind the difficulties which have arisen under this experiment."

Speedy action by Congress is not to be expected. While there will be much discussion of the report at this session, concrete action, if any, undoubtedly will be left to the new Congress. By the time that body assembles there will have been a crystallizing of sentiment on the several proposals and Congress will be able to act in the light of the results of long public discussion of the report.

The President has performed the functions of the executive in causing the investigation to be made. He surprised many by promptly voicing his own opinions regarding the recommendations of the commission in his message of transmittal. In that message he well said:

"My duty and that of all executive officials is clear—to enforce the law with all the means at our disposal without equivocation or reservation."

THE POLITICAL WHEELS OF WASHINGTON

By JAMES L. WEST.

Washington, January 27—With the Nye Committee determined to turn the spot light on the 1930 Democratic Senatorial election in Alabama, where there have been charges of ballot manipulation, Senate Democrats rise up in oppsition.

Some of them take the position that the committee would be exceeding authority to seize ballots in the Alabama contest. And, strangely enough, one of those who would put the checkrein on the investigation is Caraway, of Arkansas, who so singularly distinguished himself in the performance of the late Senate lobby committee.

To Mr. Caraway, in his role of lobby investigator, not even the personal, private papers of individuals were inviolate. But, of course, ballots and other records in an election where serious charges of irregularities have been made must be protected.

Chairman Nye says that a preliminary inquiry shows that the Alabama Senatorial election last year in which the Senate's greatest raconteur, Tom Heflin, was defeated for reelection, was one of the rawest the committee has encountered.

Word has reached Chairman Nye that the contents of a lot of ballot boxes in Alabama including ballots, registration books and poll books are being burned.

"The law requires that these boxes be kept intact for six months after the election," Senator Nye says, "and their destruction would be regarded as prima facie evidence of election frauds."

Whatever else may happen, Senator Carter Glass, the little giant from the Virgima hills, is determined that the Senate and country shall know from whence came and whither went the political funds which Bishop James Cannon, Jr., handled in the Presidential campaign of 1928.

Another Senate Committee, the so-called lobby body, of which Senators Caraway of Arkansas, and Walsh, of Montana, were the driving forces, sought repeatedly, but unsuccessfully, to elicit from the Virginia bishop the same information that the Nye Committee was directed to obtain.

Bishop Cannon defied the lobby committee on the proposition, holding that the information sought was not within the scope of the inquiry which it was directed to make into the activities of lobbyists in the Nation's Capital.

Representative Loring Black, of Brooklyn, threatens to force the issue of the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment at the caucus of House Democrats which leader John Garner has called for early March to prepare, as Jack says, for the organization of the next House of Representatives.

Mr. Black insists that the House Democrats of the new Congress shall go on record on this proposition. Leader Jack is exerting all of his persuasive influence to head off the member from Brooklyn, for a precipitation of the prohibition question in the caucus would cause extreme dissension.

Black, and other wets in the Democratic House membership, are determined, however, to force the issue and it remains to be seen how effective will be the efforts of Mr. Garner and other Southern drys to head off the movement.

An Interesting Fact

THE JEW BILL

In the present era of racial and religious tolerance and equality in Maryland, it is difficult for us to comprehend that there was a time in this State when a very respectable and worthy sect was deprived of rights and privileges accorded to others. In the present instance this condition was developed during the regime of the Puritans, a religious organization demanding much for itself but most intolerant of the belief and form of worship of others.

You will remember that immediately following their migration into Maryland at the invitation of Lord Baltimore the Puritans attempted to change the form of the oath of allegiance to the proprietary, and set about to seize the reigns of government. In this, joining with other malcontents, they succeeded.

It was during the Puritan control of the government that the agitation against the Jews culminated, the result being that until the year 1826 no Jew could hold any office, civil or military, under the State government. This, in the face of the adoption of the act concerning religion, or the Toleration Act, at the very beginning of the Province.

Prior to the above date most of the Jews lived in Baltimore, and although many attempts had been made to give them equality of suffrage these attempts were abortive, principally for the reason that strong opposition was developed among the country delegates, not particularly on account of religious differences, but because they were opposed to any measure or act, however just, that would give Baltimore greater representation or more extended participation in State affairs.

It was probably in the year 1797 that the first real attempt was made to abolish the law that required of all office holders a declaration of a belief in the Christian religion. This fight was started by Solomon Etting in that year and was continued until 1818, when Thomas Kennedy, of Washington county, took up the cudgel on behalf of the Jews, his efforts resulting in the introduction of what was popularly known as the "Jew Bill."

Although Kennedy's position on the question was supported by the State Declaration of Rights, by Article VI of the Federal Constitution and by the First Amendment to the United States Constitution, it was not until the last day of the session of the Assembly of 1824-1825 that the bill was duly ratified, thus removing the civil disabilities of the Jew.

"The work of the Health Department has been accompanied by a significant decrease in the general death rate and in the number of cases of communicable diseases.

The State should give continued support to the work of the Department with particular reference to the development of the laboratory services to furnish competent assistance to the physicians of the State in the diagnosis and treatment of communicable diseases.

Support should also be given to a reasonable extension of the system of full time county health departments in response to local demand. At present fourteen of the twenty-three counties of the State havc full time county health service and all of this development has taken place since 1920. All counties of the State should have the benefit of this service.

There should be an amendment to the Sanitary District Law providing for the creation of twenty-three sanitary districts instead of ten. This is to provide the administrative machinery for full time county health departments in all the counties. A bill embodying this recommendation will be submitted to the Legislature.

The increase in the appropriations are, with a few exceptions, granted for the purpose of making effective the above recommendations.

Maintenance appropriation 1930, $473,584; 1932, $496,484; 1933, $496,-484. Increase, $22,900."

The Advantages OF A Round Brooder House or Chicken House....

The round building is fast replacing square-cornered buildings on modern farms.

All unnecessary obstructions such as joists and braces are eliminated in the round structure. The interior resembles that of a large barrel—no dark corners, cracks or crevices to harbor lice and filth. The interior of the walls are planed as smooth as the exterior and can be scrubbed or painted with less than half the effort it takes to keep a square-cornered building clean.

It does not take an expert mechanic to erect our round buildings. Every part is correctly fitted and plainly marked at the factory. They are so simple to put together and take apart that you can readily move them anytime you desire.

The 1¾ inch native white pine sidewalls are tongued and grooved and keep the interior warm in cold weather and cool in hot weather. The adjustable ventilator in the roof keeps the temperature equalized at all times. Floor is underlaid with Celotex. Windows are Cel-o-Glass.

Lesson for February 1

JESUS THE GREAT PHYSICIAN

LESSON TEXT—Luke 4:33-44; 5:12-15, 18-26.

GOLDEN TEXT—Surely he hath borne our griefs, and carried our sorrows: yet we did esteem him stricken, smitten of God, and afflicted.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus and Health.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus and Health.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Our Friend and Helper.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Christian Ministry to Physical Ills.

I Jesus Healing a Demoniac (4:33-37).

While engaged in teaching in the synagogue, Jesus was interrupted by a man who had a "spirit of an unclean devil," who cried out with a loud voice asking that he be left alone, professing knowledge of him as the Holy One of God. Jesus rebuked the demon and compelled him to come out of the man. At the command of Jesus the demon came out of the man with a violent struggle. This healing shows Jesus not only gracious but powerful to set free men who are under the power of the Devil, and also his ability to free men from the whole brood of diabolical passions such as lust, envy, anger, and jealousy which rule them. This manifestation of divine power amazed the people, causing them to cry out, "What a word is this!"

II. Jesus Heals Peter's Mother-in-Law of a Great Fever (vv. 38-41).

This woman was prostrate with a great fever. They of Peter's household besought Jesus in her behalf. He rebuked the fever and it left her so that she immediately arose and ministered unto them. No earthly physician has ever been known to heal in that way. Divine healing is immediate and complete. It is most important that we distinguish between divine healing and faith healing. Faith healing is the result of the action of the mind upon the body, and is measured by the degree of the faith of the individual, while divine healing is the action of the power of God upon the diseased one and is always complete and immediate.

As a result of this manifestation of divine power, the fame of Jesus spread abroad and many sick of divers diseases were brought unto him and he healed them all.

III. Jesus Heals a Leper (5:12-15).

Leprosy was a most loathsome and terrible disease. Because of its foulness, one afflicted therewith was an outcast. Leprosy was incurable by man, therefore, the leper was regarded as hopeless and dead. In response to the leper's earnest request Jesus touched him and bade the leprosy to depart, and immediately he was healed and cleansed. Leprosy is a type of sin. Though sin is loathsome, hideous and separating, Jesus has power to save those who come to him by faith.

IV. Jesus Heals a Paralytic (5:18-26).

1. Watched by the Pharisees and doctors of the law (v. 17). The spreading abroad of Jesus' fame only incited jealousy on the part of these men. They did not want to get too close to him, but close enough to know what was going on.

2. The paralytic brought to Jesus (vv. 18, 19). This is a fine lesson of Christian service. They could not heal the man, but being moved by sympathy they co-operated in bringing him to Jesus who could heal and restore. Their efforts in bringing the man show their willingness to go to pains and trouble to bring the needy man to Jesus.

3. The man's sins forgiven (v. 20). Jesus looked back of the palsy to its cause—sin. The effect of his sin was before Jesus, but he proceeded to deal with the cause of it. All disease and death are the result of sin. The Lord deals first with that which was at the root of the trouble. Jesus saw the faith not only of those who brought him but of the man himself.

4. The purpose of miracles (vv. 21, 22). The Pharisees accused Christ of blasphemy when he declared the man's sins forgiven. Jesus showed them that back of the beneficient deed to the man was the demonstration of his deity. The main purpose in the working of miracles is the authentication of the divine mission of the one performing them. While the divine power and authority are thus shown, the wisdom and love of God are shown in that in all cases the supernatural work is for the good of the individual.

5. The relative value of physical ills and moral and spiritual maladies (vv. 23, 24). Physical ills are less serious than the sins which cause them.

Lift Up Your Eyes

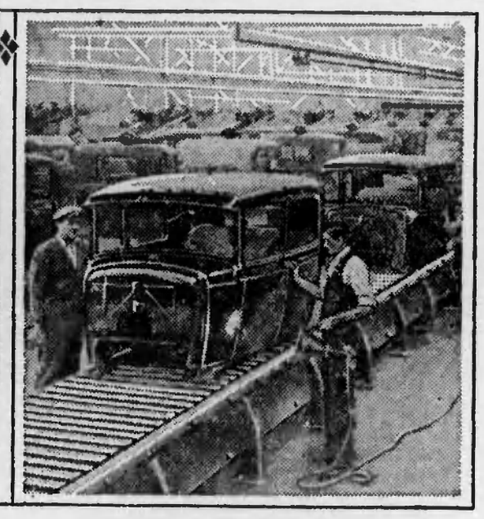
Hath he a cup of affliction in one hand? Lift up your eyes and you will see a cup of consolation in the other. And if all stars withdraw their light while you are in the way of God, assure yourselves that the sun is ready to rise.—John Owen.

Great Peace

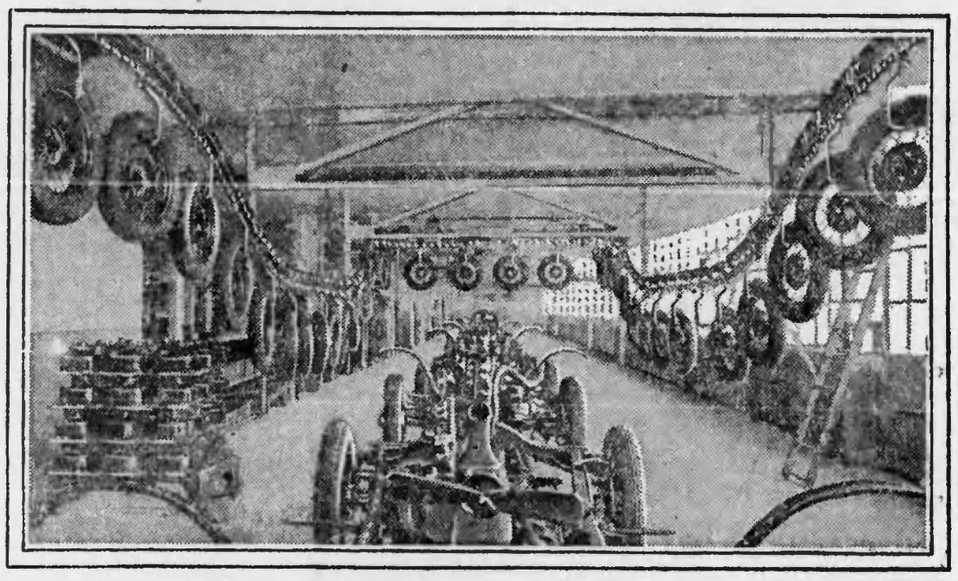
A compromise—half obedience, half rebellion—is never found to be the way of peace. "Great peace have they who love thy law."—J. H. Jowett.

Conveyors Carry Ford Car Parts

Trains unload in the plant.



Bodies starting through the shop.



Conveyors carry wheels with mounted tires over a line on which cars pass to completion.

The highly important part played by conveyor systems in all Ford Motor Company manufacturing and assembly plants is graphically shown in the above three pictures taken in the recently opened Edgewater, N. J., plant. One of the pictures shows how parts may be unloaded from freight cars within the plant only a few feet from the various assembly lines. Another picture shows automobile bodies starting their trip on a conveyor while the third view is of the conveyor system used to bring wheels to the chasses which are also moving on a conveyor. As indicated in the picture, a constant flow of wheels on which the tires have already been mounted moves around and over the chassis assembly line.. As a chassis enters the section, workers, in groups of four, each take a wheel from the hooks and fasten it to the chassis.

GO TO BED AND STAY TO GET RID OF COMMON COLD

Such Is the Advice of Dr. Riley, of State Health Department

"The quickest way to get rid of a cold is to go to bed and stay there until the attack is over and your doctor says you may go out again," was the way Dr. R. H. Riley, Director of the State Department of Health, answered the question, "What shall I do when I feel a cold coming on?"

"Send for your doctor at the beginning of the attack," he continued. "Don't wait until you are down and out with it. You will save time in the end by taking no chances with a cold. You will also help to prevent the after-effects which so often follow neglected colds—pneumonia, among them, with the possibility of a damaged heart and even tuberculosis.

"Colds, influenza, grippe, or whatever we may happen to call these diseases, are believed to be spread from person to person through the discharges of the nose and throat. To protect yourself from such diseases—

"1. Keep away from people who are sneezing, coughing, sniffling or are actively ill with colds or pneumonia.

"2. Keep away from crowded places when colds are generally prevalent. This is especially important in regard to children.

"3. Have your own towel and drinking cup and always wash your hands before eating.

"4. Avoid overheated rooms. See that you have fresh air in the room in which you work as well as in your sleeping room.

"5. You can protect yourself from colds as you can from other illness by keeping yourself physically fit—by eating simple nourishing food; by drinking plenty of water; by some exercise out of doors every day; by dressing according to the weather; by having plenty of sleep in a well-ventilated room, and by keeping the bowels regulated.

"If you have a cold, keep your germs to yourself. To protect others:

"1 Hold your handkerchief over your mouth and nose when you cough or sneeze. It is a good thing to use paper handkerchiefs or cheesecloth when you have a cold and burn or otherwise dispose of them after use, so that other people will not be endangered.

"2. Keep away from people who are well so that your friends will not be needlessly exposed to your germs;

"And finally—Do exactly what your doctor tells you to do."

CARE OF YOUR GLASSES

Weekly Optical Educational Letter of Dr. J. Fred Anreae

Equally as important as the material and workmanship of your glasses, is the care which is given them. Spectacles which are suitable and useful and which are ground to correct your vision are something to be cherished and esteemed. The lenses supplied by the better class of optometrists and oculists are designed and ground with all the care and skill used in the manufacture of camera lenses and other precise optical instruments and should be treated as such.

What kind of a picture will your camera "take" when the lens is clouded with dust and fingermarks? For eye-glasses to be treated with neglect and to be thrown about anywhere, left on tables or shelves exposed to the many risks of being defaced, scratched, bent or broken is an unpleasant sight.

The glasses should be frequently cleaned with a soft, clean, old linen cloth after slightly moistening them and should be carefully handled and adjusted. Glasses are essential to the success, health and welfare of a large proportion of the inhabitants of civilized countries and should be treated as carefully and respectfully as the eyes themselves.

The BEST Gray Hair Remedy is Home Made

To half pint of water add one ounce bayrum, a small box of Barbo Compound and one-fourth ounce of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. It will gradually darken streaked, faded or gray hair and make it soft and glossy. Barbo will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.

In the Pre-Slavery Era Domestics Were Horny-Handed

By C. W. WHITMORE, In the Baltimore Sunday Sun

In the earliest days of Colonial Maryland the servant problem was, more properly speaking, a labor problem. Servants in the modern sense were few indeed. There was a wilderness to subdue, farms to be carved out of a primeval forest, a government to be set up and a whole new civilization to be created. Butlers and second maids would have been given axes and hoes and put to work.

In his "Instructions" Cecilius Calvert included this detail as to servants: "Planters are to employ their servants in planting of a sufficient quantity of corn and other provisions of victuall and that they do not suffer them to plant any other commodity whatsoever before that be done in a sufficient proportion. This must be observed yearly." Men who are engaged in a grim battle to stave off starvation which had been the tragic experience of other colonies were not concerned with the niceties of domestic service. Comfort must wait upon planting and planting of luxuries, such as tobacco, must wait upon planting of food.

There was no time for social activities of a pretentious sort and the one-story, two-roomed log huts which were at first the only homes in the colony were not conducive to conspicuous expenditure. A few women for general work, a seamstress or two and the tale of domestic help is complete. The rest of those referred to in the records as "servants" were laborers, men with trades and farm hands.

In the "Conditions of Plantation" drawn up by Lord Baltimore to furnish a guide to anyone intending to colonize in Maryland, he says, "In the taking of servants he may do well to furnish himself with as many as he can of useful and necessary arts; a carpenter of all others most necessary; a millwright, shipwright, boatwright, wheelwright, brickmaker, bricklayer, potter, one that can cleave lath and pale and make pikestaves, a joiner, a cooper, turned, sawyer, cutler, smith, leather dresser, miller, fisherman and gardener. These will be of most use, but any lusty young able man that is willing to labor and take pains though he have no particular trade, will be beneficial enough to his master." Of such were the bulk of the servants who were brought over from Europe.

The first concern of the projectors of the colony was to secure as many as possible of this type of servant. To this end they established what we would call "employment agencies" in England, and in the "Conditions of Plantation" it is stated, "If any adventurer shall be unprovided of such men he may have direction at the place where this book is to be had, how and where he may provide himself with as many as he please." When the first expedition finally set sail it was made up of only "twenty gentleman adventurers" who brought with them a number of laborers or servants, variously stated at from two to three hundred. The lower number seems to be nearer correct. Later companies of settlers were in about the same proportion.

Most servants came over under a definite contract of indenture which bound the servant to his master from the date of his signing the agreement "until his first and next arrival in Maryland; and after, for and during the term of....years, in such service and employment as the said master or his assigns shall employ him, according to the custom of the country in like times." In turn the master agreed to pay for the passage of his servant and "find him with meat, drink, apparel and lodging, and with other necessities during said term." At the end of the term the master was obligated to give him one year's provision of corn and fifty acres of land together with certain articles of clothing, weapons and implements, details of which varied from time to time. The usual term of indenture was five years, but it was recommended that shorter terms be offered to artificers and that they be given other special inducements.

While these indenture contracts were generally made direct with the intended Maryland employer or his agent, it was a frequent practice for merchants and ship captains to "buy servants," which means to arrange indentures and to sell or assign them at a profit upon arrival in the Colony. In such transactions the servants were given a measure of choice of masters to whom their indentures would be assigned and were not compelled to accept unwelcome or offensive service. The clause in the indenture contract stipulating that his employment should be "according to the custom of the country in like kind." was a significant limitation of the master's authority, preventing any cruel and unusual labors. In many cases where the arrangement was not mutually satisfactory or for other reasons one employer would reassign his indentured servant and their contract to another employer.

The same liberal spirit which created for colonial Maryland its general policy of toleration not only in religion but in social and moral relationships as well, and which molded its Indian policy of peace and friendship which spared Maryland the horrors of savage warfare, also conceived a labor policy remarkable for its thoughtful and generous consideration for the welfare of the neediest element among the settlers. All of this was in strict fulfillment of the letter and spirit of Calvert's "Instructions" which closed with the injunction that they "do justice to every man."

As cases of individual abuse developed, laws and regulations were drawn up to protect the servants from exploitation and in justice. It was, for instance, required after 1682 that anyone intending to transport an indentured servant into Maryland should first have him registered in England before competent legal authority, a record kept in a "fair book" there and a copy given to the servant himself as evidence of his status. If the servant were a minor, or "seemed to be so," action was postponed for three months in order to make sure by investigation that no abuse was being perpetrated upon a child.

After arrival in Maryland, cases arose in which individual masters attempted to extend illegally the period of indenture and because the servants were generally illiterate and careless they frequently were without legal proof of the exact period of their service. Accordingly it was enacted that within six months after arrival in Maryland both masters and servant must appear before the county court of the master's residence and here establish evidence of their legal agreement. A severe penalty was provided for any master who failed to do this and servants who were unable there to produce certificates of indenture were required to serve the customary period of servitude according to age. These periods were five years for those over twenty-two years of age, seven years for those between fifteen and twenty-two, and for those under fifteen the period of service extended until they became twenty-two years of age.

When the above law was adopted by the Lower House it was sent to the Council for action and was returned by that body with the following significant notation indicating the tender solicitude with which the leaders of the Maryland colony were wont to guard the rights of their humble charges: "The Upper House," so read the notation, "do consent to this vote provided the Lower House will consider of some expedient against any inconvenience which is conceived will arise in such case where the servant by accident hath left his indenture in England and cannot get a return thereof within the time limited, or where by undue means the master shall get the servant's indenture out of his hands and thereby debar him of the privilege of showing the same to the court, to the great wrong and injury of the servant in either case." And so it was done.

Having established the term of service on a legal basis, the Maryland Colonial government was also mindful of the possibility of servants being abused by unscrupulous or cruel masters during the term of indenture.

It was enacted, therefore, that "any master who should deny sufficient meat, drink, lodging or clothing, or unreasonably burden them beyond their strength to labor, or debar them of their necessary rest or sleep" should be fined 1,000 pounds of tobacco for the first and second offense and that the servant be freed if the offense were repeated a third time.

The famous case of William Lewis and his two Protestant servants who were protected by the Roman Catholic Council in their right to read aloud, however offensively, their religious books, however abusive, in the hearing of their Catholic master, has been cited as proof of the extent to which real toleration was carried in Colonial Maryland. It also demonstrates the sincere determination of the authorities that servants be given the full protection of the government against the mere appearance of oppression by their masters. It was the master who in every case had to bear the burden of proof and all doubtful questions were resolved in the interests of the weaker party. Other times, other customs!

The most significant protective measure taken by the colony in behalf of servants was intended to protect the servant from himself. It was no part of the Maryland plan to breed a servant class. It was recognized that the habit of servitude is the chief bar to freedom. Servants, therefore, were discouraged from renewing their indentures and the period of renewal was strictly limited. Free men were wanted to create a free state.

While it was necssary for the law to protect the servant from the abuses of unworthy masters, the bulk of the masters needed no law to induce them to do the decent thing. There was, for instance, the case of Capt. Robert Wintour, who discharged of their obligation to him for reasons of honor and without any legal necessity Edward Parker and William Naufin, two of his servants. Then there was the case of William Claiborne, the arch-villain of Maryland, who, in a softer moment, promised to Robert Cooper "the cow-calf of a certain cow, if she did bring a cow-calf, in consideration that he hath been a good servant to me."

Most of the servants were without education, but occasionally a cultivated misfit who had gotten into trouble at home or who lacked practical ability to make his own way in the world would bind himself as a servant in return for transportation to Maryland and temporary security. George Alsop was such a man, having been brought to Maryland under a four-year indenture to Thomas Stoekett, in Baltimore county. Alsop had left a series of letters giving some interesting sidelights on social conditions in Maryland, particularly the condition of servants. He was very much impressed with himself and his learning. His style is ostentations and verbose, but he reveals a great deal of very valuable history. Among other things, in speakingof the cordial relations that existed in Maryland between the Roman Catholics and the members of the Church of England, he refers to the latter as "Protestant Episcopalians," anticipating by more than a hundred years the official title given to the Episcopal Church at its primary convention held in Maryland in 1789, when it was organized as an independent national branch of the Anglican Communion. This letter, written in 1666, is one of the earliest documents using this much-disputed title.

Of the condition of servants in Maryland, he says: "The four years I served there were not to me so slavish as a two-year servitude of a handicraft apprenticeship in London. * * Servants here in Maryland of all colonies have least cause to complain either from strictness of servitude, want of provisions and need of apparel." He declared that five and a half days work per week was the rule in summer and that for two months during the hot season three hours rest at the house is permitted during the hottest part of the afternoon. During the winter months little work was required save wood cutting and tending fires, after which the servant was free to while away many hours at hunting, for every servant was furnished with gun, powder and shot. Servants who were artificers were never required to work in the field and they lived fully as well as free laborers in England.

He waxes facetious and uncouth in alluding to women servants. He marvels because they marry immediately upon arrival and states rather broadly that "some might have maintained their maiden estate until it moulded had they not brought it to so easy a market." Men servants were not as a rule so fortunate in affairs of the heart, but he opines with a self-conscious smirk that those men servants who are "rhetoricians and skilled in the art of persuasion" can gain many advantages for themselves through the wives of their masters.

He reveals a most significant situation when he says that many servants, after they had finished their time, found liberty so difficult that they longed for bondage again that they might have someone to take care of them. He makes the rather profound comment on those laborers who remained in England, where there were too many of them, living much too close together and trying to eak out a miserable existence as they "catch, snatch and under value on another," and endure infinite hardship at home rather than risk the voyage to Maryland, where they were needed and could be happy and prosperous. He closes with the wish "that the several poor tradesmen I know in London might live so free from care as I did while I dwelt in the bonds of a four-year servitude in Maryland."

It would be a pleasure to record that the Maryland servants were so appreciative of all this consideration that they became perfect and loyal servitors, proving their gratitude by exemplary conduct. Alas for human nature, such is not the case! There was, for instance, much stealing by servants, who would take their loot to the vessels as they arrvied and trade with the merchants and gamble with the sailors. It thus became necessary to establish a rule forbidding "buying, bartering or gaming" with servants without the written permission of their masters. This helped the situation for a while, until some enterprising pilfering servant discovered that a market existed among the Indians. It then became necessary to forbid trading with the Indians.

Moreover, there were servants who resented the necessity of any toil whatsoever and who would take unauthorized vacations. Most of these cases were not genuine attempts at permanent liberty. There was not that much force back of the situation. Few of them were anxious to face the rigors of a fugitive existence in a wild, new country. These escapades were more in the nature of joy-rides or little side trips from which the servant would return quite blandly and accept as a matter of course the penalty of ten additional days of servitude for each day of absence. He should worry. The penalty would be felt until the end of the term, and that was still some time off. These cases became so frequent that severe penalties were provided for those who assisted in any way in these little parties.

There was, for example, the case of "Michael Hacker, spinster, aged 20, maidservant of Jane Cockshott, widow, who being sworn did say upon her oath that upon Wednesday evening last, this deponent being in her mistress' house in Saint Inigoes, Thomas White came and asked her whether she would not see her brother in Virginia, and she asking him how she might do so, he told her that he and Francis Stoure and his wife were to go to Virginia in a canoe of Mr. Copley's, and she might go with them. He told her that Francis Stoure was to borrow the canoe of Mr. Copley to carry some corn to John Norton's and thence would take the canoe away." The young lady reported the proposed joy-ride to the great discomfort of the tempter, who was tried, convicted and whipped with thirty stripes, thus learning the great value of law enforcement and the necessity of being more discreet in his choice of girl friends.

Moral relations among the servants and between and servants and masters seem to have been extremly irregular, particularly after the introduction of Negro slavery. Just as base coin debases the good, so the baser form of servitude degraded the indentured servant. The presence of the slaves set the servants on a lower plane and seems to have robbed them of much of their self respect. There were many cases of marriage between Negro slaves and white indentured women servants and an even larger number of more informal unions. In the hope of checking this evil, it was enacted that any white woman marrying a Negro slave should herself become a slave as long as her husband lived and her children should be slaves for life. In the case of freer unions the children were to be slaves until the age of 31, and the penalty visited upon the parents involved some degree of added servitude, varying at different periods.

To deal with the growing laxity a preventive measure was attempted in the shape of an order restricting the movements of servants to a radius of two miles from the residence of their masters. This was found both ineffective and impractical, and the distance was later extended to ten miles, and to facilitate enforcement everyone "not sufficiently known" had to carry passports when traveling out of his own county.

Unfortunately, the founders of Maryland seem to have had at first great faith in the efficiency of "snooping." As in the case of drunkenness, so also with runaway servants, rewards were offered to informers. Attempts were made to beguile even the honest Indian into this trade with the promise of "match-coats" to be furnished by the county, the runaway to work out the price of the reward by additional servitude. It developed that the only intersted people —red, white or black—were of such a poor sort that their word could seldom be trusted and the custom fell into desuetude.

There was an early instance of a public whipping dealing with a runaway servant. In 1638, John Richardson had run away and aggravated his fault by taking with him some of his master's goods. He was recaptured and brought before the Council for punishment. There was no law on the subject at the time, so the Council debated among themselves what should be done. Thomas Greene was in favor of hanging. Giles Brent thought he should be "whipped very severely." Gov. Leonard Calvert wanted him "whipped three times and put in irons." But rugged old Captain Cornwallys was in favor of letting him off with an ordinary whipping, "provided he was sorry." They compromised by letting the captain have his way, as usual.

During those first days, while there was so much urgent work to be done, the question was raised about giving servants a half holiday on Saturday. The answer was given rather curtly: "No such custom is to be allowed." Later on, however, when the colony was more securely established, the matter was reconsidered and the Saturday half holiday became an established institution, as was revealed in the letter of Alsop.

There were three types of servants in Colonial Maryland: those indentured for a definite period; free labor hired by the day, month or year, and Negro slaves. The indentured servants at first constituted by far the largest group. But as their term of service expired and they entered upon possession of their fifty-acre tracts, they became small independent landowners, working occasionally at odd jobs for hire and occasionally hiring labor on their own part, to the greater glory of Maryland. This also had a curious effect upon the servant problem. It promoted the status of labor and created a spirit of free democracy, but it also created a greater demand for labor than could be satisfied by the ordinary supply of indentured servants and free hired help, with the result that a great impetus was given to the institution of slavery. The owners of large tracts of land, being deprived of other supply, went into the slave market for their help.

This in turn tended to drive free labor and small tenants from the manorial estates. The lords of the manors, therefore, found it both necessary and more profitable to work their own lands with slaves rather than to cultivate the elegant leisure of feudal lordship. Thus the elaborate plans for a Maryland nobility dreamed of by the first Lord Baltimore and provided for in the Maryland Charter were swept away by a rising tide of democracy created by the ascending servants and the descending slaves.

The First-Aid Girl

By JANE OSBORN

(Copyright.)

BILL OTIS was talking emphatically over the telephone in his private office which he, as recently appointed costs expert for Walter and Dawkins, had occupied for less than two weeks. As he hung up the receiver he looked at his hand and saw drops of blood on his fingers and on the papers on his desk. Then he remembered that in the heat of his argument he had raised his hand emphatically and brought it down hard on something sharp. It was the keen-pointed paper spike, he discovered, and apparently he had given his finger a rather deep but not necessarily serious cut.

"Anyone got any cotton for bandages here?" he asked of a young clerk who happened to be passing. "I scratched my finger."

"You'll get it from the first-aid girl down at the last desk," said the clerk. "She's got all those things. Aromatic spirits of ammonia when anyone faints."

Bill Otis, still holding his handkerchief firmly around his finger to hide any scarlet stains that might have shown it was something more than a scratch, went down to the last desk in the large main office. A young girl who seemed to be very busy making records in several enormous books sat there. Bill hoped sincerely that she was the first-aid girl for he had noticed her several times before.

"It's just a scratch," Bill said. "Give me a little bandaging, if you don't mind."

"You'd better go back in your office," said the girl. "I'll follow."

Two minutes later Bill was seated in his large armchair with this very pretty young girl beside him. With immaculate white and shapely hands she was bathing the finger that had been cut—using sterile cotton and a little white enamel cup. Then she took Bill's large hand in hers and looking at it almost tenderly asked him if it didn't hurt. "It was a rather bad tear," she told him. "I think I should have fainted." She applied some healing salve on a bit of sterile cotton and then neatly bandaged it—so neatly that you would have thought a graduate nurse had done it.

The next day in passing the desk of the first-aid girl, Bill Otis stopped to thank her for her trouble. He likewise asked her her name. Margaret Clark, she told him. He told her she was a born nurse.

"Really I'm not," she said. "I've always hated anything like that. But when I took this job the first-aid kit seemed to go with the desk. They said that the girl that sat at this desk always had had it. Some one had to be responsible—and so I took it. Nothing ever happened like this before, though," she said, rather proud that at last she had been called upon to show her skill.

More than ever Bill Otis admired this girl at the end desk, and every time he passed he made some mental observation of her. She was dressed so smartly, her hair was always so smooth and glossy and well brushed, and her hands—he always noticed them—were always so immaculately white and free from office grime of any kind.

A few days later he sent her a large bunch of violets with a card enclosed, saying simply, "From a grateful patient." By that time the office people were talking pleasantly about Margaret Clark and Bill Otis.

Then one day something really did happen. Bill Otis, in his office alone, went to raise the heavy swinging window. Through a defect in the chain, that was supposed to hold the window, it fell with a crushing thud on Bill's arm. As he turned to go back to his desk the walls seemed to bend and the furniture went swimming round the room. Bill tried to raise his arm and almost fainted.

"Perhaps spirits of ammonia would pull me around until I get out of here," he said to himself, and with all the fortitude he could muster went to the door and asked the girl nearest him to ask Miss Clark to come in with her first-aid. The girl laughed and Bill shut the door and staggered over to his chair.

Bill doesn't remember just what happened then, except that he made Margaret understand that he wanted to pull himself together so as to be able to get away without anyone in the office knowing that he had been hurt. It was the ammonia spirits that she mixed up that gave him the strength he needed—that and the promise that if he could get to the main entrance she'd meet him there with a taxi.

She drove with him to the nearest hospital where doctors gave him ether and learned that he had sustained a compound fracture of his arm.

As Bill opened his eyes and felt the slow, dull pangs return, there was Margaret Clark, his first-aid girl, beside him.

"I know I'm only a first-aid," she said apologetically, "but I wanted to see you through." The pallor on her pretty cheeks told Bill that her ordeal has not by any means been an easy one.

Bill murmured something. He tried to tell her that he loved her and to ask her to marry him, but she did not understand. Two weeks later when the arm was in fair shape again he repeated these words and this time Margaret understood.

MT. LAKE PARK

One robin does not make a summer. But just the same we saw one this week—but he was not singing. Just looking around for a summer cottage, we presume. Or, perhaps, waiting to see what kind of weather we are going to have after Ground Hog Day, so he can send a wireless to his best girl telling her that the time is ripe for apartment hunting.

For the first time since before Christmas, Mounatin Lake Parkers are able to see the ground. The snow has disappeared. While we are glad of the change, at the same time the old-fashioned winter we have been having is not half bad. The clear, cold, snappy air, the gleaming white snow, unblackened by the dirt and soot of the cities, the jingling of sleigh bells, the skating and bobsledriding, all have made for a pleasant and health-giving season. Although the backbone of the winter may have been broken, yet we may expect more ice and snow. At the same time this mountain top has been one of the favored spots, taking every thing into consideration. We have no serious problem of unemployment, nor are we cursed with bank failures, which have been the cause of much hardship and embarrassment in other sections of the country. Of course, we are short of cash, but that is a chronic condition. Sporadic cases of actual need have been well taken care of by kind neighbors, or the county authorities. And while the general recession of business has had its effect on the profits of the merchants, at the same time Garrett county, so far as we know, has had no serious business failures. The good roads have enabled a large percent of the urbanites to transact their business in Oakland. Parking space, even during the winter, is at a premium. Business is quiet, but not any more so than is usual at this season of the year. Spring and Summer will soon be here, with the usual influx of the summer colony. Take it all in all we have no reason to complain.

Loch Lynn authorities may be classed as optimists. They are unloading two cars of screenings for road work.

The many friends of Ed. Friend are glad to learn that he is making a fast recovery from his recent serious accident in which he suffered a broken arm.

Billy Burch, who has been at the Park during the winter, left for Washington Sunday with his uncle, Neil McCord. He will spend the balance of the winter months with his grandmother, Mrs. William T. Burch. Billy is a bright, snappy youngster and a general favorite.

Mr. Joe Callis and son have returned from Cumberland, where they spent several days.

The C. C. Gnegy apartments over his planing mill, made necessary by the burning of his home a few weeks ago, are about ready for occupancy.

ATTENDANCE IN SCHOOLS OF STATE JUMPS YEARLY

Enrollment in Maryland Public Institutions Increased More Than 2,200 Last Year

PUPILS NUMBER 133,500

Enrollment in the white public schools of the State increased by more than 2,200 last year over the year before, the annual report made public Saturday at the office of the Superintendent of the State Department of Education in Baltimore disclosed.

The white enrollment in the county schools at the end of the school year, July 31, 1930, was 133,500. The average attendance increased by more than 5,200.

This was explained by the fact that attendance during 1929 was unusually low because of epidemics and sickness.

The largest gains in enrollment were Baltimore county, 500, Anne Arundel and Prince George's more than 400 and Allegany 200.

Carroll, Worcester, Somerset, Caroline and St. Mary's all had decreases.

The total enrolled in the county white schools was 131,280 in 1929 and 114,871 in 1920.

"It will be noted," said the report, "that the total county enrollment in 1930 over 1920 showed an increase of 18,600 pupils, while the number in average attendance increased by 33,300, due largely to the efficient work of the attendance officers and the improved instruction in the schools."

Baltimore Increases 975

In Baltimore City the increase in white enrollment was 975. The total enrollment at the end of the year was 92,300.

"Although the white population in the counties is close to that in Baltimore City, the counties have from 36,000 to 41,000 more white children to educate in the public schools than the city," said the report.

"Half of this difference is due to the fact that a larger number of city than county children attend the parochial and private schools. The remaining difference is explained by the larger number of children per family in the counties."

THE THIRD HOUSE AT ANNAPOLIS SINCE 1868

who was then the able and powerful leader of the Democratic party, not only in Baltimore City, but in the entire State. It was a noteworthy fact that while Governor Whyte headed the combination he was never known to have received any part of the illicit gains—that he used his influence simply and solely for political purposes, and out of this combination was evolved the old and notorious Democratic ring or party machine, which later became absolute in its power under the leadership of the late Arthur P. Gorman, and Isaac Freeman Rasin. These two able politicians so manipulated the machine, of which Governor Whyte was the real founder, that in ten years after its formation they were able to overthrow Whyte, who was then United States Senator, and send Mr. Gorman to Washington as a member of the Upper House in his place.

So completely did they perform their work that Mr. Whyte was pitched headlong out on the political scrapheap that he never recovered his influence, was never even consulted by the ring which he had formed, and while in later years he was elected Mayor of Baltimore, in 1887 was chosen Attorney General, and still later was sent to the United States Senate for a short time, by appointment of Governor Warfield, after the death of his old-time pupil Mr. Gorman, but he was virtually without real power and influence, after he was defeated for reelection to the Senate in 1880.

In other words the ring which he had formed cast him out, and while he was from time to time thrown a few political crumbs and bones, it was only done to prevent the elevation of younger and more dangerous men whose success would have jeopardized the corrupt and nefarious schemes of the political machine which never attained its unholy perfection until Mr. Whyte had been ignominiously cast into outer darkness. He had served their purpose. He had given a rather doubtful respectability to the organization which he had made up of such men as Arthur P. Gorman, I. Freeman Rasin, Jesse K. Hines, George Colton and the usual sort of secondary lights of that day, had confirmed it as the regular organization of the Democratic party in the City and State and in order to carry out the schemes for gain and power they threw him out—they did not want such a man to be at their head—for they felt sure that he would never consent to the program they had secretly made up to control the City and State governments for the acquisition of power and money, regardless of decency and often in defiance of law. They made it one of the most notorious and powerful political machines in the country and for years it was practically impossible for any man, however able he might be, to secure official honor in the City or State without first bowing in abject humility and subserviency to this unholy combination. They retained their power for thirty years and were not overthrown (and then for a few years only) until the indignation of the people was aroused to such an extent that in 1895 the Democratic party was overwhelmed by a combination of Independents and Republicans and the entire State and City governments were turned over to the Republicans, and after an administration of four years they in turn were defeated and a chastened and somewhat improved Democratic organization was restored to the control of public affairs in both the City and State. The old-time lobby, however, never regained its former power. Other men had come to the front and for the past thirty years new methods have prevailed, and while the ancient iniquities were measurably abandoned, new and more respectable methods have prevailed, and while the brazen evils of the Gorman-Rasin regime are no longer in evidence, under cover the nefarious practices are carried on at the present day and there is every evidence that there will be a revival during the next three months of a system of machine politics fully as iniquitous as those which were in evidence prior to the reform revolution in 1895.

Unemployment Insurance Measure

Unemployment and the ravages of the prolonged drought were brought forcibly to the attention of the General Assembly today in the form of two bills introduced in the House and favorable action on another by a committee of the Senate.

Compulsory unemployment insurance of employes of industry throughout Maryland and immediate payment in cash of the soldiers' bonus was asked in the House measure.

At the same time the Senate acted unanimously in adopting the favorable committee report on a measure declaring a moratorium on Howard county taxes.

Short Session

The three moves for relief of farmers, ex-soldiers and workers of the State came in a short session which lasted little more than half an hour, which also saw a number of other bills introduced in both houses.

The measure asking for immediate payment of the bonus certificates in cash by Thomas D'Alesandro, of Baltimore City, was in the form of a joint resolution as a memorial to Congress. Because of the "unprecedented unemplayment situation many persons were in dire distress," it said.

It carried clauses instructing the secretary of state to send copies to the President of the United States and the presiding officers of both houses of Congress. It also instructed that copies be sent to Maryland representatives in Congress with instructions to work for acceptance by that body of the program.

Unemployment Insurance

Delegate Frank Hirt's measure requiring compulsory unemployment insurance for workers, provided for the payment of 50 per cent of the average weekly wage to all persons laid off through business depression or other causes not of their own making.

Building up of funds from which the insurance would be paid was provided for through a clause requiring employers to create reserve funds or take out insurance to assure the payments in time of lay off. The payments to any individual would be limited to 13 weeks.

The Howard county proposal for a delay in collection of 1930 taxes, now delinquent, provisions of which were made to apply to 1931 taxes, was placed on their reading for final passage on adoption of the favorable committee report.

In introducing the bill last week, Senator James L. Donovan said it was meant as relief for farmers who have had their resources ravaged by the drought.

A joint resolution asking Congress to submit the Eighteenth Amendment to constitutional conventions in the States for repeal, will be introduced tomorrow in the General Assembly by Senator E. Milton Altfeld, of Baltimore, it became known tonight.

STATE BUDGET FOR TWO YEARS IS $71,488,727

Governor Ritchie Submits Appropriations for 1932 and 1933 to Maryland Legislature

TAX RATE REMAINS SAME

Governor Ritchie Tuesday submitted to the General Assembly the State budget for the next two fiscal years, authorizing the expenditure of $71,488,727.08—a total of $34,815,312.81 in 1932, and $36,673,414.27 in 1933—an amount unprecedented in the history of Maryland.

The Governor also sent a bill setting the tax rate at 25 cents per $100 assessment, the same as for the two preceding fiscal years.

For the State Roads Department alone the total authorized for expenditure over the two-year period is $26,196,449,87. This figure is $16,910,859.87 greater than the amount appropriated for expenditure on roads by the 1929 Legislature—$4,576,326 over 1930, and $4,709,264 more than in 1931.

Based On U. S. Aid And Bridges

The road appropriations are based on the $1,000,000 the State Roads Commission will receive from the bridge loan, recommended for issue in June, 1932; Federal aid of $1,052,000 and the amounts estimated as revenues from automobile license fees and gasoline taxes.

This is the first time it has been possible to include the three items in estimating the appropriation for the State Roads Commission, and the amount set forth in the budget is the maximum which can be expended. Any excess receipts will be set aside in a special fund for the use of the Road Commission and Baltimore city, but cannot be expended unless and until the succeeding Legislature defines and authorizes the purpose.

Gas Tax Put At $31,881,396

The total estimated revenues from all sources for the ensuing fiscal years, after the deduction of the appropriations authorized in the budget, would leave a balance in the State treasury in 1932 of $3,150,158.77, and in 1933, a balance of $1,763,023,64. The estimated revenue from gasoline taxes and license fees dur-

1930 FOREST FIRE LOSS IN MARYLAND WAS HEAVY

Six Hundred Eighty Fires Occurred in 4 Western Counties

Beginning February 20th with a severe fire in Wills Mountain, which burned six acres, the most disastrous year of timber destruction was ushered in, Mr. H. C. Buckingham, district forester for Western Maryland, states in a report of forest fires in this section during 1930.

The report states:

"During 1930, 2073 fires burned over 97,602 acres of forest land in the State of Maryland, doing damage to timber to the extent of $611,000, and costing $76,000 to extinguish. Besides this direct damage a tremendous loss was suffered by the people in destruction of game, fish and fertility of land. Fire scarred trees produce inferior lumber and lessen the returns from a forest community.

"In the four western counties of the State 680 fires occurred. These burned over 44,617 acres of forest land causing a loss of $76,000 to timber and cost $30,404 to extinguish.

"An examination of the causes of these 680 fires shows that more fires were caused through the carelessness or deliberate intent of man than for all other causes. They are divided as follows: lightning, 1; railroads, 45; campfires, 17; smokers, 247; brush burning, 57; incendiary, 214; lumbering, 3; miscellaneous, 47; unknown, 49.

"Great care must be exercised during 1931 if the burned area is to be kept at a minimum. In spring clearing first pick a damp, still day in which to burn. Then clear a wide strip around the area where the burning is to be done. Lastly keep the fire under strict observance at all times and be sure the last spark is extinguished before leaving.

"Make it a practice to be sure the match is out before dropping it, and never toss a burning cigaret or cigar in leaves or other inflammable material. Everybody loses what timber burns, and forest fires must be prevented.

West Penn to Operate Special Bus Between Crellin and Oakland on Saturday

That a special bus would operate between Oakland and Crellin on Saturday afternoon and evening, under the management of the Monongahela West Penn Public Service company, was announced by Grover C. Stemple, mayor, after a conference Sunday with Bailey Hupp, general superintendent of the traffic department and A. T. Shaw, general manager of the Oakland office.

Since the new schedule of the West Penn went into effect on February 1, Crellin has been without bus service to Oakland after three o'clock p. m. The public service commission approved of the company's new schedule which reduced the number leaving Oakland to two each day, but the arrangements made Sunday call for several trips to be made between Crellin and Oakland each Saturday.

A bus will leave Crellin at 3 o'clock; 5:15 o'clock and 7 o'clock, and will leave Oakland and return to Crellin at 6:45 o'clock, 7 o'clock and 10 o'clock. The bus will be brought from Morgantown each Saturday afternoon, and will be returned there after the 10 o'clock trip.

UNLESS GROUNDHOG WAS A BIT TARDY IN RISING HE SAW HIS SHADOW MONDAY AND RAN FOR COVER

Sun, After Shining Between 7 and 8 o'clock, Was Not Visible At Any Other Time

CALLS FOR MORE WINTER

On a ridge at Hooppole on Monday morning a furry denizen of terra firma, scientifically called Arctomys Monax, but more familiarly recognized by the name of ground-hog, made his annual mid-winter appearance. What he did was of interest to thousands in the county for it was "Groundhog Day", long regarded as marking either the end of winter or the beginning of a prolonged siege of inclement weather.

If Arctomys Monax was out between 7:30 and 8:00 o'clock a. m., the sun shone upon his furry back and he ran to cover to remain away from worldly things for six weeks. If he was just a little tardy, and didn't appear until 8:15, then he was safe, even if he remained out the entire day.

Since the early Christian era February 2 has been the day of weather prognostication, and was known as Candlemas day. Centuries before the groundhog poked his snout outside his burrow into fame, the old world used this feast day of the "purification of the blessed virgin" to predict that: "If Candlemas day be fair and clear, There'll be two winters in the year. If Candlemas day be wet and foul The half o' winter's gone at Yule."

Even the old Romans knew this day. They prophecied amidst the flickers of candles lighted in honor of the Goddess Februa, mother of Mars. Over all Europe, fine weather on this day omened unseasonably cold days and crop failures. Foul weather foretold a bright and early spring.

In Germany the saying was: "The shepherd would rather see the wolf enter his stable on Candlemas day than the sun." Too, thank the German for groundhog day.

On this day, the hibernating badger awoke. He peered without his wintry home. If the weather was foul, he romped about, for spring was soon to come. If the sun shone, he scurried back into his burrow, for the winter was not over.

German emigrants to America, settling in the east, found no badger. As the years sped by they substituted the plentiful woodchuck or groundhog, who does hibernate during the winter in this region and stirs about during a winter warm spell, then returning to its den to complete several weeks more dormancy.

The woodchuck, however, is no more a weather prophet than are other wild creatures whose instinct seems to warn them of approaching weather conditions. But just try and tell that to some people!

MT. LAKE CITIZENS SEEK CHANGE IN OLD CHARTER

Meeting Is Held Tuesday Evening for Discussion of Proposed Change of Government

COMMITTEE IS APPOINTED

A meeting of the citizens of Mt. Lake Park, for the purpose of discussing the advisability of asking the General Assembly to pass an act reincorporating the town giving it the usual authority of municipal corporations, or to formulate some other plan which would be for the good of all, was held at the Mt. Lake school house Tuesday evening.

Notices to that effect were sent out by Mr. H. V. Leighton, chairman of the annual committee, stating that Mr. Frank E. Baker, superintendent of the Park, would be present and would appreciate a full and free discussion of the proposed change of government.

There was a general discussion propounded to speakers who had the floor, the interruptions frequently being rather sarcastic, according to some of those who attended. Late in the evening a committee was named composed of representatives of both the proponents and opponents of the proposed change in the form of government, who are empowered to work out a plan satisfactory to both sides and for the best interest of the Park.

The comittee is composed of Wilson L. Camden, Rev. W. B. Brock, J. A. Elliott, on the part of the community, and F. E. Baker, Rev. I. S. Middaugh, and H. V. Leighton, on behalf of the Mt. Lake Park Association.

Petition Circulated

During the past ten days a petition had been circulated at the Park asking that the assembly pass an act reincorporating the town with a mayor and common council and conferring upon it all the powers and authority authorized by the laws of the State concerning municipal corporations, and a large majority of the all-year residents of the Park had signed it.

Opposition to the proposed change is said to have developed on the part of the summer residents of the Park, as under the new charter only those who would be qualified under the laws of Maryland would be allowed to vote for the town officers. The community of Mt. Lake Park would be entirely separate in its government from the Mt. Lake Park Association.

The Act incorporating the Community of Mt. Lake Park is contained in Chapter 430 of the Acts of 1888, approved April 5 of that year.

According to the proponents of the new charter, the one under which the Park is now operating contains many objectionable features, among which are (1) that Section 2 of the Act provides "That the said Community is not to have, possess or acquire any political franchises whatsoever, or any of those powers ordinarily distinguishing public or municipal corporations from corporations or associations merely private." (2) That section 3 provides for a property qualification to vote at the annual meeting, which elects the Annual Committee, or governing body of the Park. (3) That under Section 7 the improved property belonging to the Mountain Lake Park Association, "which is used for the common good or the general purposes of said community, or said Association," is exempt from taxation.

EX-SENATOR M'CULLOUGH DIES AT BOARD MEETING

Prominent Friendsville Citizen Was Pleading for Road Extension Project When Stricken

HEART DISEASE VICTIM

John W. McCullough, aged 68 years, of Friendsville, former State Senator from this county, died suddenly in the office of the Board of County Commissioners about 3 o'clock Tuesday afternoon while addressing that body on a road matter for the Friendsville community. Death was due to a heart attack.

He was pleading for the extension of a hard surfaced road from Blooming Rose section to the Pennsylvania State line at Markleysburg, when he suddenly collapsed. He was carried to the office of E. E. Friend, register of Wills, and Dr. M. C. Hinebaugh called, who pronounced him dead. The body was taken to Bolden's Undertaking establishment here and prepared for burial and later taken to his home at Friendsville. His son George was with him at the time of his death and about 40 citizens of Friendsville who had come to Oakland to meet with the County Commissioners. Mr. McCullough was chairman of the delegation.

Mr. McCulough, the son of Alexander and Jane Walker McCullough, was born on July 16, 1863, at Burnside, Clearfield county, Pa. In the schools of that county he received his education and afterwards took over his father's farm where he remained for some years. In the meantime he became interested in the lumber business and upon the completion of the Confluence and Oakland Railroad, Mr. McCullough was among the first to be attracted by the possibilities of lumber manufacturing along the line of the new railway, and with Harry E. Clark a copartnership was formed and operations in the lumber business were carried on for many years. Later Mr. McCullough became interested in lumber plants in West Virginia, Virginia and North Carolina and also in the local mining and shipping of coal, which latter businesss he was engaged in at Friendsville at the time of his death.

Mr. McCullough was interested in all public matters and took a leading part in any movement that gave promise of results to the public good.

In 1883 he was married to Miss Mary E. Lydick, of Indiana county, Pa., and to this union there were born nine children: Ford C., Harold W., Raymond O., John W., Jr. (who died several years ago), George, Iva McCullough Statler, Elma McCullough Friend, Maria McCullough Guard, and Claudine McCullough Friend, composing a congenial family living in Friendsville for over thirty years.

Mr. McCullough was not obtrusive, but at the same time he did not shun public responsibilities and gave of his service for the well being of the community in which he lived as well as of the entire county. He was as conscientious in public matters as he was in applying his efforts to his own private business. He was thrice a candidate for the State Senate on the Democratic ticket and was elected to this office in the fall of 1922, serving four years. He was a delegate to the National Democratic Convention in New York that nominated John W. Davis for President. As a citizen of the county he served on many commissions and committees, and it is indeed pathetic when it is remembered that his passing occurred in a public building of which he was one of the commission supervising its erection in 1907. It is a noteworthy fact that any and all movements for the betterment of local and general conditions received his commendation and support.

He took great pride in his county. Always solicitous for the welfare of the young and aged, he sponsored a measure to provide a home for Garrett county's poor as a member of the Senate and did everything humanely possible to make the lives of the unfortunate happier. An annual event to which he looked forward with a great degree of pleasure was the yearly Christmas treat for the children of Friendsville and community. In this no child was missed and the only satisfaction he derived was in witnessing the happy expressions of gratitude on the faces of the little ones.

Mr. McCullough at the time of his death was a member of the Garrett County Board of Education, having been appointed by Governor Ritchie,

FEWER DEATHS AND MORE BIRTHS IN STATE IN 1930

Total Number Cases of Communicable Diseases Decreases

The year 1930, went down in history with a more favorable health record than some of its predecessors. A report prepared by the State Department of Health shows that fewer deaths and more births were reported than in 1929, and that, in spite of a marked increase in typhoid fever, the total number of cases of communicable diseases reported was less than for any year since 1917.

There were 31,063 births reported in the State in 1930, in comparison with 30,868 in 1929; 21,536 deaths in comparison with 21,920, and 32,354 cases of communicable diseases in comparison with 60,722 in 1929. The total cases of communicable diseases reported in 1917 was 28,149. During the years between, the total ranged from 34,387 in 1927 to 126,143 in 1918, when the high total was due to the influenza epidemic of that year.

Of the 21,536 deaths reported in the State last year, 10,319 occurred in the counties and 11,217 in Baltimore City. Nearly half of the deaths —a total of 10,345— were due to five causes—diseases of the heart, of the kidneys, cancer, cerebral hemorrhage, and diabetes—which are usually spoken of as the diseases of middle age.

An analysis of the 10,319 deaths in the counties by Dr. John Collins, Chief of the Bureau of Vital Statistics of the State Department of Health, shows that heart disease with 1,900 deaths was the "Captain of the men of death"; that second in command were discases of the kidneys with 1,248 deaths; that cerebral hemorrhage was third with 906 deaths; and that tuberculosis, which not many years ago had first place, was fourth with 809 deaths; cancer with 751 deaths was fifth, and pneumonia with 692 deaths was sixth.

Of the 10,319 deaths in the counties, 6,547, or nearly two-thirds, occurred among men and women from forty-five to sixty-four years and over; 2,549, or one-fourth was divided between two age groups—1,263 in that from twenty-five to forty-four years old and 1,286 occurred among babies under a year old. There were 327 deaths among children from one to five years old, and 252—the smallest number in any age group—among children from five to fourteen.

How Do You Prune Your Shrubs?

W. R. Ballard, Specialist in Landscape Gardening, University of Maryland, says:

Home owners should understand the care of shrubbery and since annual pruning is relatively the most important item, it should be given special attention. While the best time to prune most flowering shrubs is after the blooming period, if skillfully done, most gardners who are not expert horticulturists will find February or early March a safer time for this operation.

Much can be done with ordinary hand pruning shears. The tendency, however, with this tool, is to snipp off the small twigs, while removing the larger and older wood is what is really needed. To do this easily and effectively a large pair of two-hand shears with curved blades and handles 2½ feet long is needed. This tool is powerful enough to cut out the large old stems. If this tool is not available, a pruning saw should be used to supplement the small hand shears.

In order to understand clearly how a shrub should be pruned, it should be remembered that a healthy, vigorous shrub keeps throwing up new shoots from the base. If these shoots are allowed to accumulate, there comes a time when there is no more room for new shoots. Flower buds are usually formed near the tops of the strong, vigorous new shoots and the common practice of snipping back the top growth and allowing the base to become choked with old wood, results in the minimum of flowers and foliage and a maximum of old, "leggy" and unattractive wood.

If, on the other hand, a fifth to a third of the oldest stems are cut right down to the base each year, the stool will be opened up so that fresh, vigorous shoots will continually replace them. In this way the entire plant remains indefinitely clean and thrifty and will produce attractive sprays of flowers and foliage. This method will produce lower, smaller bushes than those resulting from snipping back the top growth and at the same time preserves the graceful, characteristic habit of growth of the individual shrub.

A few shrubs will need special treatment. With lilacs it will be a decided advantage to go over the bushes just after blooming to cut out the faded flower sprays.

Late summer bloomers such as the hydrangea, butterfly bush, crape myrtle, and althea, may be cut back severely from the top in addition to some thinning out at the base. This gives more vigorous branching and a greater show of bloom, since the flowers are produced on the new wood.

At Washington, the report of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, estimates that the late drought cost Maryland farmers more than 22 million dollars.

WASHINGTON ELECTED PRESIDENT 142 YEARS AGO

Father of His Country Only Man Ever to Receive the Unanimous Vote of the Electors

When the people of the United States turned to George Washington with the universal demand that he stand at the head of the new government and fill the great office of first President of the Republic, he evinced the same diffidence which weighed upon him when he took command of the armies, according to the Division of Information of the George Washington Bicentennial Commisslon.

In response to the suggestion that he be a candidate, he recognized the fact that he was likely to be again called upon to render public service, and added simply that at his age it would involve a sacrifice which admitted of no compensation. He maintained this tone whenever he alluded to the subject, in deplying to numerous letters urging him to accept. But, although he declined to announce any decision, he had resigned himself to the inevitable.

Washington made it clear that he was not pursuing the office, and would only leave his farm to take it from a sense of duty. The electoral college gave him its unanimous vote on February 4, 1798. Neither the animosity of parties, nor the large number of enemies of the new government in some of the states could deprive him of a single vote.

The reluctance with which General Washington assumed his new position and that genuine modesty which was a distinguished feature of his character, are further illustrated by the following extract from a letter to General Henry Knox: "I feel for those members of the new Congress, who, hitherto, have given an unavailing attendance at the theatre of action. For myself, the delay may be compared to a reprieve; for, in confidence, I tell you (with the world it would obtain little credit), that my movements to the chair of government will be accompanied by feeling not unlike those of the culprit who is going to the place of his execution; so unwilling am I, in the evening of life, nearly consumed in public cares, to quit a peaceful abode for an ocean of difficulties without that competency of political skill, abilities, and inclination, which are necessary to manage the helm. I am sensible that I am embarking the voice of the people, and a good name of my own on this voyage; but what returns will be made from them Heaven alone can foretell. * * * Integrity and firmness are all that I can promise; these, be the voyage long or short, shall never forsake me, although I may be deserted by all men; for of the consolations which are to be derived from these, under any circumstances, the world can not deprive me."

The official announcement of his election as Chief Magistrate of the United States was made to him at Mount Vernon on April 14, 1789, by Charles Tomson, the secretary of the Continental Congress. Accustomed to respect the wishes of his fellow citizens Washington did not think himself at liberty to decline an appointment conferred upon him by the suffrage of an entire people. His acceptance of it, and his expression of gratitude for this fresh proof of the esteem and confidence of his country, were connected with declarations of diffidence in himself.

"I wish", he said, "that there may not be reason for regretting the choice—for indeed, all I can promise is to accomplish that which can be done by an honest zeal."

As the public business required the immediate attendance of the President at the seat of the Government, he hastened his departure, and on the second day after receiving notice of his election, he took leave of Mount Vernon. In an entry in his diary, the feelings inspired by an occasion so affecting to his mind are thus described: "About ten o'clock I bade adieu to Mount Vernon, to private life, and to domestic felicity; and with a mind oppressed with more anxious and painful sensations than I have words to express, set out for New York in company with Mr. Thompson and Cl. Humphries, with the dispositions to render service to my country in obedience to its call, but with less hope of answering its expectations."

On his journey from Alexandria to New York, Washington was everywhere received with the greatest demonstrations of affection by all classes of his fellow citizens, which were manifested by the most flattering marks of heartfelt respect and by addresses which evinced the unlimited confidence reposed in his virtues and his ability.

At Philadelphia he was received with unusual splendor. In imitation of the triumphal exhibitions of Ancient Rome, an arch was erected at the bridge over the Schuykill River and on each side was placed laurel shrubbery. As Washington passed under the arch a civic crown was let down upon him. The fields and avenues were crowded with people, thru which he was conducted ito the city by a body of leading citizens. At night the town was illuminated.

The next day, at Trenton, he was welcomed in a manner as new as it was pleasing. In additions to the usual discharge of cannon and the demonstrations of respect and attachment by military corps and by private persons of distinction, the women of the city arranged a tribute indicative of gratitude for their deliverance, twelve years before, from a formidable enemy. On a bridge over the creek which passes through the town was a triumphal arch, decorated with laurel and flowers and supported by thirteen pillars. On the front of this arch was inscribed in large gilt letters, "December 26, 1776," and beneath, formed in flowers, "The defender of the mothers will be the protector of the daughters."

As Washington passed under the arch he was met by a party of matrons leading their daughters, dressed in white, who carried baskets of flowers in their hands, and sang an ode composed for the occasion. At New Brunswick, he was joined by the Governor of New Jersey, who accompanied him to Elizabethtown Point. A committee of Congress received him on the road and conducted him with a military parade to the Point, where he embarked for New York in an elegant thirteen-oar barge, prepared for the purpose by the citizens of New York, and manned by thirteen pilots.

"The display of boats," said Washinton, in his private journal, "which was attended and joined on this occasion, with some vocal and others with instrumental music on board, the decorations of the ships, the roar of the cannon and the loud acclamations of the people, which rent the sky as I passed along the wharves, filled my mind with sensations as painful (contemplating the reverse of this scene, which may be the case after all my labors to do good) as they were pleasing."

At the stairs of Murray's Wharf, which had been prepared and decorated for the purpose, he was received by the Governor of New York and was conducted, with military honors, through an immense concourse of people, to the apartments prepared for him.

Washington arrived in New York on April 23 and on the 30th the Constitutional Government of the United States began with his inauguration as the first President.

"Whoopee" Film Version of Ziegfeld Stage Hit

As the first screen musical comedy to which Florenz Ziegfeld gave his own personal supervision and skill stagecraft, "Whoopee," which will be shown at the Maryland Theatre Friday and Saturday, according to the critics, does full justice to the reputation and talents of the famous impresario. "Whoopee" is very much a continuation of Eddie Cantor's stage success that ran for two years at the New Amsterdam Theatre, New York, transcribed bodily the films, with its huge spectacles magnified in size and beauty with the magic Technicolor to give it reality. Samuel Goldwyn, who produced the picture, claims that it is the first perfect all-color cinema extravaganza.

Yet despite its mammoth size the picture is still the same intimate comedy that, as "The Nervous Wreck," was one of the most amusing plays ever written. Ziegfeld managed to retain the uproarious humor of the original story when he set it on the great stage of the New Amsterdam, with music and song and hundreds of beautiful girls.

Eddie Cantor remains the protagonist of the comedy. "Whoopee" on the stage gave him a success that surpassed even the phenomenal record of his "Kid Boots" and the many Ziegfeld "Follies" that he headed. Its screen adaptation is Cantor's first talking picture—also the occasion that inaugurates the partnership of producer Samuel Goldwyn and impresario Florenz Ziegfeld.

Hundreds of the world's most beautiful girls, gathered from the beauty marts of Broadway and Hollywood by connoisseurs no less than Ziegfeld and Goldwin themselves augment the original stage cast, headed by Ethel Shutta, the silver-voiced tenor, Paul Gregory, Chief Caupolican, Spencer Chartres, the fair young Eleanor Hunt and a dozen others. Thornton Freeland directed the picture.—Adv.

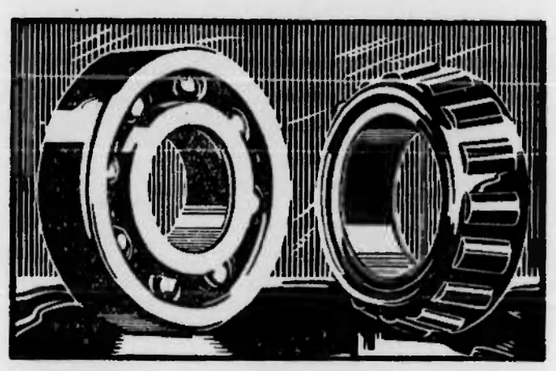
FORD
SMOOTHNESS



The new Ford has more than twenty ball and roller bearings

EVIDENCE of the high quality built into the new Ford is the extensive use of ball and roller bearings. There are more than twenty in all — an unusually large number. Each bearing is adequate in size and carefully selected for the work it has to do.

At some points in the Ford chassis you will find ball bearings. At others, roller bearings are used regardless of their higher cost. The deciding factor is the performance of the car.

The extensive use of ball and roller bearings in the new Ford insures smoother operation, saves gasoline, increases speed and power, gives quicker pick-up, decreases noise, and gives greater reliability and longer life to vital moving parts.

Other outstanding features that make the new Ford a value far above the price are the Triplex shatter-proof glass windshield, silent, fully enclosed four-wheel brakes, four Houdaille double-acting hydraulic shock absorbers, aluminum pistons, chrome silicon alloy valves, three-quarter floating rear axle, Rustless Steel, the extensive use of fine steel forgings, and unusual accuracy in manufacturing.

THE POLITICAL WHEELS OF WASHINGTON

Washington, Feb. 4—Mr. Raskob's disclaimer that he owns the Democratic party is being followed by an attempt to collect enough money from Democrtic supporters to pay the Raskob mortgage of approximately $600,000.

Political sages being of the opinion that the Raskob ownership may work against the party's chances in 1932, a survey is being made by a New York concern to determine the feasibility of a drive at this time to pay off the party debt.

The Democratic party is indebted personally to Mr. Raskob to the tune of $200,000, and another $400,000 is owed to the County Trust Company of New York, with which Mr. Raskob and Governor Alfred E. Smith are closely associated.

There are many in Washington and elsewhere who doubt that the proposed drive to redeem the Democratic party will be launched and there are others who are very dubious regarding the success of such a drive should one be undertaken.

The firm which has undertaken the preliminary work—the study of possibilities—is experienced in this type of endeavor and if the campaign is actually begun it will mean that the chances of success are considered to be good by this organization.

In the meantime the affair is being conducted without publicity. If it should be determined that because of business conditions or for other reasons the scheme is not feasible, all negotiations will be dropped and no more will be said about ransoming the Democratic party.

That is, no more will be said by Messrs. Raskob, Shouse et al. Mr. Raskob will continue to pay the party bills including the salaries of the Washington propaganda mill and Mr. Shouse will continue to accuse the President of causing bad weather and sundry other ills, but neither of these gentlemen will prate of party ownership.

Others, however, may not be so easily stilled. Leading Democrats outside of New York City may continue to protest against what they term Mr. Raskob's ownership of the Democratic party. These protests may continue even up to and into the Democratic National convention of 1932.

Several leaders of the party have vehemently declared that the more than one-half million dollar debt of the party should be repaid at once. There are others, however, who are not so solititous about Mr. Raskob's investments. Even the conservative estimators realize that much money will be needed in 1932 and among these many are putting the pertinent question, "Who, if not Raskob?"

There is still another minority group which feels that Mr. Raskob has had his money's worth out of dictating party policies for two years and that if any money is owing it is to the party treasury and not to Mr. Raskob. As one member of this faction puts it, "Just think of all the fun he has had."

FOSDICK AND WASHINGTON

By George B. Lockwood

Speaking in Chicago under the auspices of the League of Nations Association, Raymond Fosdick, the well known advocate of internationalism, declared that he was urging American entry into the League Court not as the matter of first importance, but as the first step toward the entrance of the United States into the League of Nations. Mr. Fosdick is to be complimented on his frankness—not all advocates of American entry into the League Court are as open in their declaration of ultimate purpose.

The Farewell Address of George Washington, Mr. Fosdick declares, "is as obsolete as the stage coach." The people who quote from Washington's message of admonition to his countrymen, he said, "stand with one foot in the Eighteenth century and the other in the Twentieth."

The fallacy of this argument lies in the assumption that progress in political philosophy has been as rapid as progress in mechanics: in other words, that present day advocates of foreign entanglements are intellectually and morally as far ahead of Washington as the aeroplane is of the ox-cart. Looking them over, there seems to be some reason for doubt on this score. To carry this doctrine further, the proverbs of Solomon, the Ten Commandments and the Sermon on the Mount are as far behind the ethical teachings of our up-to-the-minute radicals of today as the camel is behind the aeroplane.

The Farewell Address of George Washington dealt with fundamentals, not transient issues. He and his compatriots, in the preparation of the American Constitution, studied all experiments in government over a period of more than two thousand years. Therein they differed from the leaders of the French Revolution, who, supposing like some of our modern publicists, that all wisdom was born with them, embraced visionary conceptions which led France through the Terror, through long years of wholesale bloodshed, into despotism.

Instead of being discredited by the experience of a century and a third, all that Washington said as to the nature of men and governments has had its most striking confirmation in recent years. He said that Europe had a set of prime interests apart from our own in which we could be involved only at our peril; he said that disinterested friendship between nations was a theory and not a fact; he said that our system so differed from the European system that our involvement in the European hegemony was undesirable. The events of the past dozen years have proved all this anew to the satisfaction of most Americans. Washington declared that our proper policy was friendly commercial and political relations with all nations, permanent alliance with none. Americans have better reasons for believing this today than their forefathers had when Washington's Farewell Message was written.

All this movement to effect a merger of the American economic and political system with that of the rest of the world is cloaked in phrases of altruism which have deceived many Americans. But back of it is the purpose stated in the Third Article of the League of Nations covenant—the removal of trade barriers and the creation of equal economic opportunity among nations. In other words, in order that international finance and industry may have its way, our standards of living must be communized with the whole world's vastly lower standards of living; the prosperity we have achieved through hard work under sound institutions of government, must be dissipated among other nations, most of which have fallen under the sway either of socialism or dictatorship. It is true that this plan would satisfy the lust for world-wide dominion and profit which possesses a few great financial interests grown too large for this country, and too world-minded to stand up for it welfare against alien influences which would degrade American standards of life and subject our social fabric to a stain too great to be borne. But should the American people risk their prosperity, security and liberty in order to advance the designs of politicians anxious to concentrate all political power in a world socialist hegemony, such as that which now throws its shadow over Europe, or of their associates in agitation for a world merger the international capitalists, who would create a world-wide financial despotism? In other words, should we, to quote the words of Lowell:

"Turn the prow of the Mayflower backward
To Europe, entering her blood-red eclipse"?

Mr. James W. Stephen Also Opposes An Issue of Bonds for Roads and For Schools.

To the Editor of The Republican.

In reading through the last week's issue of The Republican, I was more than pleased to note the splendid letter which Mr. T. W. Casteel addressed to the taxpayers of the county.

While complying with his wishes for further communications I wish to state that I do not favor a bond bill or loan of any kind, because the present business and financial conditions of the country are not such as to permit this expenditure of money, especially when the capital is furnished by the taxpayers of a county, which in my estimation, is not able to complete such an undertaking without increasing the taxes, will not be furnishing much farm relief.

I do not want to give the impression that I do not approve of an education or anything pertaining to an educational improvement, but I do not think such a proposal as the one above mentioned is an advisable plan at the present time.

Our local school has been closed for a period of over three years, and we do not have the privilege of a furnished means of transportation of the children, who walk a distance of approximately two miles through the woods over an abandoned road.

In regard to the appointed officers of the county, I would prefer the election by vote of the people because the Constitution specifies that our form of government is one that is "of the people, by the people and for the people."

These are a few of the reasons why I do not approve of the proposed bond bill issue and I close with the heartiest congratulations to the members of the General Assembly for their maintenence of their pre-election promises to the people of the county.

JAMES W. STEPHEN.
Grantsville, February 2, 1931.

EDITOR'S NOTE—Several other communications bearing on the subject treated in the above letter from Mr. Stephen are on the editor's desk. Some of them are foreign to the real matter under discussion, and show for some reason the personal feelings of animosity toward public officials. Such letters will not be printed in The Republican, as such communications have no weight with the class of people who are interested in matters so vital to the public good.

IN DAYS OF OLD

The last hop of the season until after Lent, took place at the Glades Hotel on January 30. All the latest airs, including the ever popular McGinty, were rendered. A number of the ladies were in full dress and the gentlemen were all in evening dress. The ladies present were Mrs. Dr. Ravenscroft, Mrs. H. W. McComas, Mrs. Dr. Bartlett, Mrs. Hyde, Mrs. West, the Misses Weber, Anderson, Bartlett, Cornelius, Jarboe, Jennie Johnson, Nellie Sullivan and Margaret Tower. The gentlemen were, Messrs. McComas, Bartlett and Ravenscroft, Townshend, Hyde, Hamill, and West.

Rev. Moore, Keyser, preached one of his eloquent sermons in the Memorial church, Oakland, Tuesday night.

Mrs. E. H. Sincell and little son were both quite ill.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

Because of the publication of a number of communications bearing upon the temperance conditions in Oakland, two Oakland citizens, discontinued their subscriptions to The Republican. The editor published the letters of the protestants, with a note that The Republican would continue with its attitude in regards to the liquor traffic and the thousands of ills that follow in its wake.

Wild cats were very numerous and fierce during the winter, and it was not safe to venture on country roads after dark. The cats were hungry, the cold weather and deep snow made foraging difficult. A wild cat attacked a rural route carrier near Grantsville and several animals followed pedestrains and horsemen.

An Interesting Fact

THE FIRST MARRIAGE BROKER
A Colonial "Racket."

The Time.....About 1688 or 1689
The Place.....Mary Land

Dramatis Personae

Sara Vanhart..an orphan and heiress
Richard Burnett.....A Scotchman
Stephen Coleman.....A Tailor
Who desires to marry Sara
Colonel Coursey.....Gentleman
And other friends of Sara
Margaret Pope..Aunt and Guardian of Sara
Thomas Hawker's wife.
Judges Roth and Stevens and two other Judges
Clerks, secretaries and spectators.

The scene opens in the office of the Judges on the hearing of a motion to obtain the custody of Sara Vanhart, an infant.

Substituting present day language for the stilted phrases of Colonial days, we can imagine Col. Henry Coursey, friend and counsel for Sara, addressing the Court something like this fashion:

"May it please the Court, the evidence in the case at bar shows the facts to be that one John Vanhart, a respectable citizen of Cecil county, in this, Province of Mary Land, departed this life intestate in the year 1688, seized and possessed of an estate of the value of approximately 16,000 pounds of tobacco, leaving as his only heir at law his child, Sara Vanhart, my client, an infant of tender years. His wife preceded him in death about ten years, when my client was placed in the custody of her aunt, Margaret Pope, as her guardian.

Although Sara is only about eleven years of age, this Colony has been stirred to its depths by the fact that one Richard Burnett, a Scotchman, resident herein, who, it may be reasonably inferred from the evidence and the circumstances surrounding this case, was promised a marriage fee, conspired and confederated with one Stephen Coleman, a tailor, the senior by many years of my client, to make her the bride of Coleman, without the consent of her guardian and against the advice and influence of friends.

"This unholy alliance would undoubtedly have been sonsummated had not information been sent to me at my estate, 'Thumb Grant,' on the river Chester, and my aid implored. I make this personal reference because the evidence shows that myself and friends, without fee or hope of reward, became deeply interested in preventing this child from falling into the hands of this fortune hunter, Stephen Coleman. We volunteered our services in her behalf and now appear before your Honors, who have jurisdiction over the person and the property of your ward, asking that you forbid this unrighteous marriage."

But apparently three of the five Judges were parties to the conspiracy and consequently were unmoved by this plea, for we read in Andrews' History of Maryland that Sara was placed in the custody of Thomas Hawker's wife, who lived on Bohemia River, a convenient place for Coleman to take her over into the adjoining province of Pennsylvania.

After the Judges had rendered their decision there occurred a dramatic scene. The court room was in tumult. The girl and the aunt were locked in each other's arms, shedding tears of real grief at the thought of parting. Justice Stevens, laying aside and apparently forgetting his judicial dignity, was pulling the girl one way and the aunt the other. Finally Sara, showing the true spirit of the times, succeeded in jerking away from the Justice and taking advantage of the opportunity, her friends rushed her to her aunt's boat, anchored at a convenient place, no doubt with this thought in mind, in which she made her escape to a haven of refuge.

And thus the villains were foiled.

Sunday School Lesson

(By REV. P. B. FITZWATER, D. D., Member of Faculty, Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.)
(©, 1931, Western Newspaper Union.)

Lesson for February 8

JESUS THE WORLD'S TEACHER

LESSON TEXT—Luke 6:27-46.
GOLDEN TEXT—And as ye would that men should do to you, do ye also to them likewise.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus the Great Teacher.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus the Great Teacher.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Living by the Golden Rule.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Accepting the Standards of Jesus.

The context, verse 26, clearly implies what is elsewhere positively declared (John 15:18-21; Luke 21:17) that the followers of Christ will be hated and opposed. In this lesson Christ, the master teacher, sets forth principles governing the life of his followers.

I. "Love Your Enemies" (v. 27).

Love here is not a natural affection. To love friends is easy, but to love enemies is only possible to those who have been made partakers of the divine nature—been born again.

II. "Do Good to Them Which Hate You" (v. 27).

Love is positive in its nature. The true disciple of Christ will not merely refrain from doing injury to the one who hates him but will be concerned with doing good to him.

III. "Bless Them That Curse You" (v. 28).

To bless means to speak well of, to invoke a blessing upon. Injury by words is hard to let go unchallenged. The true child of God will return blessings for cursings.

IV. "Pray for Them Which Despitefully Use You" (v. 28).

We should pray for those who abuse us. The best commentary on this precept is Christ's own example, "Father forgive them for they know not what they do" (Luke 23:34). When Christ was reviled, he reviled not again. When he suffered, he threatened not, but committed himself to him that judgeth righteously (I Peter 2:23).

V. Patiently Endure Wrong and Injury (v. 29).

The Christian is not to bristle in defense of his rights but is rather to suffer insult, injury, and even loss. This expresses the law which should govern the individual's action, but should not be pressed so far that evil doers can go unchecked.

VI. "Give to Every Man That Asketh of Thee" (v. 30).

God himself is the supreme example of benevolence. He gives freely and generously but intelligently. This text does not authorize promiscuous giving. It does not mean that every request made by the idle, greedy, and selfish should be granted. A man in poverty needs to be given a way to earn his living.

VII. Do as You Wish to Be Done By (v. 31).

This is called "The Golden Rule." It is the sum total of Christian duty as it pertains to human inter-relations. Human beings carry with them the consciousness of obligation which is the touchstone determining their duty to others. If this rule were lived up to, the problem of capital and labor would be solved, and war would be put to an end. International relations would be peaceably adjusted and all profiteering in business would end.

VIII. Be Ye Merciful (v. 36).

This means to be filled with pity and compassion, to enter into sympathy with every need of others. The heavenly Father is our supreme example.

IX. Censorious Judgments Condemned (v. 37).

This means that we should not seek out the evil or faults in others for our satisfaction. We should not sit in censorious judgment upon the action of others.

X. Compensations of Right Living (v. 38).

The one who gives freely of money, loves sincerely, makes the Golden Rule the standard of his life, shows mercy and kindness to others, and refrains from impugning the motives of others, will be fully rewarded in time.

XI. Danger of Following False Teachers (v. 39).

The one who does not know God and the way to heaven will lead others to ruin.

XII. Those Who Reprove Others Should Strive to Live Blameless Lives (vv. 41, 42).

We should remove evil doing from our own lives before bringing others to account.

XIII. The Sin of Profession Without Fruits (vv. 43-46).

The one who is in fellowship with God will practice the principles which reveal the nature of God.

Ought to Be Sunny and Cheery

Of all the people we Christians ought to be the sunniest and cheerfest. What a difference it would make to the world if our religion made us all a singing folk, and if it helped us to comfort and stabilish other people.—J. D. Jones.

Forgiveness

Forgiveness is not only a deliverance from guilt—it is the removal of all that shuts out the love of God from the heart.—C. H. Spurgeon.

SCOOP'S COLUMN

By SCOOP—HIMSELF

In response to my lament of one week ago about the dowfall of society on account of the evils of B. O., halitosis, athlete's foot, dandruff, and what-not, I have received a sonnet a-la-modern, from my good friend Bennie Bounce. I don't know Bennie, but he must be my friend or he wouldn't have sent me the poem. Well, Bounce again, Bennie, any time you have something like that to send in. Here it is:

Sonnet A-la-modern Suggested by Scoop's Lament

"Look me over, Mother darling,
Look me over, Mother dear,
For I've a date with the nicest girl
I've met for many a year.
She'll give me the once-over
When I take her to the dance,
And if I'm not just up to date,
I'll not get half a chance."

"Why, Davey, boy, you're perfect,"
And she looked me up and down;
"There's not a finer looking lad
In this or any town.
Your socks are ultra-modern,
Your shoes show elbow-grease,
Your pants would do to cut the grass,
So straight and sharp's the crease.
Your necktie seems to match each shade
That flickers in your eye;
Your collar's right, your shave is clean,—
Go on, man, go and try."

"Oh, be your age, dear Mother,
These things don't make a go,
Come closer and examine well,
And see if I've B. O.
And turn your strongest glasses on
The collar of my coat,
To round up any dandruff
That there you chance to note.
And then just turn your optics
On my teeth and note their tone,
And see if in the past few days,
They've ten shades whiter grown.
I think that I've done each darn thing
The magazines now tell
A fellow that he has to do,
To put it over well.
So, look once more, good Mother,
And scrutinize my bean,
And tell me if you think I've used
Enough of Blisterine."

—Bennie Bounce, Oakland, Md.

From the looks of the annual report of the county statistician in The Republican last week, concerning the births and deaths, there is at least one business which hasn't been affected by the depression—this business of raising children.

Grover Stemple, the greatest mayor Oakland has had within the past year, says that if you think miniature bridge has not yet been invented, then just take a look at some of his scores.

I'm not a bit stuck up but I can truthfully say that at present I am in a class all by myself. I am a pupil in a correspondence school.

Western Bill Harvey let Garrett countians in on a secret use for automobile tire pumps when prohibition officers found him. But then I guess it wasn't such a secret with a lot of them, as they have a habit of having pressure tanks on gasoline burners.

The treasurer of the Amalgamated Society for the Prevention of Work might fool some people when he takes a pair of scissors over to his lock box in the Garrett National Bank every six months, but I know better. The Amalgamates quit clipping coupons when the odorless onion factory of Sang Run failed.

Offers Prize For Oldest Piece of Home Furniture

Have you a mohair-covered chair or sofa in your home? If so, you may be two hundred and fifty dollars the richer for it!

The Republican is in receipt of a message from the Household Science Institute, Chicago, asking for help in locating the oldest piece of mohair-upholstered furniture in the United States. The style of the sought for furniture or its use or non-use at the present time are not important, providing it is in good condition. The owner of the piece selected will be awarded two hundred and fifty dollars and the piece itself will be exhibited with other old-time furniture during the World's Fair at Chicago in 1933.

Back of the Institute's offer is the desire on the part of Grace Viall Gray, its director, to ascertain the longevity of mohair.

People of Oakland who feel that they have something of interest should communicate with Mrs. Grace Viall Gray, Household Science Institute, 7 S. Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill., giving the history of the piece they have in mind and all facts concerning age, color, condition and other pertinent information. Mrs. Gray will then decide whether the article is the one wanted and make arrangements for shipping it to Chicago.

The BEST Gray Hair Remedy is Home Made

To half pint of water add one ounce bayrum, a small box of Barbo Compound and one-fourth ounce of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. It will gradually darken streaked, faded or gray hair and make it soft and glossy. Barbo will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.

LAST YEAR'S RECORD FOR MARRIAGES IS SURPASSED

Total for 1931 is Still Less Than All-time January Mark

An increase in the number of marriage licenses issued during the past week, over the past four weeks, caused the January record to reach 49, two more than were issued for January of 1930, according to E. Z. Tower, clerk of the Circuit Court. The total was still 27 less than the all-time January record made in 1925 when 76 permits were granted.

Fifteen licenses were granted during the past week ending Monday at noon. Three were marked "don't publish," while one applicant was refused a license on account of the youthfulness of one of the contracting parties.

SAVE YOUR EYES

Dr. J. Fred Andreae, Secretary, Md. State Board of Optometry

"House Lighting"

We need more natural light in our homes. Sunlight in addition to being necessary to life itself, is a health giving light and there is no more effective death to disease germs. Too much shade about the house tends to make it damp, unhealthy, and prevents the natural light from entering in as large quantities as it is advisable that it should.

Trees and shrubs should not be planted about the house so that in later years they will grow to shade the building itself. We say that we plant shade trees to have the house cool in summer but the temperature of the air entering the house is determined by the temperature of the air near the ground surrounding the house and if the trees are so planted that they shade the ground about the house and not the house itself you will have the combined advantage of cool breezes and the healthful sunlight.

The practice of curtaining windows from the top is wrong for best results are obtained in seeing when the light comes from above and if the quantity of light entering the room is too great for comfort it is better to cut off the surplus from the bottom of the window, leaving it unshaded at the top. Try it sometime and note the increase in visual comfort.

The supply of natural light into the homes should be unobstructed. We are well informed on the necessity of fresh air in our homes; sunlight is even more essential and should be welcomed into every room. The present day tendency of building homes with fewer and smaller windows is wrong. This was probably brought about by the increasing heating costs because of the cold which enters the rooms around and through the windows. This should be offset, if necessary, by using "double windows" but by all means have plenty of natural light.

COUNTY AGENT'S COLUMN

J. H. CARTER,
Resident County Agent,

Insure Your Chicks

Would you be interested in insurance against losing more than 10 percent of your chicks this year, and a guarantee that more than forty percent of your chicks will develop into good pullets for the laying house?

No one that we know of is writing such insurance or guarantee, but you can handle these matters yourself to insure against high mortality of chicks and housing a high percent of your chicks as laying pullets.

Yes, it can be done and is being done each year by careful poultry raisers in Maryland. For the past four years the poultry raisers in Maryland who followed all eight recommendations in the "Grow Healthy Chicks" work have each year lost less than 10 percent of their chicks on the basis of weighted averages. During the past two years this same group housed 43% of their chicks as laying pullets. Those poultry raisers not following recommendation No. 1 lost more than 15% of their chicks and housed about 38% of them as pullets for laying.

Those not following recommendation No. 4 lost about 12% of their chicks and housed about 38% of the chicks as pullets, while those not following both No. 1 and No. 4 lost nearly 20% of their chicks and housed 37% of them as pullets. Those not following three or more of the recommendations lost about 25% of their chicks and housed only one-third of their chicks as pullets.

Your best insurance lies in following the "Grow Healthy Chicks" plan to lower mortality and higher profits.

This plan is briefly:

1. Use only clean chicks or eggs. That is, chicks or eggs from officially certified and pullorum tested stock. Other flocks may be healthy and of good breeding but officially certified and tested flocks are more dependable.

2. Clean Incubators—Guarded against Pullorum disease (Bacillary White Diarrhea) demands that proper sanitation be guarded against in hatching the chicks, since this contagious disease is easily spread in incubators, unless its spread is especially guarded against, since only a few infected eggs which hatch may spread the disease to numerous chicks in the same or later hatches.

3. Clean Brooder Houses—To properly clean the house means more than merely raking out the dirt and filth. The house and all equipment must be scraped clean, then scrubbed with hot lye water and then rinsed, in order to make a thorough job.

4. Clean or Fresh Brooding Ground—To get away from the contamination and accumulation of last year's brooding filth, the house should be moved to ground which has been free of all poultry and poultry manure during the past year. This means using movable brooder houses.

5. Clean Litter—Frequent cleaning of the house and replacing with fresh litter is very effective in combatting attempts of disease to gain a foothold. Cleaning the brooder house twice a week as long as the chicks have heat is especially effective against coccidiosis and other diseases.

6. Clean Feeding—Using hoppers and fountains that keep the chicks from getting into them with their feet are the preferred type. All feeders and fountains should be emptied and thoroughly cleaned at least once a day and more often if necessary.

7. Clean Management—This especially refers to keeping contamination from being carried to the chieks, as well as to removing any dangers which may appear. Two of the most important are, promptly killing and burning all weak and diseased chicks, and keeping all birds away from the brooder house and brooding ground.

8. Clean Laying Houses—To get the best results from pullets that have been raised clean, they must be housed in clean quarters. The house they are to be placed in should be scraped and scrubbed as clean as the brooder house was cleaned, and after drying, bedded deeply with good litter. Two yards to each house to provide alternate outside run is to be preferred to free range or a single yard. This allows a two year rotation plan to be followed.

Use the "Grow Healthy Chicks" pills and panaccas for prevention.

DIED.

LEROY J. HOLIDAY

Leroy J. Holiday died at 8:20 p. m., Friday, January 23, 1931, at the family home on Latrobe Avenue, Confluence, Pa., after two weeks' illness, suffering from erysipelas and complications.

Leroy J. Holiday was born at Silbaugh, Addison Township, Pa., on July 6, 1874, a son of the late William and Rebecca Holiday. He was aged 56 years, 6 months and 17 days.

When very young Mr. Holiday moved, with his parents, from Silbaugh to Maple Glen, in the Peck Settlement, where he lived until young manhood. In 1893 he went to Maryland, and in the vicinity of Friendsville engaged in the lumbering business, merchandising and restaurant business for some time. He returned to Confluence in 1910, again re-entering the restaurant business.

He left the restaurant business after four years to engage in the automobile and garage trade.

Mr. Holiday became a member of the Church of the Brethren at Maple Glenn when 14. After moving to Friendsville, in 1904, he united with the Lutheran church at that place, and later, at Confluence, had his membership transferred to the Trinity Evengelical Lutheran church. He was for many years superintendent of the Lutheran Sunday school at Confluence, and was a member of the Men's Bible Class of the Methodist Episcopal church of Confluence.

He was for 28 years a member of the I. O. O. F. Lodge, joining the Odd Fellows in Friendsville in 1902, and later transferring his membership to the Confluence Lodge. He was also a member of the Three Rivers Rebekah Lodge, and of the Confluence Volunteer Fire Company, being the first member of the latter two organizations who has passed beyond since their organization. He was for one full term a member of the Confluence Borough Council and was also appointed by Judge Berkey early in 1928, to fill out the unexpired term of Roy T. Perrell on the council.

Mr. Holiday was married in 1893 to Miss Alvira Hileman, who survives him. He is also survived by one brother, Harry Holiday, of Somerfield, Pa., and the following three sisters: Mrs. Amanda Zimmerman, St. Paul; Mrs. Eliza Boyd, Rockwood, Pa.; and Mrs. Lavina Wiley, of Mt. Lake Park. Two brothers and four sisters preceded him to the grave.

Short services were held at the family home, Monday, January 26, in charge of the Three Rivers Lodge. Funeral services were held in the Lutheran church, Rev. E. B. Boyer, pastor of the Trinity Church of Knox, Pa., a former pastor of the local church, officiating, assisted by Rev. Geo. O. Ritter of the Confluence Lutheran church. A quartette, composed of E. E. McDonald, A. T. Groff, Mrs. Therza Constance and Mrs. Thea Marquart sang several beautiful selections. The floral tributes were many.

Interment was at Addison cemetery, with services in charge of Confluence Lodge 814, I. O. O. F. The active pall bearers were brothers-in-law of Mr. Holiday, James Hileman, Truman Hileman, George Hileman, Jasper Hileman, Charles Hileman and Howard Weaver. Honorary pall bearers, members of the I. O. O. F., were M. E. Goller, Harry P. Burnworth, Grant Pyle, G. A. Frantz, Geo. F. Frazee, and William S. Bower.

"Just as soon as possible, please, we can't do without it."

DOZENS of times each day this is said to us by people ordering new telephones or having telephones moved to new locations. And it's true.

People without telephones in their homes are becoming scarcer every day. Their friends have them; the business places they deal with all have them; truly, the world regulates its affairs nowadays by telephone.

The low prices charged for the service have been largely responsible for its widespread use and for the steady increase year after year in the number of subscribers.

There's a class of service to fit every need and a price to fit every pocketbook.

● Speedy Installations
Telephones can usually be installed within forty-eight hours from the time the orders are received.

Maple Sweets Season Opened

From the Meyersdale Republican of last Thursday the following relative to making maple sugar and syrup in Garrett county, Md., and Somerset connty, Pa., is clipped:

There being some favorable weather for the manufacture of maple sweets during the last week, a few of the producers in this vicinity have been tapping their trees. From Carleton Livengood's camp comes the first report of new syrup made this year. He was probably the first in this section to tap his trees. On Monday he made 16 gallons of very nice syrup. He has since made more and will make all he can from now on till the close of the season. Carleton is a grandson of the late Elijah Livengood, known as the Maple Sugar King, and operates the same farm which now has only a mere fraction of the sugar maple trees on it that once were there. Most of the trees have been sold to Davis Brothers, lumbermen, who have laid many of them low during the last year.

Harrison Yommer, who has the management of the sugar camp on Fearson Maust's farm this year, is another producer of maple sweets who is reported to be busy at turning out new maple sweets.

Those who have tapped their trees report that the trees have been leaking quite well. The price of maple syrup will likely be lower this year than it has been for a long time, as the demand for maple products is not as heavy as it was several years ago. There is still much sugar and syrup on hand from last year.

STATE BUDGET FOR TWO YEARS IS $71,488,727.00

ing 1932 and 1933 are $31,481,386.31 as compared for those of 1930 and 1931, which amounted to $22,622,809.

Appropriations for general construction, including that for the $2,000,000 new University Hospital, will be taken care of in the provisions of a bill for a general construction loan, which will be submitted to the Legislature later in the session.

Rejects Six Salary Increases

Salary increase requested for eight State department heads were recommended in two cases only. They were for the executive director of the Department of Legislative Reference, from $2,500 to $3,000 and superintendent of the Montrose School for Girls, from $3,000 to $3,500.

Board of Welfare Requests

Included in the appropriations for the Board of Welfare are provisions for a salary of $9,000 for a superintendent of prisons; $1,600 for a senior stenographer and $1,500 for an inspector of county jails.

Salaries of $1,800 a year are provided in the State Bank Commissioner's budget for two additional bank examiners because of the large increase of work in the office resulting from the consolidation of national banks with State banks.

The public school appropriations for 1932 and 1933 total $11,127,392; for 1930 and 1931 the amount authorized for expenditure in schools was $9,850,865.

State examining boards will receive out of the special funds in the two-year period $100,000 for expenses in conducting examinations for applicants and $8,000 each year will go to the military department for expenses of State-owned armories.

Items included in the $327,263.05 to be expended out of the general funds of the State are $20,000 for the State Board of Health, to be expended under direction of the Governor for relief work by the Vetcrans' Relief Commission, for war veterans and members of the Maryland National Guard, $15,000 emergency appropriation for the House of Reformation for Colored Boys, due to drought conditions; repairs to public buildings at Annapolis, $10,314; repairs to Executive Mansion, $15,000; emergency appropriation to Veterans' Relief Commission, $25,000, and to the Department of Forestry, $15,080.50 for deficit in fighting fires in the last year.

Democrats Have New State Leader

The Legislature is now organized, the committees have all been appointed and the work of the session is fairly underway to perform the work which may come before it, when the bills and other measures are presented by the people whose duty it is to prepare them.

The only unusual feature of the session, which at the present time differs from previous meetings of the lawmaking body of the past half century, is the fact that the preliminary arrangements have all been practically dictated by one man, whose rise to the position of state leader has been prenominally rapid, for there is no doubt of it Col. Brooke Lee, of Montgomery county, has without any serious open protest on the part of any members of either house taken charge of the whole affair. He has selected the presiding officers of both the Senate and House of Delegates. Not only that, but he dictated the naming of all the principle subordinate officers and not a few of the ordinary employes owe their positions to this able and extremely forceful young man who has risen in a short time to a position in the Democratic party which required years of struggle, contest and heartburning on the part of such men as the late Arthur P. Gorman, Sr., I. Freeman Rasin and John Walter Smith to attain what he has attained at one jump. And in one particular respect he has outdistanced everyone of these able and distinguished leaders in the fact that he is now recognized as the State leader not only by the counties but by Baltimore City, and so far as all outward signs indicate, his authority is apparently undisputed from Garrett to Worcester and from Point Lookout to Conowingo.

In all of this assumption of power Mr. Lee is presumably the representative of the Governor, who, while in a position to exercise all of his authority in person is understood to have delegated it all to the aspiring young and industrious statesman from the suburbs of Washington.

There is no doubt of it, Mr. Lee is in control, and up to the present time there does not appear to be anyone of the several able men in the General Assembly to raise a voice in open protest. And his control extends not only over the county representatives, in both Houses, but also over the whole united Democracy of Baltimore City—forty-two in the Assembly. If there is anyone who has any disposition to oppose his leadership and newly assumed authority he has made no sign.

And another astonishing feature of the party situation is the fact that there is no one in sight to lead the Democratic City organization. After the election it was expected that Messrs. Robert S. Ennis and Gilbert A. Daily, both of whom are able and influential, would take charge. But they have dropped out of sight.

The venerable and highly honored leader, Mr. Frank A. Furst, saye he is "out of politics" and declines to act as adviser to anyone. His withdrawal leaves a void which will be hard to fill. He was opposed to the retention of Mr. John M. Dennis as State Treasurer. That gentleman was again chosen without opposition for another term of four years. He was and is openly opposed to the renomination of Howard W. Jackson for Mayor of Baltimore. But Mr. Jackson is out in the field without serious opposition at present, and with the tacit approval of the Governor of his candidacy, Mr. Furst is not at all pleased with the fact that the man and the men for whom he has stood sponsor for many years, are ignoring his well-known wishes, hence his retirement from any connection with the practical politics of the city and State. He is past eighty-five and his connection with public affairs, both political and business, has been long and honorable, and his wise counsel has served his party from disaster in more than one crisis.

Interesting developments are expected at Annapolis in the next few weeks. There may be a revolt against the Lee domination but that is doubtful. The young leader from Montgomery is active and fearless. The party needs a real boss. Up to the present time he has shown unusual qualifications for the job. It will take much skill and ability to dethrone him and a contest over the party dictatorship would prove dramatic and entertaining to all.

BLUE LAW REFORM BILL INTRODUCED IN HOUSE

Would Give Local Sections the Power To Decide Sunday Amusement Question

CHANGES IN AUTO LAWS

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 11—The long awaited Blue Law bill, giving to the local legislative bodies of the State power to decide the Sunday question for themselves, was introduced in the House of Delegates today by Speaker Francis A. Michel, in company with several other measures of State-wide import.

In one of these measures, increased representation for Baltimore City on the Court of Appeals bench is sought by Delegate Alexander Goodman of the fourth district through an increase of the court membership by two. Last week he introduced a bill asking for two additional State senators and 12 additional members of the House from the city.

Under the measure introduced today the Court of Appeals would be increased from eight to ten members, the two new ones to come from the Supreme Bench of Baltimore City.

Senate Wrangles Over Judges

These and several automobile regulation measures and the approach to passage of an appeal for immediate cash aid to veterans marked the session in the lower branch before adjournment until tomorrow.

The Senate spent practically its entire session in a wrangle over the extension of the retirement time of judges past the constitutional age of 70.

Under one measure, introduced by Delegate William I. Norris, Jr., of Baltimore City, a flat rate would be paid for motor vehicle license taxes on a downward revision of the existing scale.

Would Change Automobile Laws

On all vehicles under class A pleasure automobiles and those for hire, a reduction from the 32 cents per horsepower to a flat rate of $2 per year would be charged. Class C, motorcycles and bicycles with motor attachments, would pay $2 for each license plate rather than the flat sum they now pay for operation.

Raising of the speed limits for motor vehicles on State highways was provided for in a measure introduced by Delegate Robert Benjamin, of Baltimore City. The limits would remain the same in the cities and towns where it is set low for safety.

In the rural districts, where the speed laws now are 35 or 40 miles per hour, they would be increased to 40 and 45 miles.

A third automobile measure was offered by Delegate Milton Tolle, of Baltimore county, requiring that all liens and mortgages on motor vehicles be filed in the office of the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles in Baltimore, rather than be scattered in each of the counties and recorded in the offices of the clerks of the courts.

All the proposed motor laws were sent to the Judiciary committee for consideration.

Fix Responsibility For Fires

Owners of property on which they start fires to clear brush and stubble would be made responsible for damage to other property through spread of the flames, in a measure introduced by Delegate Charles Carroll, of Howard county.

Additional aid was asked for agriculture in a measure dropped into the House hopper by Delegate Philip Miller, of Washington county.

By the Miller measure, all live stock used in farming and all farm machinery would be exempted from taxation to the total of $1,000. The small farmer, Mr. Miller said, who has little equipment, would be the chief beneficiary.

Local Measure Introduced

In the House on Tuesday a measure, introduced by the Garrett delegation seeks to revise and increase fees for constables serving in Garrett county.

Thieves Take 2,500 Pounds of Feed

Thieves entered the barn of James Fike, of Guard, and hauled away 2,500 pounds of chop feed, sacked and stored in the barn to feed his stock during the winter months.

Mr. and Mrs. Fike had gone to Selbysport for the evening and their loss was not discovered until the next morning. Mr. Fike said the thieves must have backed a truck up to the barn and loaded the feed thereon.

ROTARIANS ARE GUESTS AT CRELLIN MINE INSPECTION

Tour of Stanley Coal Company's Mine Is Made Monday Evening

Mr. Charles W. Ream, president of the Stanley Coal company of Crellin, and president of the Oakland Rotary club, was host to members of the club on Monday evening when they accompanied him and his mine foreman, Stanley Ashby, on a tour of the Crellin mine.

Mr. Ream and Mr. Ashby took the group to the important and interesting places in the mine, visiting the power house where the huge boilers generated power for the engines, fan, pumping system, electric lighting system, and electric motors, and other parts of the mine.

The group watched the operation of an electric cutting bar as it cut its way in a room of coal, and listened to the explanation of how this machine had revolutionized the modern soft coal industry. Many sections of the mine were visited, giving the group a first hand picture of every phase of mining.

The party was brought to the surface by mine cars and the return to Crellin made on the caboose of the train. It was stated that about 19 steel cars are loaded each working day and that more than 200 men were employed in the mine operations. Only those who have had intimate contact with the mine operations of the Stanley Coal company realize the extent of the industry, of which Oakland indirectly shares in business and other relations, it was said.

FAIRSWEEP and LYNNDALE HAVE 100 PERCENT RECORD

Strawberry Hill Leads Two-Teacher Schools With 99.6 Percent

Fairsweep school, for the fourth month in the present school term, had an attendance record of 100 percent and tied the Lynndale school for first honors among the one-teacher schools of the county for the month of January, John L. Fitzwater, attendance officer, announced. Pine Swamp was third with 99.4, and Bond school fourth with 99.2.

Strawberry Hill, with 99.6 percent, led the two-teacher schools of the county, with Shallmar, 98.4, second; Jennings, 94.7, third; and Deer Park, 93.2, fourth. Accident led the graded schools with 96.1 percent, with Kempton, second, Crellin third, and Kitzmiller fourth.

Among the high schools Friendsville led with a percentage of 95.9. Oakland was second with 94.8, and Kitzmiller third with 93.8. The schools as a general rule were not quite up to standard for January, on account of the large amount of sickness in various communities, Mr. Fitzwater pointed out. Only one school out of the 117 schools in the county was below 80 percent.

Fairsweep school, which is tied for first place this month, in the past year and one-half has had 100 percent attendance nine times.

Pupils of the school are Lawrence Wensel, Stanley Bernard, Alice Garlitz, Maxine White, Max White, Mildred Wensel, Kenneth Beckman, Ralph Bernard, Howard Wensel, John Garlitz. Miss Hazel Garlets is the teacher.

He was taken to Memorial hospital, Cumberland, where he is under the care of Dr. William A. Gracie.

Civic Club to Make Dresses For Children

Decision to make a number of new dresses and repair old ones was made Tuesday by members of the Oakland Civic club at a special meeting of the organization. The decision on the part of the club was arrived at following a request made by Mrs. Joseph F. Fahey, public health nurse, who said a number of children in the county were in need of clothing.

OLD HEARTS WILL RENEW YOUTHFUL VOWS AND NEW ROMANCE WILL BE DISCOVERED ON VALENTINE'S DAY

Sweethearts, young and old, find new romance in that ancient custom of presenting gifts and verses to loved ones on the 14th of February, Valentine's Day. It is the one day when love holds sway, business is thrust aside, and old hearts renew their youthful vows. Candy and romantic cards are the items on this year's Valentine list. These are given only to those in whom one is particularly interested.

In the medieval churches services were held on February the fourteenth in memory of the martyrdom and as the name day or feast of eight different Christian martyrs named Valentine.

The custom of sending valentines or gifts has nothing to do with the martyrs. A spring-time festival of the Romans fell on this day also and the sending of gifts and valentines has come down from this festival. But the origin of the custom was generally forgotten, and now we call the gifts valentines, from the name given to the day.

An old custom in Chaucer's time of sending and giving valentines was to place the names of young men and women in a box and draw them out in pairs on Saint Valentine's Eve. The names drawn together had to exchange presente anb be each other's valentines thruout the year. Later on, men only gave presents.

One wonders how the youth of modyour partner for exactly 365 days, trictions of having a valentine thrust upon him for a whole year. Tomorrow the sweetheart of today may be "ancient history", according to your choice. In those days, fate chose your partner for exactly 365 days, and sometimes 366.

MRS. LETTIE ANTHONY, 23, ADMITS SHOOTING HER FATHER AT WILSON TUESDAY, CLAIMING SELF-DEFENSE

Declares That He Was Drinking and Dangerous and Threatened To Take Her Life With Knife

SAID GUN WASN'T LOADED

Charged with slaying her father, Aaron Moyer, 59, of Garrett county, just across the Potomac river from Wilson, W. Va., Tuesday afternoon, Mrs. Lettie Anthony, 23, wife of Peter Anthony, a miner, of Bayard, W. Va., is in jail in Oakland.

Claims Self-Defense

The woman says she acted in self-defense, that her father had been drinking heavily for six weeks and that Tuesday when she visited him he was about to leave the house, he said, to kill a man. When she remonstrated with him, she says, he declared, "I might as well kill you first, then go shoot your husband and I wish your mother was here so I could make a clean job of it." He was reaching for his pocket knife, she said, when she reached for the shotgun. He declared it could do him no harm as there was no shell in it. She aimed, however, and tore off the top of his head, his brains being scattered about.

Mrs. Anthony had visited her father first on Monday, returning Tuesday. She called at the house relative to renting it to another party. Mr. and Mrs. Moyer had not lived together for several years, and the property, being in Mrs. Moyer's name, was, by her own order, at the disposal of the children. An argument ensued which led up to the fatal shooting. It was stated that her mother, who lives in Punxsutawney, was coming to her assistance.

Knife Was Not Open

Another version of the tragedy is that Moyer told his daughter that he was going out to beat up a neighbor, a business man of Wilson. She advised him to stay in the house, saying that he was drunk and would get into trouble. Then, according to her story, he turned at the front door and started to reach for his knife as he advanced toward the kitchen. She was standing in the door leading from the kitchen into the hall and as he advanced she seized the shotgun from behind the door. As she took aim, her father told her to go ahead and shoot, she declares, saying there was no shell in the gun. She pulled the trigger and he fell dead within ten feet of her, the top of his head being blown off, only his face remaining. There was no witness.

Search of the dead man's clothing disclosed the pocket knife, but it was not open. It is the kind of a knife that the blade opens when a spring is pressed.

Mrs. Anthony gave herself up. She has not yet retained an attorney. Justice W. A. Gonder, Oakland, who visited the scene with the sheriff and State's attorney, said an inquest would not be necessary.

The Moyers have a small son who has been living with his sister, at Bayard. Mrs. Anthony has been married less than a year. She attended high school at Bayard for two years and was a member of the girls' basketbal team.

Practice sessions by members of the corps have been held during the past several months and a number of marches have been learned.

The benefit picture will be presented on both Monday and Tuesday evenings, and admission will be 15 and 50 cents. The four Marx brothers are featured in the talkie.

INVESTIGATING DEATH OF MAN AT WILSON STATION

Wife Says Michael Felda, 58, Found Dead in Bed, Died From Drinking Moonshine

FURTHER PROBE IS ASKED

Garrett county authorities are investigating the death of Michael Felda, a coal miner and farmer, who was found dead in bed Sunday night at his home near Altamont, ten miles from here. His wife, Mrs. Rosa Felda, said he died from alcoholism and that he had been drinking moonshine.

An inquest was held and the coroner's jury asked that a further investigation be made. Dr. H. W. McComas, county health officer, performed an autopsy and had the man's stomach sent to Baltimore for chemical analysis, to determine whether it contained traces of any poison other than that created by moonshine. Mrs. Felda's brother, F. Luther McRobie, was found dead in bed about eighteen months ago. The coroner's jury found that he died from acute alcoholism.

Card Party and Dance

The card party and dance on Friday, February 6, was one of the most enjoyable events held by the school this year.

The auditorium and library were decorated with valentines, hearts, etc. A red spot light flashed on the dance floor from the balcony added an artistic touch to the scene.

The Oakland Orchestra furnished the music for the entertainment.

The approximate amount cleared was seventy dollars. Ten dollars of this amount was donated to the library fund by the orchestra. This money will be used to purchase books and magazines for the school.

The school wishes to thank all those who furnished prizes and refreshments or in any way helped to make the party a success.

B. and O. Railroad to Award Two 4-H Scholarships

The Baltimore and Ohio railroad announces that it will award again this year two one-hundred dollar scholarships in Maryland to the farm boy and girl who most efficiently complete their project in 4-H agricultural club work during 1931.

A club member may compete by entering any type of club work recognized by the University of Maryland Agricultural extension service. The winners may use the scholarship at any recognized college or university in the country. The B. and O. has awarded 120 scholarships to date, ten of them being won by Maryland boys and girls, including Lorena Hardinger, of Cumberland.

Another Well is Productive

Another productive well for the city of Oakland was brought in last Friday by E. G. Jenkins, well driller, of Kingwood, W. Va., who has been busy drilling since he made his other successful attempt more than a month ago.

The new well is located about 700 or 800 yards north of the town spring on the old Bradley farm, and it will be possible to have the water flow by gravity to augment the spring supply, where it will be conveyed to the reservoir by pumps now in use. No additional machinery will be needed.

The supply seems to be as strong as the well recently discovered and one will be held in reserve for any future shortage. A test will be made within a few days. The new well is about 100 feet deep, according to members of the water committee of the Mayor and Town council.

SCOOP'S COLUMN

By SCOOP—HIMSELF

After waiting until Wednesday afternoon to write this stuff, and then have a murder come along to spoil the peaceful ways of the county, it is hard enough to concentrate, let alone trying to fill up a column, especially when Bennie Bounce and all the other rubber balls of the county deserted me this week and didn't send in any more poems, stories or suggestions.

In New York, the water situation is getting to be a worry for Mayor Jimmie Walker, Al Smith, and a few others up there. In Cumberland every appeal for the conservation of water ends up in 500,000 more gallons of acqua being used than the day previous, until Lake Gordon is a shadow of its former self.

While in Oakland, a new well has "come in" with a capacity as large as the one of a month or so ago, making the mountain top again a favorite spot.

That's one more reason why you ought to stay in Oakland—like it—boost it—and advertise it.

It has been just one month and 10 days since the first of the year, or the day for making New Year's resolutions, and Scoop has found that the hardest thing about good resolutions is making them good.

February is the month of birthdays of celebrated men—Lincoln, Washington, Scoop—I guess that's enough.

Tomorrow is Friday, the Thirteenth. All of which means that people will go blocks out of their way to dodge a black cat, to pass around a ladder; throw salt over their shoulder to stave off an approaching calamity; do nothing that would go against the signs of the almighty Almanac; kiss the Blarney stone if they got a chance; keep their rabbit's foot or nigger's toe suspended from their neck; get out of bed on the right side, and otherwise be a model.

People are sure of one commodity in the world which hasn't been deflated by the depression, and that is trouble, and they aren't going to take any extra chances.

But Saturday is a different story altogether. On Valentine's Day they are liable to get reckless and by sending out a little sentiment, commit themselves for life; or take big chances with their physical make-up and send out rather true remarks about individuals by means of the comic valentine. Betty Dawson has already received his.

Scoop suggested a Valentine social to the Amalgamated Society for the Prevention of Work, but the married members didn't seem to have much faith in Valentine.

While on the subject of socials, the Knights of Pythias are going to have a poverty shindig at Castle hall on February 20. A big celebration is being planned with Walter Dawson as massacre or ceremonies. Being a poverty party, and the fact that Scoop received an invitation, he is eligible to attend, and he promises to be there, with his ears and nose clean and his teeth in.

Looks like Mussolini was afraid to have the investigation about what General Smedley Butler said, go too far for fear they might find that it was the truth. Mussolini, in speaking about the famous Marine, probably calls him General "Smutty" Butler. What General Butler thinks of Mussolini, however, is nobody's business now.

"Color Blindness"

Color blindness properly so called is a matter of formation of the eye structures and cannot be modified by training or practice. It would be no more possible for a color-blind person to recognize colors than for a deaf person to recognize sounds. Fortunately, however, few people are totally color-blind, but many have weakened perception for one or more colors, most frequently red.

Besides true color-blindness we have temporary incapacity to distinguish color products by disease and occasioually by the use of certain drugs. In some diseases of the brain and spine the loss of color vision is an early and important symptom and probably occurs more frequently than is supposed in temporary disturbances of these important parts.

Many who are color-blind have been so for long periods without being conscious of the defect. It is very important that a defect which handicaps a person for certain positions in life be discovered early and it is therefore desirable that parents should test the color vision of their children from time to time. Not necessarily in any systematic way but by observing whether they can match colors correctly.

MR. HOOVER'S POSITION

Gentlemen who make it their business to play politics with prohibition are coming forward with comments upon the Wickersham report and upon President Hoover's message, said the Washington Post in a leading editorial published on Thursday of last week. Among others, the Post continues, Chairman Shouse of the Democratic national executive committee kindly interprets Mr. Hoover's thoughts—to Mr. Hoover's disadvantage, of course. Mr. Shouse in a rambling statement insists at one point that the President is bound to accept the commission's conclusions, while at another he suggests that the commission was intended to be subservient to the President. Take your choice.

Mr. Shouse is among the politicians who try to make the public believe that the President's objections to the proposal to empower Congress to regulate the liquor traffic stamp him as a petrified bone dry who insists that the eighteenth amendment and the Volstead act shall remain as they are, in perpetuity, without any effort to improve conditions. It is a silly attempt to mislead the public as to Mr. Hoover's position.

The President emphasized three matters in his message. He cited the commission's finding that enforcement is unsatisfactory, in spite of improvement in Federal administration of the prohibition law, and that it is imperatively necessary that citizens, the State and local government must discharge their several responsibilities if enforcement is to be successful. He approves of the recommendations for improvements in Federal administrative methods. Secondly, the President agrees with the commission in the conclusion that repeal of the eighteenth amendment is not a solution of the national problem, and he adds:

> I am in unity with the spirit of the report in seeking constructive steps to advance the national ideal of eradication of the social and economic and political evils of this traffic, to preserve the gains which have been made, and to eliminate the abuses which exist, at the same time facing with an open mind the difficulties which have arisen under this experiment.

Thirdly, Mr. Hoover specifically objected to the plan proposed for revision of the eighteenth amendment whereby Congress would be empowered to regulate or prohibit the liquor traffic. He stated that there were "serious objections" to this plan, but he made it plain that he kept his mind open to proposals for solving the national problem. The fact that he rejects the specific proposal to give Congress power to regulate or prohibit the liquor traffic makes it clear that he is seeking "constructive steps" that will lead to a solution of the problem.

What are the objections to the proposal to give Congres power to regulate or prohibit the liquor traffic? They are innumerable. The primary objection is, of course, that the United States under that plan would be in continual turmoil, both during political campaigns and during sessions of Congress. A national system adopted in one year might be torn down in the next. Congress could restore the saloon; it could make wet States dry and dry States wet; it could legalize distilleries and breweries and then, in response to a gust of popular passion, it could sweep away millions of dollars' worth of property without compensation; it could create an army of Federal police to harass the States and then abolish all Federal regulation of the liquor traffic. Political campaigns would be debauched and members of Congress would be chosen solely upon the liquor issue. The purchaser as well as the seller of liquor would be a felon or immune from punishment, according to the annual whim of Congress. The Nation's business and the affairs of government would be subordinated to the never-ending battle over the liquor issue.

Of all the proposed "solutions" of the liquor problem, the commission plan to throw the issue into the arena of national politics is the most objectionable. It is little wonder that Mr. Hoover, who maintains an open mind in considering all proposed solutions, should prefer present conditions to those which would prevail if the prohibition question should be the football of politics in Congress.

No solution of the prohibition problem has been presented by the Wickersham commission. Mr. Hoover does not pretend to offer a solution. He hopes a solution will be found. In the meantime he opposes foolish suggestions and gives notice that he will enforce the law with all the means at his disposal.

In this position the President is entitled to the support of the people of the United States.

HISTORY REPEATS ITSELF

"A cycle of delusive and bubble prosperity was followed by actual widespread calamity. It was a period of gloom and agony—no price for property or prduce—no sales but those of the sheriff or marshal—no purchaser at executive sales but creditors or some hoarder of money—no employment for industry—no demand for labor—no sale for the products of the farm—no sound of the hammer but that of the auctioneer. Distress, the universal cry of the people: relief, the universal demand thundering at the doors of all legislatures, State and Federal."

This is not, as it might seem, an extract from a recent speech on the economic conditions of 1931. It is an account of Thomas H. Benton of conditions existing in the United States when he entered the Senate from Missouri in 1919-20.

In his work, "Thirty Years Review," Senator Benton thus quotes from a speech by a colleague in the Senate in 1833, referring to economic conditions at that time:

"A whole nation in the midst of unparalleled prosperity and Acadian felicity has been suddenly struck into poverty and plunged into unutterable woe."

Woodrow Wilson, in his "History of the American People," thus describes the conditions prevailing in 1840:

"The country went staggering thru its season of bitter ruin. There had been nothing like it in the history of America. Utter collapse and despair came, soon or late, upon every sort of undertaking the year thru."

In the same work Woodrow Wilson writes:

"Widespread financial distress filled all the year 1857 with deep disquietude, now sharp and now touched with panic; now slow, dull lethargy, in which merchants and manufacturers and transportation companies and banks merely waited and did not hope."

Thus are described four industrial panics within forty years prior to the Civil War, each of them more general and disastrous than the present depression, which, severe as it is, has reduced the level of business and employment 20 per cent below the high water mark of 1929.

Those who attribute the present depression to the effects of mass production with resultant over-production, may with profit contemplate the fact that these greater and more frequent depressions of the ante-bellum period came while this country had progressed little beyond the handicraft stage in industry.

A variety of causes entered into each of these depressions, but it is recorded that in each case depression followed an era of speculation and inflation. The year of the stock market panic which has been followed by the present industrial depression, was marked by the greatest inflation of private credit this country has ever witnessed.

The fact that America recovered from all of these earlier depressions and passed on into a degree of prosperity and high standards of living for the masses undreamed of by our great-grandfathers ough to furnish some consolation even to those pessimists who are never so happy as when they are wallowing in gloom.

We are often told that these recurring depressions prove that there is something wrong with our economic system. There is, of course, something wrong with every man-made system, as there is with those who create it. The only perfect system is one that has never been tried. Once on trial it becomes subject to the limitations and weaknesses of human nature, and it no more works "perfectly" than does the human body or the automobile when abused. The task of keeping in perfect adjustment a vast system of production, distribution and consumption covering so vast and varied a nation as ours is not quite so easy as it looks to those who believe that ability to diagnose a disease proves the capacity to cure it. The remedy most often proposed is to surrender all property and liberty to the politicians. One must admire the child-like faith in the wisdom and virtue of politicians this indicates. What experience it is based on is not at this time visible to the naked eye. The best we can hope from them right now is that they will not make economic recovery more difficule by bankrupting the treasury through projects involving the indirect purchase of votes.

An Interesting Fact

MARYLAND CITIZENS AID WASHINGTON AND LAFAYETTE

The early ppart of 1781 was an anxious and critical time for the American colonies. It was during this period that Benedict Arnold, bitter foe of the American cause, sailed up the James River, seized Richmond and other points. Our soldiers were illy clad, underfed and had not been paid for months. The credit of our government was at a low ebb, both at home and abroad. But in these dark days, as well as in other days to follow, General Washington knew that Maryland could be cunted on to do her part and do it generously.

Early in the spring of 1781, Lafayette, that French patriot, was stationed in Maryland, at the head of the Elk, where with the aid of Major James McHenry, of Baltimore, Baltimore merchants were solicited to furnish much-needed food and supplies for his men. He was not disappointed. Congress at this time was powerless and it was only by relying on the generosity and patriotism of the citizens that the American army could be fed and clothed. No higher tribute could be paid to an army than that paid by Lafayette in a letter to his wife in which he said: "Human nature has its limits; no European army would suffer the tenth part of what the American suffer. It takes citizens to support hunger, nakedness, toil and the total want of pay, which constitute the condition of our soldiers."

It was while Lafayette was stationed in Maryland that he was entertained in Baltimore at a great ball. Some one asked him why he appeared so sad, and he replied that he could not help but think of his men who so badly needed clothes and supplies. This remark caused the ladies present to volunteer their services and the next day the assembly room was turned into a clothing manufactory.

For these and other acts of Maryland's citizenry Washington was duly grateful and took occasion to say to Governor Lee that "the supplies granted by the State are so liberal that they remove any apprehension of want,"—possibly for the first time that this condition existed.

We may well presume that it was because of these supplies on behalf of Maryland furnished the needy soldiers that Washington was enabled to make a junction with the French fleet and army in the Chesapeake and attack Cornwallis at Yorktown and that the allied armies were able to begin that great enveloping movement which was to prove fatal to British hopes in regaining the colonies.

MT. LAKE PARK

Monday morning as the snow was falling thick and fast we met Capt. Bush Hardesty on our way to the postoffice when he remarked that perhaps this was a "whipporwill snow." We replied that we hoped it was, although we had no idea whatever what he was talking about, not being entirely weather-wise. By judicious inquiry, however, we learned that when the voice of that silent and mysterious bird is heard in the land, the snows for the winter are over. Consequently, no one need be surprised to see us out on the front porch before sun-up with our head cocked on one side in an attitude of intent listening or watching the moon in its swift course across the sky, for we will be simply waiting for the voice of the whipporwill.

Inquiry fails to reveal any action on the part of the committee appointed at the recent meeting held at the Park in relation to the change in the form of government. We are advised that individual conferences have been held, at which various propositions have been discussed, but no official meeting has been held. There is a general feeling that for the sake of harmony and the good of the community some definite action should be taken and the controversy settled one way or the other, and for all time.

Street Supervisor Echard gave the streets in the main part of the Park their first massage for the year last week. Quite an improvement was noted.

Superintendent Frank E. Baker was in the Park a day or two recently, going from here to Annapolis, where he was joined by Dr. W. W. Davis and other Park Association friends at a conference with the Garrett county delegation in the State Legislature.

A valentine social will be held in the Aid Hall, Loch Lynn, on Friday evening, the 13th, at 7:45. A short program will be rendered by the Mountaineer Quartet, of Loch Lynn, and the Crellin Trio.

A near serious accident occurred on Savage Mountain, just west of Frostburg, a day or two ago, when the automobile driven by Rev. Jessee, in which he and his family were motoring east, suddenly skidded, turning completely 'round and rester against a roadside fence. While the occupants of the car suffered no injury, the car was somewhat damaged.

EARLE TO PLACE 100,000 TROUT IN STATE STREAMS

Will Be Held in State Hatchery Until They Are Grown

Several thousand legal-sized trout will be planted in the State hatchery at Fairlee, near Chestertown, according to Swepson Earle, State Conservation Commissioner, because of the heavy demand for anglers' licenses this year over the preceeding years, and at least 100,000 trout will be placed in streams throughout the State, the State Commission announces.

During the last year a total of 57,950 trout from 7 to 14 inches long were raised in State hatcheries and then liberated as game fish for the quarry of sportsmen. The minimum length, under the law, for trout to be taken from the water is seven inches, but the Commissioner has found, Mr. Earle asserts, that anglers frequently catch trout under the legal size.

Hold Till Grown

They are forced to throw the fish back in the water, but many of the fish die. So that the Commissioner has formed a policy of raising trout in the State hatcheries and then not liberating them until they attain sufficient size.

The hatcheries, the Commissioner further states, are being enlarged to meet the demands of anglers and because of the drought, which has made streams low, the 1931 planting season will not begin until late in the spring. The creel limit of 60 trout is placed upon each fisherman during the open season.

Liberate Pike

Last year several thousand pike and other fish were liberated from the hatchery to streams in Eastern Shore and other Maryland counties and the hatchery near Chestertown is considered to be one of the finest in the State, an old mill dam having been originally used as the base for the construction of a modern breeding place for fish.

Concrete floors and walls have been built and a permanent overseer placed in charge of the hatchery.

Mr. H. H. Rice, poultry specialist, University of Maryland extension service, will be in Oakland on February 26 and 27, to interview the poultry raisers and discuss their problems. Interested farmers are asked to get in touch with John H. Carter, county agent, for particulars.

Dr. T. D. Richards, of Oakland, is the possessor of a clock, the case of which is of unique design. The piece stands about eighteen inches high, of black walnut and on it is carved various signs and symbols of the Masonic fraternity, showing skilled workmanship in its every detail. The clock is very old and is highly prized by its owner. For a time it has been on exhibition in a show window at the Shaffer jewelry store on Alder street.

In honor of Mrs. J. H. Bowman, who is spending the winter at Clermont, Florida, a quilting party was recently given, the account of which appeared in the Clermont Press, as follows: "A delightful all-day party honoring Grandma Bowman was enjoyed by seven of her friends at the home of Mrs. A. G. Grose, Monday, January 19. At one o'clock a delicious and bountiful luncheon was served, after which we gathered around Grandma to see her surprise when she opened her packages. Mrs. Bowman is making a quilt for her little granddaughter and has worried some for fear the quilt scraps would not hold out until it was finished. Mrs. Grose asked each guest to bring some pieces for Grandma's quilt. We each one carried her a generous supply. Now she is happy and busy and the quilt she is making is beautiful."

MAY NEED MORE AID FOR SCHOOLS OF MARYLAND

Five Additional Counties Possible Sharers In State Equalization Fund

FOURTEEN NOW ON LIST

If the minimum requirement for county schools is raised in the next two years, nineteen counties will need help through the State equalization fund, according to A. S. Cook, State Superintendent of Schools.

At present fourteen counties are receiving equalization funds to meet the requirement of the State school law. The fund is used with general funds of the State and receipts from the public school tax of 10.58 cents on each $100 of assessable property to supplement the amount paid by each county on its schools.

City's Share Cited

Baltimore city and Baltimore county were the only units which paid more into the State Treasury in 1930 than was returned in State aid for schools, it was said.

The Maryland minimum requirement is based on an average county tax rate of 67 cents on each $100 of assessable property. The State equalization plan has made it possible for every county to carry the minimum program, Mr. Cook said. State aid makes it possible for the financially poorer counties to carry the program on this basis with a reasonable county tax rate for schools, he added.

$3,688,147 Given Last Year

State aid in 1930 amounted to $3,688,147. Approximately two-thirds of this is derived from direct State public school taxes, and the remaining third comes from general funds in the State Treasury, it was said.

The general funds are obtained from such sources as franchise taxes, bonus taxes, gross receipts taxes, licenses, interest and penalties collected on deferred payment of taxes.

KEEP CHILDREN WELL BY REGULAR DOCTOR VISITS

Nearly 6,200 Children Under School Age Examined Last Year

The importance of keeping the well baby well through regular visits to the family doctor and of continuing such supervision for the baby's older sisters and brothers, was impressed upon mothers and fathers, throughout the counties, in 1930, in connection with the child health conferences, held under the joint auspices of the local health officers and the Bureau of Child Hygiene of the State Department of Health.

Nearly 6,200 children, under school age, representing over 4,000 families were brought to the conferences for a physical examination. Whenever conditions requiring correction were observed, the parents were instructed to take the child to their family physician. After each examination, a record of the findings was sent to the family physician of each child in attendance.

The children ranged in age from babies a few weeks old to the youngsters who were getting ready to start in to school. Of the total, 4,775 were white and 1,394, colored. Of the white children, 1,777 were under five and 2,998 were from five to seven years old. In the colored groups, 907 were under five and 487 were from five to seven years old.

The report of the conferences prepared by the Chief of the Bureau of Child Hygiene, Dr. J. H. M. Knox, Jr., shows that 1,365, or 22 percent were free from handicapping conditions. Twenty-five percent—1,544—gave evidence of faulty nutrition; 29 percent had unfavorable conditions of the nose and throat—1,787 had enlarged or infected tonsils; 375 had adenoids and 241 were mouth breathers. Forty percent—2,499—had decayed teeth or were otherwise in need of dental attention. Unfavorable conditions of the heart were observed in 125, and of the lungs in 99. Defective vision was recorded for 110; defective hearing for 86, and 50 were found to be mentally retarded. Of the 3,485 eligible for admission to school, nearly half—1,737—had not been vaccinated against smallpox.

The total number of conferences held was 398, and in connection with them 264 places were visited. Allegany county led, with 960 children in attendance at the conferences, which were held at 22 places. Harford county came next, with a total of 639 children examined, at 57 conferences held at 37 places. Cecil was third with 437 children examined at 27 conferences at 20 places.

Home Project for Students Explained by Instructor

An explanation of the Home Project, carried on by girls of home economics classes in the high schools of the county, was made by Miss Eva Falkenstein, home economics instructor of Oakland High school, linking it up with the aim of vocational education in the state.

"One aim of vocational education in home economics," Miss Falkenstein said, "is to train girls and women for the vocation of home making. One of the fundamental principles of vocational education requires that the training, to be efficient, shall be conducted under conditions that duplicate as nearly as possible those under which the vocation itself must later be carried on.

"Since the school can hardly provide conditions that are found in a normal home, it becomes necessary to supplement the facilities afforded by the home, by providing for the participation of students in normal home making activities in the environment of their own homes. The work thus carried on in the home to supplement the work of the school is known as the home project. Better still it is a large, interesting problem requiring planning, managing, keeping of records, besides actually doing the work.

"The home project is not only a valuable means for training in home making responsibilities under normal home conditions not afforded by the school, but it is also a valuable means of promoting desirable relationships between the home, girl and school.

"The most worth-while projects are the every day activities that the girl would or should normally be doing—preparing supper for her family, caring for her bedroom and keeping it attractive, doing the family mending and marketing—all may be made so attractive as to enlist the pupil's wholehearted interest.

"We are attempting this year to have some projects carried on in which not only our school but the State Department will be interested. Miss Amery, the state supervisor, sent us a letter asking for these project report books so that she might send them with others in the State to a Regional Conference to be held in March, so we are depending upon the mothers of our girls to help us carry on some purposeful projects.

Mr. Geo. Williams was a victim of constipation

Mr. Geo. Williams

"For four years I suffered from a sour stomach and constipation," said Mr. George A. Williams, 26 Orchard St., Cumberland, Md. to one of the Dreco Experts. My tongue was coated and I always felt tired out.

"My only relief came when I tried the Dreco treatment. Since I've taken the treatment I have almost forgotten what it is to feel badly.

"Dreco Hi-speed tablets regulated my bowels and did away with that tired worn out feeling."

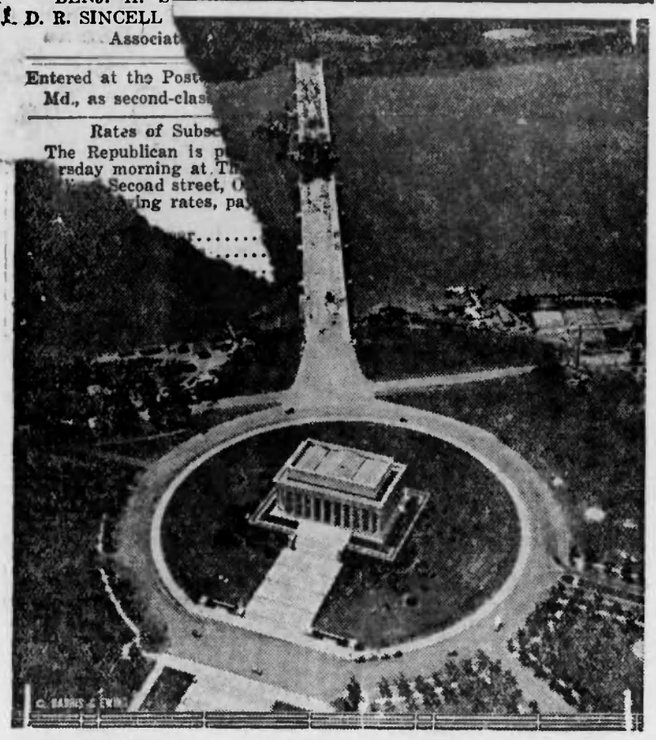
MEMORIAL, FROM THE AIR



Remarkable aerial view of the Lincoln memorial and the new memorial bridge which when completed will span the Potomac from the Lincoln memorial to Arlington.

To Ann Rutledge

{Beloved of Lincoln}

FROM Sand Ridge farm to Concord burial ground,
Along with thee, that fateful August day,
They also took thy lover's soul away—
With thee to lay beneath the somber mound.
He hardly heard the dull, depressing sound
Caused by the impact of the clods of clay
Upon thy bier; nor could he cry or pray,
Though all he'd lost to which his life was bound.

HE SAW thee (and the picture crushed his heart)
Alone out there in rain and storm and dark;
Thy cornsilk hair, thy mouth, thy bright blue eyes,
That in his heart to a flame had fanned the spark!
Thy memory, sweet Ann, we love and prize,
Fate ne'er called one to play a sadder part.

—A Nicoll Weeber.

True Type of Rugged Men of Frontier

Lincoln was a patriot given the couatry by the frontier. Americans of today might have trouble in understaadling how aad from what haads or conditions the froatier families received the torch of patriotism which they passed on burning from carrier to carrier, from generation to genernlion. Here was something finer than noblesse oblige, fine as that is. These frontiersmen were not responding to the aristocrat's principle thnt he wbo has the most from the laad shall return to it the greatest service, that he shall be the first into the breach, the last to leave a field and the first to nttempt its recovery.

That aobility is one of compensations, of rewards and merits, of privilege honorably pnid for. The great American ploneer families dld aot have the best of it. Much of the time they had the worst of it. They seemed to get little from their country. It could have been to them as much of aa abstraction as it was a reality. It frequently wns indifferent to them and just as oftea it was obstructive and hostile.

Sometimes it failed to protect them and sometimes it restrained them from defeadlng themselves. At times the frontier was restless and even rebellious whea government seemed hostile or careless, but it gave the country Jackson, a great Unionist, nnd Lincoln, a greater. Americans la favored circumstances now and earlier have been found pallid in their allegiance to the country which gave them opportunity, but at aeed the frontier has been staach.

Washington's devotion to his country is heightened by the fact that his natural inclination toward established order and the allegiance inherent la his aristocratic position could very well have attached him to the home government. He gave his complete loyalty to n new concept called his couatry, putting nt hazard all the ndvantages a high plnce in life coatained for him.

Lincoln in his youth represented the frontier hopelessness of a familly which hnd receded generation by generation from competence to what nny be regarded ns incompetence, from opportunity to the lick of it, from good land to poor. Various generations of the family had found themselves progressively less capable of getting much from the country and found it offering less and less to them. Then from the retrogressing stock the great Unionist came when he wns most needed. He was a humanitarian. He hated slavery. He wnnted to improve the common lot, but his inspiration wns not found in any of these qualities or in like emotions and sentiments. They were all subordinated to his devotion to the country. He never considered satisfying his altruistic desires at the expense of the nation. There were many Americans who would have done so. He had much trouble with them.

Lincoln accepted wnr not to free the slaves but to save the nation. He freed the slaves by tbe emancipation proclamntion, aot to nbolish slavery but to preserve the Union. He answered the hostile aristocracy of Great Britain by his appeal to the British commoner. It was the strategy of the statesman and not the declaration of the humaaitarian. The South hnd misunderstood him, thinking that he would nullify the Coastitutlon and destroy the natlon to nttack slavery. Abolitionists in the North tried to force him to extreme measures. Paeifists tried to make him compromise. Traitors tried to destroy confidence in him and to persuade the people of the hopelessaess of his purpose. Defeatists, wbo were timid but aot disloyal, urged the abaadoament of the costly effort to preserve the Ualon.

There was oaly one consideration which prevailed in Lincoln's intention aad that was the inviolability of his couatry. It was impregnnble aad could not be modified by pressure at home or from abroad. It was proof against foreign dissension and disloyalty at home. It resisted altruists, weaklings and traitors.

Lincoln was a aationalist. His hamanitarianism wns subordinated to his country's good.—Chicago Tribune.

long before the Civil war. The lower floor now sells apparatus to home brewers. The Ford theater, scene of the shooting of Lincoln, is not so far awny. The latter is now used as nn army recruiting station and storehouse for government records.

Favored Woman Suffrage

As early ns 1836 Lincoln made a speech in which he said: "I go for all sharing the privilege of the government who assist in bearing its burdens. Consequently, I go for admitting all whites to the rights of suffrage who pay taxes or bear arms, by no means excluding females."

The First White Men On The Chesapeake

Spaniards, under Menendez, Preceded The English By About Fifty Years

By Harold Randall Manakee, in the Baltimore Sunday Sun

Long before Leonard Calvert led a band of colonists to St. Mary's, long before Capt. John Smith headed his party of explorers into the "wilderness north of Virginia", even before Lord Baltimore first saw light of day in England, strange ships manned by swarthy, bearded men knew the waters of the Chesapeake Bay. From the mastheads of these ships fluttered the standard of Spain—a sandard which at that time, from the viewpoints of wealth, naval supremacy and extent of land controlled, came near to being the banner of the world. Indeed, it was the sole flag raised above any permanent settlements in all of the New World.

Spain was at the height of her glory in Europe and in the Americas. The day of the daring Sir Francis Drake and his fellow English sea fighters had not yet dawned; the Spaniard's benrd was still unsinged and it flourished to full growth, spreading itself haughtily over the riches of the New World. It was during this "golden age" that Spain made use of the Chesapeake and even endeavored to plant on its shores a colony. But the chain of events leading up to those attempts are long and stranger than fiction.

After the so-called discovery of America by Columbus, such Spanish adventurers as Vespucius, Cortez, and Pizarro had vigorously explored the West Indies, Mexico, Centrnl and South America. Here they found much wealth, which by boldness and cruelty and treachery they succeeded in wresting from the natives. For the moment they were satisfied and more northerly America was untouched; for from the mines, storehouses, palaces and temples of the Incas and the Aztecs poured gold silver and precious stones enough to hold all their attention. Great fleets of treasure-laden galleons left Mexico and Central America astern, cut across the gulf and up the east coast of North America to aboat the point we now know as Cape Hatteras. Here they turned prows seaward, spread all sail and struck across the Atlantic, almost due east, for Spain.

Much of the supervision and protection of these fleets fell to the resourceful and energetic Pedro Menendez, Governor of Florida, which had been discovered in 1512 by Ponce de Leon in his search for the mythical Fountain of Youth. This Menendez was the scourge of French pirates in both hemispheres, and Spain's greatest naval commander in Spain's bravest days. Not without merit had he been appointed to this position of trust. So much did Spain rely on him that, when Philip I sailed to England for the hand of Queen Mary, Menendez commanded the vessel which carried him. On one occasion, when the Spanish King, after waging war against France, found himself stranded in Flanders, Menendez crossed all of France in disguise, safely reached his native country, equipped a battle fleet and sailed to his Majesty's relief before his absence was even noticed! Years later, at the forming of the Invincible Armada, death alone—perhaps fortunately for him when we remember the fate of that expedition—was to prevent his being its fleet commander. Spain then, for good reason, had the highest respect for his ability.

Curioulsy enough the connection of this dashing Menendez with Florida was purely accidental. While in command of a treasure fleet in 1651 one of his ships unaccountably disappeared. Sad enough blow to his prestige was this calamity, but misfortune on misfortune, his own son commanded the missing vessell Sadly the stern old commander continued on to Spain, for the riches under his protection could not be risked in which might prove to be fruitless searching. Once his commission was discharged, however, he lost no time in fitting a searching party at his own expense, since his sovereign would have no part in the expedition.

Yet Menendez did not gain Florida for Spain without strife and bloodshed; for just as he was about to sail in quest of his son he received orders to root out from Florida a colony of French Lutherans under one Captain Ribault. This he proceeded to do and, as was his wont, he made a thorough job of it. Immediately upon arriving, he attacked the French fleet off their Fort Caroline with such skill that in a few hours he had victory in his grasp. Then to the amazement of the French he sailed away. Menendez, old sea dog that he wns, had noticed gathering clouds and he made for the nearest shelter while a terrific scorm made short work of the remaining French ships.

Then began the task of rounding up prisoners from the wrecks and the Huguenot settlement at Fort Cnroline. Some two hundred of the half-naked, starving wretches were lined up. Then, according to the French, the Spaniards played a game of seeing who of them "could strike the best blow with an ax, halberd or sword", so that within half an hour the helpless prisoners had all been murdered in cold blood.

It is interesting to give, as well as the French version, an account of the Spanish chaplain, present at the scene. It is but little more humane.

Seeing that all were Lutherans, his lordship took the resolution of condemning them all to death; but as I was a priest, and as I had the bowels of a man, I prnyed him to grant me one favour, that of not putting to death those whom we should find to be Christians. He granted it to me. I made some examinations. I found of them ten or twelve whom we carried away; all others were executed because they were Lutherans, enemies of our Holy Catholic faith. All this took place on Saturday, the day of Saint Michael, the 22nd of September, 1565. A hundred and twelve Lutherans (which is a small estimate) were then put to death, without counting fourteen or fifteen prisoners.

Over them Menendez hung this cheerful sign: "I do this not as unto Frenchmen, but as unto Lutherans."

Such was Christianity in the sixteenth century, when fanaticism was too often carried to astounding extremes. Menendez's hatred was the stronger since he suspected the French of having killed his son.

But the honor of France was not to suffer this blow without some retaliation. In 1568 one Chevalier de Courge, inspired by a pamphlet entitled "Supplication of the Widows and Children of Those Who Had Been Massacred in Florida," outfitted, at his own expense, a vengeance-seeking expedition. After arriving he enlisted the aid of the savages, recaptured Fort Caroline and, on the very spot of the previous slaughter, he hanged his Spanish prisoners and showed his delicate gift for repartee by placing there a sign with this inscription: "I do this not as unto Spaniards, nor as unto mariners, but as unto traitors, robbers, and murderers." Then the French, not being bent on colonization so far south, sailed away and left Menendez in undisturbed possession of the land. There Spain stayed until Andrew Jackson's day.

Out of all this bloody background emerged the first attempt at establishing a colony in the country about the Chesapeake whose shores, years later, were to seek to give shelter to all regardless of religion.

As Governor of Florida, which he was now made, Menendez readily saw the advisability of establishing a miniature naval base somewhere further north than his garrison at St. Augustine, for the purpose of better protecting the slowly moving treasure ships on their course. If America's "cold" motherly wilderness could not produce riches, which was Spain's ingenuous idea in that day, they at least could help guard Spain's wealth obtained elsewhere.

His first step in this direction was the erection of a fortification at Santa Elena, now Port Royal, in South Carolina. Yet he was not satisfied with this situation; it was to be only a step toward the establishment of a colony farther north. The real objective wns a great bay of which he had heard—possibly visited—where ships sometimes put in to make repairs, or to seek shelter from the furious storms off Hatteras. That bay we know today as the Chesapeake.

Just who first made this use of the bay is not known: nor is how, or when, it received its various names recorded in history. Sufficient to say, that they all give the impression of its being considered a haven of shelter. One map, attributed to some unknown geographer of about 1540, shows it as Madre des Aquas (Mother of Waters); a later one names it the Bay de Saint Maria (strange harbinger of the first Calvert settlement, St. Mary's), and another, some forty years after, calls it the Chesepioco Sinus. This last map alone indicates some familiarity with the region, for the name was in all probability taken from the Chesepian Indians, who lived near the bay country. Yet we have much more definite information on which to base the assertion that the Spaniards knew and made use of the Chesapeake.

speak of two great rivers in the bay; one at its head (the Susquehanna), the other in the lower western shore (the Potomac). Unfortunately, they give no information as to early exploring parties. They do, though, give interesting records of missionary expeditions to the bay, for Menedez was convicted that conversion of the natives to Christianity would establish friendly relations which would be valuable in his plans of occupation and settlement.

Just how many voyages were made to the bay previous to this time probably will never be known, but it is certain that perhaps some twenty years before 1566, a Spanish ship, bearing out to sea through the capes, carried with it the brother of an Indian chieftain—whom some Domincan fathers had persuaded to go to Mexico. The Indian lad was duly instructed in the Christian faith and solemnly baptized in the Cathedral of Mexico. He was given the name of Don Luis de Velaseo, after the viceroy of the province who had taken great interest in him. Great things were expected from this Indian youth; yet he was destincd to play havoc with Menendez's plans, as will be shown.

The more that the Governor thought of the Bay of Santa Maria the more intercsted he became. It had its attractiveness as a naval base for Spain. It had, he discovered, apparently endless deposits of oysters which might bear pearls. And finally, he began to hope that thorough exploration of its rivers might reveal a way through the eontinent to China. This idea, strange as it may seem to us, was not uncommon in these days, for almost every geographer and map maker of the time labored under the delusion that the Pacific spread eastward almost as far as the Appalachian Mountains and many a mariner went to Davy Jones' locker searching for the "Northeast Passage" to the Orient. That brought Henry Hudson here.

In 1566 Menendez dispatched to the bay a vessel carrying thirty soldiers and two Domincan fathers, with Don Luis as their guide. This expedition was to be the first serious attempt at an entering wedge, but it met with ignominious failure. The two missionaries, previously stationed in Peru and accustomed to the easy life there, where the Incas had been enslaved by the eonquerors, had no fancy for the laborious tasks which confronted them in the unknown Chesapeake country. Following some hurried plotting, they incited a mutiny among the crew, and even before it neared the bay the ship's course was set for Spain. Once there, they related how one raging gale after another had beaten them from the bay's entrance and had blown them off their course far into the Atlantic! Menendez waited a time for word of his party, and then formed a second expedition of one missionary and ten associates. They passed into oblivion—lost at sea or killed by the Indians.

However, the Governor was a determined, forceful man. He was not in the least daunted by the failure of the first two expeditions, and he was now fortified by royal approval of his plans obtained on a visit to Spain, where, perhaps not to his surprise, he found Don Luis. Accordingly, in 1570 he sent out still another mission, one whieh was to meet with some success. Two Jesuits, Father Segura and Father Quiros, five younger members of the society and four Indian boys as aides for temporary service made up this party. Don Luis had returned from Spain with Menendez and once again he was to act as gulde. Because of his presence and influence no soldiers were thought neeessary, and, besides, the including of armed men might arouse undue hostility among the red men. Not for an instant did any suspicion of treachery enter the whites' minds, for Don Luis had lived some thirty years as a devout Christian.

They left from Santa Elena and beat their way up the coast to the bay's entrance, from which point all definite knowledge of their course is lost. The Historical Magazine of 1859 states that "they probably went toward the head of the bay", and tradition says they went up the Rappahannock. Despite the fact that direction and distance were ignored, a careful record was kept of even the trivial incidents. They reached their destination only after sailing for a "considerable distance" and then by laborlously marching over six miles of rough country, packing with them their lean supplies and their secred utensils.

The missionaries, unlike Capt. John Smith, whose explorations eame nearly four decades later, were not impressed with the land. Just come from Florida, a land of comfort and abundance, they found here a country devastated by six years of famine and inhabited only by starving remnants of once flourishing tribes. There was no fruit, little game, and no maize. Even the usual scanty clothing was a minus puantity. Still, the Indians held Don Luis as one returned from heaven and, because they had returned with him, the Spaniards were offered the cream of the native's poor best.

The approach of winter was reason enough for leaving, but when the party remembered the two earlier failures and the interest of Menendez in the present mission's success, they eourageously decided to remain despite the hardships and low rations that conditions promised. With the returning ship eaptain they sent a letter announcing their determination and asking relief as soon as the winter was over.

Father Segura was the backbone of the party. He was chief laborer as well as leader. He cheered flagging spirits and set example for his companions by attempting to master the Indians' language. He urged preparation for the coming winter and went with the others to gather the acorns, chestnuts and chinquapins which were to be their chief subsistence. Aided by the others, he worked on the construction of a rude log cabin, at one end of which their altar was set up and at the other their living quarters laid out. Then the first service was held. Wonder and awe as the mystery and ceremony spread among the Indians. But it was not to have a lasting effect.

For a time Don Luis remind with the whites and was very helpful as interpreter and teacher; but savage blood ran in his veins and about him was the forest life which was his heritage. The eall was too strong. One day in the midst of winter he left "to visit his brother chief in a nearby village." The missionaries waited in vain for his return. As the days lengthened into weeks the whites beeame more than anxious; they were admittedly worried. As their protector he was especially missed. Several times the brothers went to him pleading a reconsidcration of his action, but without success; worse, they reported a growing unfriendliness among the Indians.

Finally, though, the winter wore through. About the time the relief ship was expected Father Quiros, with two companions, determined on a last effort to win back Don Luis' friendship. They made the day-and-a-half journey to the neighboring village only to have their questions answered evasively and insolently. The three men bowed with dignity and, well aware of their peril, turned and walked away. As their backs were turned a shower of arrows whirred through the air.

Four days later Segura and his party were interrupted at their prayers by shouts from without their cabin. Don Luis appeared wearing the eassock of Father Quiros, and with him a band of red men. With what he probably eonsidered great deception the Indian demanded of the whites their axes and knives "to cut wood." His ruse was easily perceived, of course, yet diplomacy promised better than futile resistanee, and the party complied. This was the closing scene. The entire party was massaered save for one boy, befriended by a younger brother of Luis. From his story most of the reeords were later eompiled. It is said that Don Luis buried his victims under the altar of their cabin. This harly seems in keeping with Indian traditions, and it is more probable that their bodies were subjected to all the indignities that savage minds devise.

The authorities of Santa Elena, meanwhile, seemed indifferent to the fate of the band. Under the pretext that no pilot could be found, action in support of the little eolony was delayed until late in the following spring, when a relief party managed to reach the place where Segura had landed. They did not attempt to go ashore, even though in the distance they could see men attired in the ministers' garbs, toward whom Don Luis pointed as he stood at the water's edge telling of the loving care which had been given the priests throughout the hard winter. The relief party knew, of course, that the missionaries would have eagerly and joyously approached the boats. The trick was too thin. So, employing counter-tricks of their own, the whites managed to selze two Indians, and drag them aboard, and then retreated to Santa Elena.

Menendez, upon hearing the report, was furious. Never before had the red men gotten the advantage of him. Promptly he set out for the Chesapeake shore, where he landed a strong force fully armed. The one boy who had escaped the slaughter was found, questioned, and by one way or another induced to point out those natives who had taken part in the massacre. Eight of them were swung at the flagship's yardarm in what Menendez termed "good old sailor fashion"; but Don Luis and his brother chieftain had escaped to the mountains. Owing to the press of more urgent affairs, the frustrated Menendez returned to Florida. Yet the Governor still brimmed enterprise and optimism. These setbacks were only temporary delays to his wise plan to control the whole coast for Spain before other nations should win that advantage. In 1573 he ordered his nephew, a ehip off the old block, by name Pedro Marquez, to explore the bay. Part of his report is as follows:

The Bay and Port of Santa Maria is three leagues wide and is entered toward the northwest. In this bay are many rivers and harbors on both sides, in which vessels may anchor. Within its entrance, on the south, the depth is from nine to thirteen fathroms and on the north side from five to seven fathoms. In the channel there are from nine to thirteen fathroms; in the bay, fifteen, ten and six; and in some placcs the bottom cannot be reached with the lead.

Such painstaking soundings argue well that the thought of colonization had not been dismissed. That the Spanish vessels had not ignored the bay in the intervening time is shown by frequent referenee to it throughout Marquez's report as "the Bay and Port of Santa Maria." Further evidence that the Spaniards were known in the region is seen when we remember that the very mention of them by Capt. Henry Fleete at the time of St. Mary's settlement eaused almost a panic among the Indians. And these Indians, the Yaocomicos, had been driven from farther north by their enemies, the Susquehannoeks.

There is also in the Historical Magazine a copy of one of Menendez's lengthy letters to his King. In it he relates of having recently sent an expedition to the thirty-ninth parallel, past the Bay of Santa Maria. (The thirty-ninth parallel cuts the mouth of the Delawarc.) He also tells, strangely enough, of trouble with an English settlement on one of the islands off Florida. Probably the latter was nothing more than a temporary pirate stronghold.

As has been said before, the exact location of Don Luis' village is not known. One Virginian history claims that the party under Segura ascended the Potomac and marched overland to the Rappahannock, and encyclopedias follow this tradition. Yet the assertion is based on little fact. The Historical Magazine article referred to was prepared with the Jesuit records at hand, which in turn were copies of Menendez's official reports, so its deduction that the party sailed toward the head of the bay is eoneeivably more eorreet. In those days of long voyages, a "considerable distance" would hardly have meant a trip of forty or fifty miles up the Potomac.

Wherever the first white man's cabin in this section was built, it is eertain, by sueh records as we now possess, the Spanish adventurers, or missionaries, were the first Europeans to sail the Chesapeake. Certainly the common belief that English mariners of Raleigh's day discovered the bay is based on complete ignorance of the Spanish cruises and the ill-fated colony.

There is other meager information indicating that Spanish vessels used the bay for shelter until as late as 1588. On the heels of Menendez's death eame the disaster to the "Invincible Armada" and the beginning of Spain's rapid decline on land and sea. There was then neither means nor need to earry out the dead Governor's plans, for England and France soon reigned in North Amerlea, and eventually Spain had no treasure fleet to protect.

At Washington, the Navy Department announced Monday it had abandoned plans for a eourt martial of Maj. Gen. Smedley D. Butler and had reprimanded him instead.

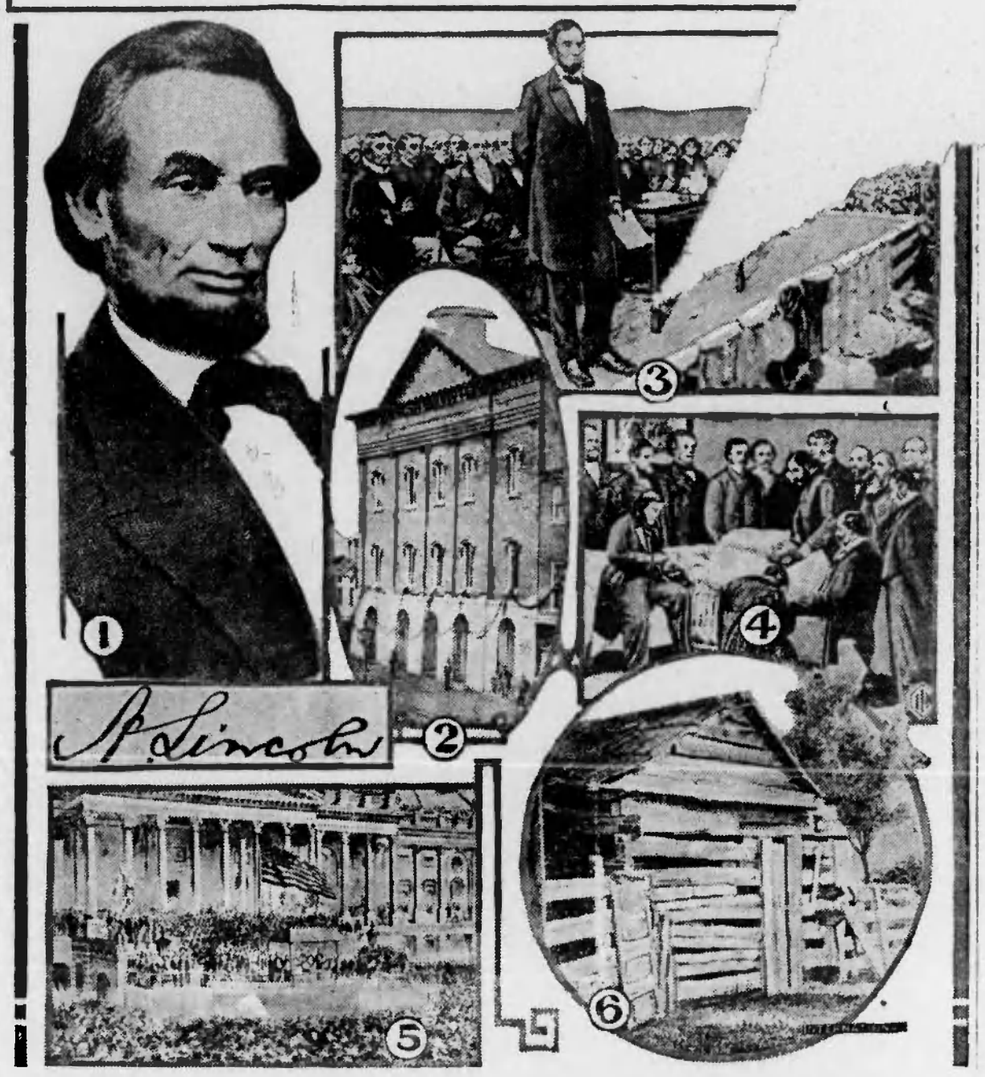
EVENTS IN THE LIFE OF THE UNTUTORED FARM BOY, FROM A KENTUCKY LOG CABIN TO THE WH



(1) Abraham Lincoln, as he appeared at the height of his career. (2) Ford's theater, at Washington, where Lincoln was shot. (3) Delivering the immortal Gettysburg address. (4) When Lincoln "passed into the ages." (5) Lincoln's inauguration in 1861. (6) Cabin in which Lincoln was born (from an old photograph).

Humble Cabin Was Lincoln's Home College

Modern universities cover many acres of land, boast towering structnres valued at millions and employ a small army of instructors.

Yet, in the crude little one-room log hut at Salem, Ill., now preserved as one of America's shrines to the memory of Abraham Liacola, we may look upon the now world-famous "fire-lit home college" of a century ago, Earle W. Gays writes, in the Philadelphia Ledger.

Here in this Illinois cabin was born that mastery of English that later thrilled a nation into action and contributed nobly to our literature.

The Henry Onsott eabin is well preserved, and nearby at hand is the famous Rutledge eabin, wherein resided the family with whom young Liacoln boarded for five years, between 1832 and 1837, and where he became the lover of beautiful Ann Rutledge.

Thea, at the left of the hill, we may see the old McNamer store, a "leading mercantile establishment" back in 1833. The right room was used by the firm of Berry and Lincola, grocers and geaeral merchants, and here Abe told some of those famous yarns.

Although these structures in "Old Salem," rebuilt to become New Salem, may appear as barnlike buildings, all are in a good state of preservation. They rise from historic ground. These "clearings" were continually the scene of Indian warfare, and many a modern structure would soon fall before the terrible onslaughts these cabins withstood.

Inn Community Center.

The Rutledge log cabin, for example, was superior to the average American home of the pioneer settlements of the Middle West of a century ago. Besides providing a eomfortable habitation for the large family, it became a popular center and inn to those who followed the wilderness trail. Beside its hospitable fireplace were entertained many famous trail-blazers, whose names are now inscribed in bold letters in the story of the "winning of the West." Under Lincoln's youthful humor with Ann's maidenly calmness and sweetness, it was the community center of many an evening of pioneer entertainment.

Nearly a century later, when lovers of Lincoln abandoned community going to ruin, though no attention had been given to the old structures for half a century, save by passing tramps, who sought shelter under the leaky roofs, the cabins were found in a fair state of preservation.

So much so that the committee found it possible to rebuild the structures, a shrine to the memory of Lincoln and Salem. Decayed logs have been replaced, the roofs patched, the grass cut in the front yard, so that present and future generations may look upon the scene as young Lincoln saw it.

Town of Salem.

Beside the Rutledge cabin there is the Onsott cabin, where Lincoln toiled in Henry Onsott's cooper shop by day and saved plentiful heaps of shavings to burn in the fireplace at night. Serving both as a place of industry and a home, and substantially constructed, this eabin was found in a good state, even the crude stone ehimney and fireplace standing.

The location of "New Old Salem," to which a multitude of modern tourists now wend their way each year, is at a point where the Sangamon river, winding its way from the southeast, turns sharply westward in its course, and, striking a high bluff, turns abruptly north. The high bluff extends north and south for about a third of a mile, with a ridge exteading westward from a center, giving the impression of the letter "T." On either side of the bluff is a small brook that empties into the Sangamon. On this location John Cameron and James Rutledge in 1828 and 1829 had R. S. Harrison lay out the town of New Salem.

Cameron from Georgia and Rutledge from South Carolina were millwrights. They threw a dam across the Saagamon and settlers soon began to arrive from Kentucky, Georgia and the Carolinas. During February, 1830, when Lincoln was twenty-one, his father, Thomas; his stepmother, and the family of Dennis Hanks settled on the north fork of the Sangamon, some ten miles sonthwest of Decatur, Ill.

Where Lincoln Studied.

Lincoln's arrival in New Salem was about August, 1831, and he boarded at the Rutledge Inn. During the years before he went to Springfield he worked as grocer's clerk and in the Onsott cooper shop, where he studied at night by the light of the fireplace, and at various odd jobs as surveyor.

It was here that Lincoln gained his reputation for wrestling, or "rassling," as he would have called it then. Wrestling matches were to the young men of the West what football, baseball and other sports are to the youth of today. The clerk in that country store became the undisputed champion in that part of Illinois.

It was from New Salem that Lincola enlisted in the Black Hawk war and came back something of a hero. Then, after a little electioneering for the only elective office which he ever failed to win, he settled down to storekeeping with "an idle fellow named Berry" and soon obtained the undisputed control of the trade of the village.

About the time he left New Salem for Springfield the town of Petersburg was planned and the entire village of New Salem—residents, homes and stores—was moved to Petersburg, and New Salem again was back as "farming ground." The town had gone, but the Lincoln associations remained.

Reconstruction Well Done.

In recent years the "Old Salem Lincoln league" has been formed at Petersburg for rebuilding and re-establishing Old Salem, which will be known as "New Old Salem." Some of the original log buildings, which had been moved from New Salem to Petersburg, have been returned to New Old Salem and again placed on the original sites. The first building restored was the Onsott cooper shop. Other log homes and stores have been rebuilt upon the old locations and the buildings are in every respect to duplicate the originals of Lincoln's day. Old-timers who have visited the scene and who recall the region from stories related by fathers and grandfathers, when New Salem was a thriving center, testify to the fidelity of the reconstruction.

As the visitor passes along "Main Street" markers are seen telling to whom the homes and stores belonged. The association has also built of native stones a memorial building that houses many articles that belonged to Lincoln and his immediate associates—the piano that was used at the wedding of Lincoln and Mary Todd, the side saddle used by Ann Rutledge, Lincoln's surveying instruments and numerous manuscripts.

Thus it is that New Old Salem has become a second Mount Vernon. It lacks the grandeur of Washington's dwelling, but it is a shrine of logs, perpetuating the simplicity and the poverty of the Lincolns. To many it makes an appeal far greater than any other, since it exemplifies the old American teaching that the poor and the lowly may rise to honor.

Appeal for Friendship

We are not enemies but friends. We must not be enemies. Though passion may have strained, it must not break our bonds of affeetion. The mystic chords of memory, stretching from every battlefield and patriot's grave to every living heart and hearthstone all over this broad land, will yet swell the chorus of the Union when again touched, as surely they will be, by the better angels of our natures.—From Lincoln's inaugural address, March 4, 1861.

JESUS THE [illegible]NERS

[illegible]ar.....
LESSON TEXT—Lu[illegible].....
GOLDEN TEXT—This [illegible]ful saying, and worthy of all ac[illegible]n, that Christ Jesus came into the [illegible] to save sinners; of whom I am ch[illegible].
PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus and Those Who Do Wrong.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus and Wrongdoers.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Jesus the Friend of Sinners.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Jesus Transforming Sinners.

1. A Penitent Woman's Act of Love (vv. 37, 38).

1. The place (v. 37). It was in the house of Simon, the Pharisee, while Jesus was sitting at meat. When she knew of Christ's visit in this home, she came to lavish upon him her affections.

2. The act (v. 38). She washed Jesus' feet with her tears and wiped them with her hair. Through some means she had heard of the pardoning grace of Jesus Christ and God had opened her heart to receive Jesus as her personal Savior.

3. Who she was (v. 37). Her name is not given. There is no good ground for assuming that she was Mary Magdalene. The implication is that she was of a notoriously bad character. Though known to the public as a bad woman, something had happened which transformed her. She was a saved sinner because she believed on Jesus Christ.

II. The Pharisee's Displeasure (v. 39).

Simon felt scandalized by such a happening at his table. He was a respectable man. For Jesus to tolerate such familiarity on the part of a woman of such evil repute greatly perplexed him. Though he believed in Jesus enough to invite him to dine with him, he questioned within himself as to whether, after all, he was not mistaken. He reasoned if Jesus were a real prophet, he would have known the character of this woman and would have either withdrawn his feet from her or thrust her back with them; or if he knew her character, his tolerance of such familiarity proved that he was not a good man.

III. Jesus Teaches the Pharisee (vv. 40-50).

He taught him by means of the parable of a creditor and two debtors. It is to be noted that Jesus made it very clear that he not only knew the woman but knew Simon also.

1. The common debt (v. 41). The woman was a sinner—so was Simon, though he was not the same kind of a sinner that she was. There were two debtors, though the one owed ten times as much as the other. This is still representative of all sinners. The Bible declares all to be sinners, yet recognizes degrees of guilt. Full credit ought to be given to the man who is honest, virtuous, generous, and kind, yet such a life will not secure entrance into heaven. Much harm has been done by even evangelical preachers through failure to recognize the essential differences in human character. On the other hand, the Savior's words are a severe rebuke to the respectable Pharisees who are sitting in judgment against sinners of a coarser type.

2. The common Insolvency (v. 42). "And when they had nothing to pay." Jesus freely granted the difference in the degree of the woman's sins and those of the Pharisee, but drove home to him the fact that they were both debtors and had nothing with which to pay (Rom. 3:23). As sinners we may quit our sinning and hate our deeds but that does not make satisfaction for the sins of the past. What we have done is irrevocable—it has passed from our reach. Every transgression shall receive a just recompense of reward (Heb. 2:2). We must come to our Redeemer, the Almighty God, and acknowledge our insolvency and accept the kindness of Jesus Christ who bore our sins in his own body on the tree (I Pet. 2.24).

3. The relation of forgiveness and love (vv. 44-50). Simon's reluctant answer to Jesus' question showed that he got the point of Jesus' teaching. In order to make his teaching concrete, Jesus turned to the woman, calling Simon's attention to what she had done in contrast to what he had done. Simon had neglected to extend to Jesus the common courtesies of a respectable guest, but this woman had lavished upon him her affections and gifts. The measure of one's love is determined by the measure of the apprehension of sins forgiven. The one most forgiven will love most. Frequently the worst sinners make the best saints.

Become Like Him

The all-important thing is not to live apart from God, but as far as possible to be consciously with him. It must needs be that those who look much into his face will become like him.—Charles H. Brent.

Pity

Pity is love stooping, love drawn down by helplessness and want. Pity is love touched with sympathy, love sorrowing and suffering in our sorrow.—C. H. Spurgeon.

THE LINCOLN CABIN

Behold! The timbers rough, the lintel low,
The homely fireplace where he sought the light
And warmth that only such a place could know,
The door that opened to a world of might.
Stand here and feel the longing that could change
This home for that one highest in the land,
Look at this hearth, of circumstances strange,
Think of his soul-fire, by ambition fanned.

Remember how his great heart throbbed and beat,
Remember how his great brain understood,
The long, hard road that stretched before his feet,
The evolution of his brotherhood,
And bow your head, let quick tears flow today.
He, from this dark beginning, found the way.
—Kalfus Kurtz Gusling, in the Philadelphia Ledger.

Lincoln Marriage Home to Be National Shrine

The rude log cabin at Harrodsburg, Ky., in which the parents of Abraham Lincoln were married, is to be made a national shrine dedicated to prayer and marriage.

The building, copy of a Kentucky Baptist church of 1800, will be dedicated June 12, 1931, the one hundred and twenty-fifth anniversary of the marriage of Thomas Lincoln and Nancy Hanks.

Citizens of Harrodsburg, the only Colonial town west of the Alleghenies and the place where George Rogers Clark conceived his conquest of the

Lincoln Memorial Church

Northwest, say the shrine will remove the last vestige of the cloud that for many years hung over the legitimacy of Lincoln's birth.

The cabin will be in the center of the church. In the cabin will be an altar and a Bible.

When Thomas Lincoln, then twenty-eight years old, and Nancy Hanks, a twenty-three-year-old orphan and domestic, were married in this cabin June 12, 1806, it stood on Beech fork in the adjoining county of Washington. The ceremony was a typical backwoods wedding, with Rev. Jesse Head, a Methodist circuit rider, the officiating clergyman. The cabin was owned by Richard Berry, Nancy's guardian.

There was a Washington county tradition that Lincoln's parents had been married in the "Dick Berry cabin" but there were no records to prove it until 1878, when William F. Brooker, then county clerk, discovered the marriage bond signed by Thomas Lincoln and Berry, dated June 10, 1806, and a marriage return certifying the wedding by Rev. Mr. Head.

Lincoln's Early Years
Long Record of Defeat

Surprising as it may seem, Abraham Lincoln was probably the outstanding failure of American politics of his day until he was past fifty and almost at the threshold of the White House. Only indomitable courage finally carried him to the peak of success, points out B. C. Forbes, summarizing the Emancipator's career in McClure's Magazine.

"At twenty-three Lincoln was defeated as a candidate for the Illinois legislature," notes Forbes. "Before he was thirty he was a candidate for speaker of the house in Illinois and was defeated. Two years later he was defeated a second time for the same office. At thirty-four he was a candidate for congress and was defeated. At thirty-five he was defeated for Presidential elector. At forty he failed to become commissioner of the general land office. At forty-three he was again defeated as a candidate for Presidential elector. At forty-six he ran for the United States senate and was defeated. At forty-seven he was a candidate for the nomination for the Vice Presidency and was defeated. At forty-nine he was defeated a second time as a candidate for the senate."

DIED.

William T. Pope died at his home near Gormania last Wednesday afternoon, February 4, after a lingering illness. He was a son of the late Jacob R. Pope, and had been a resident of the county for many years.

COUNTY AGENT'S COLUMN

J. H. CARTER,
Resident County Agent,

The seed laboratory at the Agricultural Experiment Station, College Park, Maryland, was established and is maintained by the State because of the recognized importance of the use of suitable seeds for the production of our agricultural crops. Like all other similar agencies, however, it can help only those who will help themselves.

Are you making use of the facilities of the laboratory? If not, would it not be in your own interest to allow it to help you sell or use only good seeds?

Everyone recognizes the fact that only good seeds should be used. Every one cannot recognize good (or poor) seeds. The laboratory can help you to avoid the use of seeds that may carry noxious weed seed or may be of low vitality. No Maryland farmer should run the risk of a crop failure because of using unsuitable seed when, by sending a sample of what he intends to sow to the laboratory, he can learn whether it is of good quality. Let the seed laboratory test your seed, "Know what you sow". It will pay you to do this in this day of keen competition.

Last year was the biggest year the laboratory ever had and the number of samples that have been sent in this year is larger than for the same period last year. In other words, more persons are learning that it is to their advantage to make use of the seed laboratory.

When you buy seed demand seed that is carefully tagged. Avoid low quality seed. Address seed samples to Seed Laboratory, College Park, Md.

Vermont Men First to Defy King George?

The widely prevalent idea that the first blood of an organized body of men resisting Great Britain at the outbreak of the Revolution was shed a Lexington is challenged in many quarters of the state of Vermont.

While Vermonters do not wish it to appear that they lack reverence for the sacred soil of those early battlefields, they would like to see it emphasized on the records that William French, a Brattleboro boy, and Daniel Houghton of Dummerston were mortally wounded in a clash at the Westminster courthouse between armed Loyalists and the Liberty Boys more than a month before the shooting began in Massachusetts.

The rebuilt 14-mile cement "King's Higbway," recently opened between Bellows Falls and Putney, skirts the scene of the so-called Westminster massacre.

In [illegible] the marker on the site of the Colonial courthouse, placed there by the Daughters of the American Revolution, had to be moved about 50 feet onto the property of County Commissioner John C. Richmond when work started on the new road.

BUDGET ACCEPTABLE; THE OYSTER QUESTION UP NOW

Amounts Necessary For Public Expense Has Been Under Consideration by Assembly a Week

OYSTERS TO HAVE INNING

By Paul Winchester

Annapolis, February 18—The Budget, that is the estimate furnished by the Governor of the amounts necessary for the public expense of the State Government for the years 1932 and 1933, has been under consideration by the General Assembly for more than a week. And the impression prevails that it will be approved by the legislative body practically as it left the hands of the Executive authority. So far as there has been any expression on the part of the lawmakers and the newspapers, all have been favorable. Of course there can be no increase in the amount of the appropriations, although the Legislature is empowered to reduce any amount to any degree the majority may desire. The probabilities are, however, that the Governor's figures will stand as he has sent them in. Later on there will doubtless be a supplementary budget to provide for any such necessities as may be required by the laws enacted between the present time and the close of the session in April.

The Oyster Question

The bi-ennial trouble over the legislation affecting the oyster fisheries is looming up like a dark cloud to trouble the statesmen, and the outlook is that the contest this session will be more vigorous and acrimonious than usual. The tongers, who are many in number, are preparing to go on the warpath against the dredgers, as they have been doing for more than a half century. The arguments used to the outside observer all appear to favor the contention of the tongers, for it is a well known fact that the dredges in use at the present time destroy more oysters than they catch, while tonging is beneficial to the bars and rocks in that it scatters the shells and spat, while the dredges on the other hand cover them up with mud and cause them to be smothered and destroyed.

All the calamity howls that the oyster beds and bars are being destroyed and made barren except so far as that is the case where dredging is permitted, is false. The oyster crops the yield is plentiful, at other times seasons and under certain conditions, the yield is plentiful, a tother times the crops are small, and the yield un

MAPLE SUGAR PRODUCERS DISCUSS WORK FOR 1931

Board of Directors of Association Holds Meeting Monday

purpose of making definite the 1931 work among maple syrup producers, the board ors of the Garrett County Products Association met in antsville High school building y evening.

association will continue with the Federal State inspection of their product and the inspection will be furnished by the Extension service of the University of Maryland, free of charge, the same as last year.

This year "Crest O' the Highland" will be packed in a one-half gallon can, and it is expected that this size will make a good seller for retail trade, judging from requests received last year. The association is also sponsoring another grade of syrup which will be labeled as "Maryland Standard." There will be a slight change made in the weight requirement for the syrup, Mr. John H. Carter, county agent, stated.

"The work started with syrup producers is a long time program," Mr. Carter said, "and it will require the support of every business interest in the county in order for it to develop to be known country-wide in the shortest possible time.

"To have 'Crest O' the Highland" maple syrup advertised all over the United States would carry with it Garrett county, Maryland,' which I believe would be a big asset to the county at large."

The association is planning to offer its products for sale at two roadside markets, one located on the Northeastern Turnpike, U. S. route 20, and the other on the National Highway, U. S. route 40.

ONE-TEACHER SCHOOLS OF COUNTY RANK HIGH

State Attendance Figures For December Show Garrett in Lead

Garrett county ranked first in percentage of attendance in Maryland among one-teacher schools, for the month of December, according to a bulletin just received from the State Department of Education, and placed second among two-teacher schools.

By also placing second among the elementary schools, and third among the graded schools, Garrett county has one of the best records of attendance of any county in the State for the past several months.

The graded schools have usually been among the first five, Mr. John L. Fitzwater, attendance officer stated, but it is not often that the elementary schools lead the other twenty-two counties. They have made rapid advancement within the past two years, he said.

High schools in the county tied with two other counties for the twelfth place in the state. The following ranking among other counties is given:

One-teacher schools, 1st, 93.8; two-teacher schools, second, 95.1; all elementary schools, second, 93.8; graded schools, third, 93.1; high schools, tied for twelfth place, with 93.2.

Garrett county has more one-teacher schools than any other county in the state.

It will be put to good use, according to the president of the club. There is also material cut and ready for making for any one who wishes to help in sewing the garments, no matter if the person is a member of the club or not.

Those who are interested may learn more particulars by calling Miss Lottie Loar, president of the Civic Club, or any other member.

INTER-COUNTY CONTEST MAY BE HELD IN OAKLAND

Basketball Championship May Be Decided Here March 6

Kitzmiller High School basketball team, champions of Garrett county, and Allegany High School, Cumberland, probable champions of Allegany county, may play the inter-county championship contest game in Oakland High School gymnasium, it was learned last evening.

The tentative date for this game is Friday, March 6, but no definite place for holding the contest has been decided by the Playground Athletic League of Baltimore, under whose direction the county leagues and State school championship series are played.

P. A. L. officials have three places in view, Oakland, Frostburg and Westernport, but it is thought that they favor a championship in Garrett county, as all contests in previous years have been held in Allegany county.

Kitzmiller high boys cinched the Garrett county title on Monday night when they downed the Friendsville high team at Kitzmiller 34 to 14. Kitzmiller also defeated Oakland for the second time on Tuesday night when they scored 42 points against the local quint. Oakland scored 10 points.

The main address of the evening was given by Rev. C. A. Shilke, who spoke of the great growth in scouting and asked that the scouts and those interested in the organization continue to grow in knowledge, helpfulness and usefulness, so that the aims of scouting may always be upheld.

A knot tieing exhibition was given by Ward Hinebaugh, and a first aid demonstration was held under the direction of Richard Davis, junior assistant scoutmaster. James Treacy, Richard Gonder, Kenneth Lawton, Robert Altstetter, Carroll Castel, and Schell Hoye took part. Harley Dawson and Elvin Iman gave a signaling demonstration.

MINISTERS URGE SOLONS TO OPPOSE OPEN SUNDAY

Also Pass Resolution Favoring Proposed Bill To Change Present Maryland Marriage Law

REV. C. G. AURAND TALKS

A resolutions opposing the passage of the proposed bill in the Maryland Legislature which would give authority to the County Commissioners of the various counties and the city councils of municipalities to authorize the showing of moving pictures, open theatres and amusement places of all kinds, was passed at the regular monthly meeting of the Mountain Top Ministers' Association, which was held Tuesday morning at 10:30 in the Masonic club room, First National Bank Building, Oakland.

The association also passed a resolution approving the pending bill to change Maryland's present marriage law. Creation of an unemployment bureau, to be conducted by the executive committee of the association, was another important act of the ministerial body.

Create Unemployment Bureau

The purpose of the unemployment bureau, according to Rev. D. C. Trimble, president, is to have some central organization where those who have work to be done can register and also where those seeking work may place their names. It is also to further the community who are unemployed and to ask the churches to aid in securing employment and provide for the families of the unemployed in some way.

This organization will begin functioning at once, and applications will be received by Rev. Trimble, Rev. Shilke, Rev. Brock, Rev. W. L. Disc, for the Aurora section, and by Rev. Bernard Gibbs for the Terra Alta section.

Against Open Sunday

In the resolution requesting the Senator and Delegates from this county to vote against the measure for Sunday movies, etc., the association said this was considered a vicious attempt to further flagrantly violate the Sabbath and expressed the hope that the proposed bill, or any other bill seeking to change the Sunday law would not be passed.

In the bill favoring the changing of Maryland's present marriage law, it states that there must be a lapse of 24 hours from the time of the application until the license is granted, and another 24 hours before the marriage ceremony can be performed. Applicants would be required to present a health certificate under the proposed measure.

Rev. W. L. Dise was appointed librarian for the association.

Rev. Charles G. Aurand, pastor of the First Lutheran Church, Wheeling, West Va., and president of the West Virginia Lutheran Synod, addressed the association on the "Meaning and Purpose of Lent," and showed the members of the organization how to build and carry out a successful Lenten program.

The association will meet again on March 16.

No Hearing Has Been Asked Thus Far by Her Defense Counsel

Mrs. Lettie Anthony, wife of Peter Anthony, a miner, of Bayard, W. Va., will remain in the Garrett county jail until the June term of court, according to statements by her defense counsel. She is charged with slaying [illegible] Accident, on the Garrett county side of the Potomac river from Wilson, W. Va., last Tuesday afternoon, February 10.

No hearing has been asked and no proceedings have been started to obtain her freedom until the meeting of the Grand Jury in June. The defense counsel states that they are not ready for a hearing.

Funeral services for the man were held last Friday afternoon from the Fairview church, near Wilson.

OAKLAND WILL TAKEPART IN BOYS' WEEK THIS YEAR

Annual Event Will be Held From April 25th to May 2nd

Boys' Week will again be observed in Oakland from April 25 to May 2, it has been announced. This is in accordance with the national celebration which is under the chairmanship of Walter W. Head, past president of the American Bankers Association, and 70 of the most prominent men in America.

More than 100 national and international service clubs such as the Oakland Rotary club, are now cooperating in the concentration of attention upon the boys of the world.

"Since the inception of Boys' Week here the community has awakened to the recognition of the boy and his problems as something fundamental in the future life of the commonwealth," Rev. C. A. Shilke, one of the members of the Boys' Work committee of the Oakland Rotary club stated.

"The boy of today is confronted with a much more complex world than the day of his father's boyhood, and the sense of responsibility for equipping the boy to meet and conquer his coming environment is growing in the minds of his elders."

Mrs. Paupe will install the officers for the year after which a reception for the new members will be given. A full attendance is desired.

The officers to be installed include the following: Mrs. Elizabeth Williams, president; Mrs. Elinor Fraley, vice-president; Mrs. Delilah Kildow, second vice-president Mrs. Adrain Carter, secretary; Mrs. Nellie Lawrence, treasurer; Mrs. S. Townshend Naylor, historian; Mrs. Benj. H. Sincell, chaplain; and Miss Theresa Welling, sergeant-at-arms.

MUNICIPAL ELECTION TO BE HELD MONDAY, MARCH 9

Voters to Ballot for Three Members of City Council and for Treasurer

POLLS OPEN AT 8 O'CLOCK

Three persons to be members of the City Council, and one person to be City Treasurer will be voted upon in the annual municipal election to be held Monday, March 9, when the polls will be held in the City Council chamber on Third street.

The councilmen will be chosen for a term of two years and the treasurer for one year. The retiring members of the council will be George Little, H. P. Stuck, and J. W. Whorton. Miss Frances Hamill is the present city treasurer and was chosen last year without opposition.

The polls for the election will be open at eight o'clock a. m., according to an official notice appearing in today's Republican, and they will remain open until the hour of 6 o'clock p. m.

The three councilmen who are holdover members of the body are Ralph Thayer, Carlton McComas, and Jesse J. Ashby, they having been elected last year for terms of two years each.

A public meeting will probably be arranged in the near future where candidates will be selected and their names placed on the ticket.

Oakland want a "White Way" in the business section of the city will be determined by the election this year, as this question will be placed on the ballot. The council is already said to favor the adoption of the "White Way", but its members did not feel like taking this step without the consent of the people. Several protests against the new move were registered with the council during the past winter.

NO RETURN MADE YET ON CAUSE OF MAN'S DEATH

Stomach of Michael Felda Sent to Baltimore for Analysis

No return has as yet been made on the contents of the stomach of Michael Felda, a coal miner and farmer, who was found dead in bed Sunday night, February 8, at his home near Altamont, according to Walter W. Dawson, State's attorney.

The stomach was sent to Baltimore for chemical analysis, to determine whether it contained traces of any poison other than that created by moonshine. The man's wife, Mrs. Rosa Felda, said he died from alcoholism and that he had been drinking moonshine.

Drum and Bugle Corps Makes Its First Public Appearance

The drum and bugle corps of Proctor Kildow Post, No. 71, American Legion, made its first public appearance Monday evening, when a parade was held prior to the feature picture, "Animal Crackers," given at Maryland Theatre for the benefit of the Legionaires.

The corps marched north on Third street to Crook, to Second and down Second to Alder, thence to the theatre, stopping at several points along the way where quite an ovation was tendered them by the crowds that had congregated.

The drum and bugle corps was organized on August 11 and on September 10 the members held their first practice session, just five months before their first appearance Monday night. The Legionaires were dressed in white trousers, blue coats and wore their Legion caps. The body of men presented a fine appearance and made an excellent impression upon those who witnesed the affair.

Approximately the sum of $65 will be the proportionate share of the Legion from the theatre receipts.

More Red Cross Donations Are Received

Contributions for the American Red Cross drought relief fund received during the week were C. & P. Telephone Company, $14; Mrs. Clifford Friend, Accident, $10; Mr. C. N. McIntire, $10.

Mrs. Tower, chairman for Garrett county, received a letter along with the money from the telephone company explaining that the officials had decided to subscribe one per cent of the quota for this county, which was $14.

SCOOP'S COLUMN

By SCOOP—HIMSELF

Greetings to Archibaldson

Some friend of Archibaldson's sent him this valentine:

A four flusher you are
In all that you do
And the card they call "Jack"
Is a symbol of you.

Scoop Got Two

In order to make up for the one they lost behind the cash register last year and didn't discover until about March 14, Scoop received two beautiful sentiments this year, in honor of St. Valentine. Here they are:

Twins?
That is certainly rich
It's you with a jackass
But which one is which?

A Bad Egg

You're a very bad egg, and your fair-looking shell
Deceives not at all for we know you too well.
You are rotten and vile as can be thru and thru,
And the swill-pail's the right destination for you.

Well, we had the comic valentines with us again this year, those foolish, distorted faces with verses, sometimes funny and sometimes not, sometimes fitting the receiver, and sometimes not—picturing with broad satire modern phases of life, and all our crazy human idiosyncracies.

The Republican force strongly suspicions the members of the Amalgamated society as having increased the comic valentine business in Oakland. They all got theirs, from the druggist to the loafer. Even we poor newspapermen, who strive hard to be the saviors of the nation, came in for our share.

Dealers also say that the women helped along this return of the comics, probably due to bargain prices. They swarmed the comic valentine counters and seemed to ignore the old sweet enes nearby that told you amidst all the hearts and flowers that "You are my Valentine." Instead it was:

Roses are red
Violets are blue
The grass is all wet
And so are you.

I thought most of the dogs in town had been poisoned, but when the drum corps started to blow Moiday night at the City hall, Third street was alive with them. And how they could howl—the dogs, I mean.

* * *

But the rum corps was different. Before I saw them coming down the street, I thought they had engaged the corps which took the prize here last fourth of July. But on closer examination there were Jimmie Fazzalari, with lots of volume to spare; Tom Compton and Dick Maroney battling the drums; Michael Liller stepping high, wide and sometimes wider and Bob Coffee carrying the flag; and all the rest of them.

They sounded good.

Short Essay on Bed

There is something peculiar about a bed; we go there with reluctance, and leave with regret. We spend one-third of our life there and would like to spend two-thirds. We make up our minds every night to leave it early (bosses orders), but we make up our bodies every morning to keep it late. P. S. If Archibaldson and I don't get to work earlier the boss editor threatens to use the pedal parts of his body for things other than walking, in an attempt to sway our minds. A good swift one might make my teeth rattle, but try and sway Archibaldson's mind.

Queer Antics

This week has been especially trying on Bun Nethkin and deputy officers. And no wonder! To hear Paul Baloney Naylor singing Turkey in the Straw when he is waiting on customers or when he is walking along the street; or to see Walter Hardesty and Harry Stemple, every time they meet, to link arms and prance around in circles, humming, "swing your partner, don't be late, strut your stuff, or you'll get the gate," or see Shorty Townshend, every time he turns the corner at the First National bank, cut the corner in real military style.

Isn't that enough to make anyone wonder? That is, if they didn't know what was going to happen Friday. Well, there is going to be a big poverty party at the K. of P. hall, and all the antics are preliminary to the main event—practice makes perfect.

Every time four K. of P's get together, no matter where, it is "Circle Four," and then traffic is held up until they quit. Pete Breuninger has purchased a package of throat irritators, as he is going to call the figures for the barn dance.

And of course there will be the cake walk. Romanus Rudy says he doesn't see any real reason for spoiling the cake with dirty shoes. Alva G. "Gangrene" Gortner will really be up and on time. Everyone is anxiously waiting to see who Jud Loar's partner is going to be. He was heard singing "Here we go round the mulberry bush," yesterday morning.

The Ananias club is combining with the Amalgamated Society for the Prevention of Work, for a meeting to be held at 1 a. m. Sunday morning, the date of George Washington's birthday. The session will be in the nature of true confessions, and a prize will be given to the one telling the biggest "true story". It is understood this is a difficult task for the members, as they are known to be pretty well stocked up on all other stories but true ones. Fish stories will not be counted unless there are five witnesses. Other stories need only two. Harry Sincell, Poky Shaw, Jim Kerins, Bet Dawson, Cot McComas, Lawyer Fisher-Fraley, Monk Stemple, Jut Littman and Mit Sincell are expected to carry the biggest brunt of the battle of words. Happy Harned says they will have difficulty in producing witnesses.

Somebody came in The Republican office the other day, and among other things he spoke about, he said he got a big kick out of Scoop's column. The boss editor replied that some of these days I would be getting several of those things myself if I kept on.

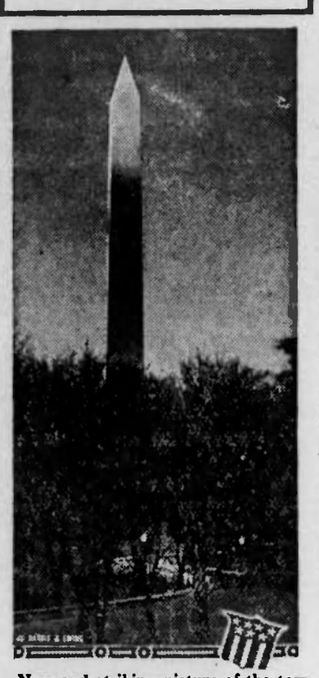
STRIKING VIEW OF WASHINGTON SHAFT



New and striking picture of the towering obelisk.

Shaft Planned to Rise Above Washington's Tomb

Did you know that the Washington monument was originally intended as a tomb for the first President?

That once it was planned that the memorial should he a gigantic earthen mound, in shape like the Egyptian pyramids, instead of a granite shaft?

That, again, the plans called for a series of temples, growing smaller in size at intervals, to the top of a great shaft, containing niches for the statues of distinguished men of the various states?

These are the interesting facts about the nation's greatest memorial revealed by a writer in the Farm Journal, after research through the early records relating to the monnment.

The proposal to erect the monument as a tomb was made by a congressional committee which launched the project immediately after Washington's death. Permission to remove the body from its burial place at Mount Vernon was refused by the general's brother.

Charles Custis, a leader in the movement, proposed the earthen pyramid. His plan was to have all soldiers who had served under Washington come to the capital, each depositing a shovelful of earth in a designated spot. The appeal proved popular and was seriously considered nntil it was pointed out mathematically that before the memorial could be near completed the Revolutionary veterans would be dead.

As late as 1836, after congress and committees had quibbled and argued for 50 years without any action, the plan for a series of pyramided temples was proposed. It was this plan that had been agreed upon when John Marshall, then eighty years old, headed a national society, members contributing $1 each toward the monument.

Bnt not until Jnly 4, 1848, was the corner stone actually laid. By that time the plans had heen revised until the present shaft was agreed upon, although a Grecian temple to be erected around the hase was still a part of the bnilders' conception, says the Farm Journal article.

After the shaft had been raised to 154 feet, the Civil war came and construction was halted and was not resumed until 1880, under the auspices of congress. The capstone weighing 18,000 pounds and pointed with alnminum, 555 feet from the ground, finally was set in place in 1884.

In all things that are purely social we can be as separate as the fingers, yet one as the hand in all things essential to mutual progress.—George Washington

Memorial Boulevard to Link Shrine to Capital

Soon there will he a new road connecting the capital with Mount Vernon, home of the Father of His Country, some 12 miles away. Congress voted $4,500,000 for construction of this memorial boulevard. It will pass over the Arlington memorial bridge now being constructed across the Potomac.

Rear view of Mount Vernon, showing the outbuildings including the summer kitchen, butler's house and gardener's house.

The highway is planned to be completed in 1932, the 200th anniversary of the birth of George Washington. No definite route has been decided on, but the road will probably skirt the beautiful Potomac on the shores of which Monut Vernon stands.

THRU THE NEEDLE'S EYE—

Oakland Civic Club members are doing a very fine and commendable piece of work in making dresses and other necessary garments for school children of the county who are in need of such comforts.

Although this community is not as destitute as Morgantown and vicinity where over 300 families are in dire want, yet there are many who need clothing, especially the children who go to school with not sufficient on their bodies to keep out the cold and dampness. Another contributing cause to their unfortunate estate is undernourishment, but this condition is being overcome to some extent by the furnishing of milk, free of charge, to those who need and require it.

The Civic Club is asking for material and assistance from other women of the town who are not members of the organization, and it is being urged that all who can give a few hours of their time in helping the needy.

BUGLES SOUND REVILLE—

With their neat-looking uniforms, snappy drum music and thrilling bugle notes, the American Legion Drum corps, after only five months since their first practice, appeared on the streets of Oakland Monday night for their initial public parade, or what might be called their reville party.

Of course, the unit did not sound perfect—nobody expected it. People expected to hear something rather mediocre, but they got better than that. The entire corps performed in excellent fashion. The military bearing, the perfect timing of the drum beats and the blare of the bugles showed the earnestness which the members had put forth to make this occasion possible.

Monday evening was only the first. Just wait a few more weeks. The members haven't promised anything startling in improvement, but judging the future by the past, they'll pack a lot of surprises.

And what a striking advertisement for Oakland the corps is going to be during the next few years!

It isn't too early to begin thinking about Oakland's White Way. And after looking at it in a broad-minded way, vote the way you think on Monday, March 9.

The depression would have come, regardless of the Eighteenth Amendment, and it would have been a whole lot worse with eighteen saloons on the corners of the town's streets.

Regardless of all the statements of those in the country who are criticising the characters of Lincoln and Washington, they are still two great ideals which all of us might look up to and receive inspiration.

A sure way to keep up this depression or make it worse is for some of the local merchants and business men to continue their petty methods of cutting each other's throats, instead of uniting against their common competitor.

That has been said before. The statement this time will probably do as much good as the former one—none whatever.

A recent letter to the editor of The Republican, which was not published, contained the statement that if the children were made to continue in school for ten months and not be allowed to work at home, that there "would be more profit in raising hogs than children."

The Republican suggests that people with these ideas and with such high ideals of humanity be compelled to confine themselves to the raising of hogs and let the other job up to ones who can see over the top of the pig pen.

From Chestertown it is announced by Deputy Game Warden Joseph Watson that during March ten thousand rabbits will be released in the counties during March, in spite of the opposition of the Department of Health because of the possibility of tularemia.

Human rights should be placed above property rights, we are told by a prominent professor. But just what does he mean? In the United States the individual is permitted to possess and enjoy the fruits of his labor to as great a degree as anywhere else in the world. That fact doesn't seem to interfere with his human rights. In Russia, on the other hand, there is very little if any protection of property rights. The individual there who has had to surrender his property, his earnings and all his accumulations, is virtually a slave to the state. The peasant and working man of Russia today could tell us from their own experiences that property rights are quite essential to human rights.

A Letter From Former Senator Naylor Respecting the Proposed Change in Park Affairs

Mr. H. V. Leighton, a member of the Annual Committee of the Mountain Lake Park Association, has requested The Republican to give publicity to the following letter recently received by him from former Senator A. D. Naylor, now at Sebring, Florida:

Mr. H. V. Leighton,
Mt. Lake Park, Maryland.
My dear Mr. Leighton:

I noticed in The Republican paper that the residents of Mt. Lake Park are considering petitioning the Legislature for a new charter and that there has been a committee appointed by the winter residents, also a committee representing the Association of which you have been appointed a member.

Personally, I am very sorry this same thing has to come up again. I fear that it will be the means of destroying the hen that lays the golden egg in that it will do away with the Association. I have no financial interest in the Association except that I contributed towards helping the new Association acquire the property from the old Association and I think I was the second largest contributor, yet have no regrets on that line.

I know that the Association is not making money and all they spend in the Park each year is a big asset to those who stay there the year round, as well as to the hotels, boarding houses, and merchants in the Park and in Oakland. I do not think it fair to the summer people who bought property under the old charter to make a change. As it is, Mountain Lake Park has done more for the county than any other summer resort in or near Garrett county, under their present charter.

Oakland, Deer Park, Loch Lynn, Brookside and Aurora were all great summer resorts at one time. Today they are things of the past as far as resorts are concerned. Mt. Lake is the only place that has made any effort to induce people to come there for the summer. They pay their superintendent and make special effort to bring people to the Park. Suppose they quit, we will all feel the effects very much. If they want to sell their property to other individuals, they certainly can sell to a greater advantage under the old charter than under the new one, as proposed, in which they will have little or no consideration.

Today there is every inducement offered to manufacturers to locate in town. They are offered sites and exemptions from taxation just to have them locate in certain sections because it is an asset to that community.

I feel the same towards the Mt. Lake Park Association. I feel that they are a big asset to Garrett county even if they were not asked to pay one cent of taxes. I do not know just how you will feel about asking for a new charter for the Park. You are a good business man and I think you should consider this matter well and talk it over with others in the Park who are interested. Sometimes people go ahead with a proposition of this kind without thinking of the far-reaching results and are mostly sorry afterwards.

I would like to hear what you think concerning the proposition. I am

Very truly yours,
A. D. NAYLOR,

Sebring, Florida.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

Messrs. A. D. Naylor and company, agents for the Ford automobile, ordered four cars which were to be shipped from the factory in a few days. The local firm had already disposed of three of the cars to Dr. H. W. McComas, James P. Treacy and D. M. Dixon.

A debt aggregating $1300 was wiped off the slate of St. Paul's M. E. church Sunday when the entire amount was pledged, a goodly portion being paid in cash.

Dr. Webster Ravenscroft, Sheriff Andrew Shartzer, and State Senator H. J. Speicher attended the automobile show in Baltimore.

Dr. John G. Robinson returned to his home in Oakland Tuesday from Bond where he had directed the music at a series of meetings held there during the previous week.

An Interesting Fact

Orderly Procedure of Colonists—An Indian Murderer

The orderly manner in which the Maryland Colonists handled major crimes, as well as less serious offenses, is in striking contrast with the harsher methods in vogue in some of the other colonies.

Maryland elected to proceed along legal lines rather than to punish alleged offenders summarily without judicially determining whether the offending parties were guilty or innocent. In settlements to the west, particularly along the Ohio River, to charge an Indian with the commission of a crime, was to condemn him. Not so in Maryland.

In February, 1688, on Middle River, Baltimore county, two colonists, Richard Enoch and Francis Freeman, were attacked and wounded by two Indians. The first attack occurred while Enoch was busy grinding or beating corn in a mortar and would probably have resulted in a fatality had not Mrs. Enoch courageously and with the true spirit of a pioneer woman come to her husband's assistance, grabbed the pestle and knocked the Indian unconscious. And although she was undoubtedly provoked by the assault on her husband, Mrs. Enoch displayed her womanly qualities by binding up the head of the Indian and sending him on his way.

It was thought that this settled the affair and that no further trouble would ensue. However, a brother of the injured Indian, brooding over a wrong he believed had been done his family, returned with a companion the next morning and attacked Enoch and Freeman while they were at work. Again Mrs. Enoch tried to protect her husband, but was knocked down and remained unconscious until the husband had been killed and Freeman seriously wounded.

The affair had its inception in a complaint by the family of the murderer that pigs belonging to Enoch had destroyed a field of corn belonging to the Indians. The latter retaliated and "did do prejudice to Enoch's stock by cutting his pigs ears off and tails."

Even though it was, from all accounts, a deliberate murder, the colonists did not yield to mob violence and proceed to punish the offender without trial. When it was learned that the two Indians who committed the crime, Annachokill and Pomptavus (the former proved to be the actual murderer, the latter was particeps criminis), had fled to the Susquehanna, where it was supposed they would stay "'till the bark will peel so they can make canoes to go over to the Northern Indians," the Council directed the Sheriff of Somerset county and six of his neighbors to attend the Emperor of Nanticoke and demand the murderers. At the pow-wow which followed, the Indians expressed doubt that a murder had been actually committed. Request was made thru the Sheriff that the grave "be opened to satisfy the Indians that the said Enoch was really dead and buried." Thereupon Major Thomas Long, Sheriff of Baltimore county, was ordered to comply with the request.

This is the first instance on record where a grave was opened to furnish the corpus delicti in a murder case.

The murderers were captured and delivered by the Emperor to the proper authorities.

THE POLITICAL WHEELS OF WASHINGTON

By James L. West

Washington, Feb. 17—During the past eighteen months the people of the country have taken an unusually intense interest in politics. There is no reason to believe that there interest will flag before the election of 1932. Undoubtedly the public that has watched with mingled emotions the action on the political stage has profited by its observations. A large part of it has already learned to distinguish the shadow from the substance, the honest effort from the grand gesture, and the real worth from the red fire.

In fervor of the recent Congressional campaign the public—newly interested in the study of politics—was too confused by the barrage of charges and the torrents of recriminations to analyze and evaluate. Since November 4, the tempo has been diminished. Not a great deal, it is true, but sufficient to permit an interested public to see something of the issues themselves. Issues unobscured—or unsuccessfully camouflaged—by the written and the spoken word.

The Congress has been in session nearly three months. During that time much political drama has transpired. Within that time the people of the United States have seen their President, viciously assaulted by his political enemies, emerge victorious in a dozen conflicts. His opponents have maneuvered to force him into positions which they knew his principles would cause him to accept; positions which they believed would be politically untenable. They have, time and again, placed him in a position where he must cease to defend the best interests of the Nation or fight. In every case he has accepted the combat. His opponents learned to their amazement and chagrin that the President could wield "the big stick" with telling effect.

The public, accustomed to see its Chief Executive slandered and maligned has devoted an eager attention to the recent conflicts. When the President emphatically demonstrated that his appointments could not be influenced by the threats of organizations or individuals, the public responded with cheers. When the opposition in the Senate first attempted to seize the whip of authority and only succeeded in catching the hot end, presidential prestige went up in each of the 48 states.

When the President resolutely refused to let the approximate of the dole be foisted upon the country, the sagacious gentlemen who had counted upon placing him in an intensely unpopular position were dismayed to find that he had both popular and press support. When Mr. Hoover brought his authority to the defense of the Red Cross he gained further in national esteem. When he unhesitatingly refused to accept the famous Democratic "ultimatum" the opposition crumpled amid pleas for a "compromise."

The President has emerged victorious in these contests not through any innate power of his office but because the people of the United States have believed him to be in the right. Time and again he has been sustained by the irresistible force of public opinion. Those who seek to know the political future may well study these portents.

The People Vs. The Congress

Those who had begun to fear that the will of the people might be frustrated by the very agencies it has created are finding reassurance in the present attitude of the Congress. The overwhelming force of crystallized public opinion once again demonstrates that ours is a government by the people.

For weeks some members of both houses, blinded by partisanship or sectional interests, have placed themselves stubbornly in opposition to the clear will of the majority that there be no extra session of Congress. Some of those whose actions tended to insure the extraordinary session were both sincere and high minded. Others were animated by less noble motives. Today, even those whose tactics were inspired by political counsel apparently have seen the light. The defiant Democratic ultimatum has shrivelled to a plea for compromise and those who worked hardest to hamper the Administration, fearful that they have launched a boomerang, now appear ready to cooperate in deed as well as word.

Sufficient time remains to pass all the appropriation bills and leave a reasonable margin for the consideration of other important legislation. Both the President of the United States and the American Red Cross have given their pledge that the drough sufferers will receive adequate relief. It is not asking too much that Congress accept the pledge which no nation in the world would fail to honor. Economists of all political faiths have unreservedly condemned the full payment of veterans' adjusted compensation certificates at this time. There is no objection from the government or any of its leaders to a program that will aid the veterans and at the same time accord with the best interests of the country as a whole.

With these controversial issues reduced to their present status there appears no reason why the business before the Congress cannot be handily dispatched before the date of adjournment on March 4. That such is the will of the people is beyond question and those statesmen who scan the political skies will do well to remember that in the end it is the people who are the arbiters of political destiny.

There is one great difficulty with extraordinary sessions—they usually turn out to be more of the same.

Anonymous attempts at smearing the Federal Farm Board at least had the merit of giving employment to someone who had very little to do.

Raids upon the treasury constitute just one more way of being generous with other people's money.

The magnificent new government buildings in Washington and throughout the country will some day be pointed out as monuments to a President who found work for the unemployed where no work was to be found.

Amid the general criticism now being directed at Congress it must be remembered that there are honorable, sincere, and able members in both Houses—but it is the fellow who wants to bust things wide open who gets the black headlines.

Panther Kills Deer In Garrett County, Is Report

That a panther or some other predatory animal had killed and partly eaten a small female deer at a point bordering on the Maryland and West Virginia State line near Muddy Creek, about nine miles from Oakland, was reported in Oakland and Terra Alta and vicinity during the past week.

Richard S. Browning, district game warden, accompanied by six men and four dogs, last Monday made a thorough search of all thickets and rock cliffs within a fifteen-mile circle of where the deer was found, and although at that time there was an excellent tracking snow on the ground no tracks of the supposed panther could be found.

Due to the frozen condition of the remains of the deer, the exact cause of its death has not as yet been definitely determined. Men living in the community where the animal was found declare they heard the panther screaming in a thicket.

Lutheran Ministers Prepare for Lenten Services

Rev. Charles A. Shilke has prepared an elaborate Lenten, Holy Week and Easter program for St. Mark's Lutheran church. The morning sermons will set forth a picture of "Jesus the Man"; the evening services a picture of Calvary.

The sermons during the evenings of Holy Week will be preached by out of town ministers, except on the evening of Good Friday, when a special preparatory service will be held, with adult confirmation.

Easter Sunday will be marked by a service to be held at dawn with confirmation and communion at the regular morning service.

The choir under the direction of Dr. John G. Robinson will render a cantata at the evening service.

Lenten Season Opened Yesterday With Special Services

The first of the series of Union Lenten and Holy Week services was held in the Lutheran church last evening, with Rev. C. A. Shilke presiding. Rev. J. W. Dawson read the scripture and Rev. W. B. Brock offered the evening prayer.

Rev. D. C. Trimble preached the sermon from the selected theme: "Light from the upper room on the meaning of Service."

The next service will be held in the Presbyterian church next Wednesday evening when Rev. Dawson will preach the sermon. These services have been designed for the refreshment and spiritual strengthening of the entire community, and it is hoped that the people will attend.

Easter this year falls on April 5, considerable earlier than the 1930 date and one of the earliest in recent years.

Social activities usually lull during Lent. Several parties are being planned however for St. Patrick's Day, March 17, which is the only day during Lent that restrictions are not observed by the devout keepers of the season.

NUMBER SPECIAL COURSE TEACHERS INCREASED

Records Show More Have Principal's Certificates In Maryland Counties than Year Ago

Elementary county school teachers holding regular first grade and elementary principals' certificates in October, 1930, showed an increase of 1.2 percent over the number holding certificates in the corresponding period of 1929, it was reported Saturday by the State Department of Education.

Of approximately 3,000 elementary teachers in service in Maryland counties in October, 1930, there were 2,831 holding regular first grade and elementary principals' certificates, it was said. This number represents 94.5 percent of the county staffs, in comparison with 93.3 percent for October, 1929, it was reported. This represents a gain of 54.1 percent, or 1,603 more teachers holding regular first grade and elementary principals' certificates in October, 1930, than in October, 1921, it was said.

Must Complete Course

The holder of a first-grade certificate must have completed a two-year normal school course, or its equivalent, and to keep it valid for renewal must attend summer school once in every successive period of four years after the certificate was issued, it was added.

In the individual counties the percentage of white teachers holding elementary principals' and first grade certificates varies from 100 to 81, Baltimore and St. Mary's counties being at the two extremes respectively, it was reported. All but five counties, St. Mary's, Cecil, Somerset, Worcester, and Dorchester, have ninety percent or more of their teachers holding first grade and elementary principals' certificates, it was said.

The greatest gain in percentage of trained teachers since 1921 is found in Garrett county, which now ranks second in the State, it was reported. In 1921 only seven percent of its staff had training equivalent to normal-school graduation, while now the percentage of its staff is ninety-nine, it was said.

Miss Evelyn Dixon gave Lincoln's Gettysburg address. Rev. Brock, pastor of the Presbyterian church of this city, made an interesting and educational speech on "Prohibition", his topic being based upon "The Wickersham Report on National Prohibition."

The school and community are awaiting "The Arrival of Kitty," a comedy in three acts, by Norman Lee Swartant. The play is to be presented March 13 and is the first play the Oakland High School Dramatic club has given this year for the benefit of the public. The daily rehearsals promise a comical and entertaining play. The wild creature in the form of Kitty is portrayed by Oliver Gnegy. The two good looking collegiate characters are Lloyd Bowers and Joe Welch. David Walter portrays excellently the character of a lazy negro porter. Clara Bell Hamill brings an element of vivacity and charm in the character of Jane. Tickets will be on sale in the near future. Everybody is urged to come and join in the laugh.

THE REPUBLICAN BEGINS ITS FIFTY-FIFTH YEAR

Today's Issue Marks Start On Another Milestone

With today's issue The Republican enters upon its fifty-fifth year, having been founded on February 28, 1877, the first number appearing the following Saturday, March 3, 1877. The Republican is not only the oldest newspaper in Garrett county but is likewise the earliest established business enterprise in the county that has gone on through the years uninterruptedly. The paper has had but two owners since it was established—the founder and the present proprietor.

Captain James A. Hayden, Mt. Lake Park, was its founder and was editor until July 4, 1890, when the present publisher purchased the plant.

Six persons are now kept quite busy in the office and printing plant in the publication of the paper and varied branches of printing operated in connection therewith.

The subscription list of Garrett county's leading newspaper has been growing steadily, having gained 34 new subscribers since the first of the year, and has been enjoying the largest circulation of any weekly paper published in this section.

The gospel message is truly good tidings, for God the Great King is offering to rebellious sinners salvation through Jesus Christ.

III. Jesus' Helpers (v. 1).

The twelve apostles were with him. The gospel preacher should utilize the help of others. Those who have heard the good tidings of the gospel glady join in preaching it to others.

IV. Jesus Supported by Saved Women (vv. 2, 3).

Certain women who had been saved from Satan's power, out of hearts of gratitude looked after the comfort of the Lord and his disciples. This throws light on how Christ and the apostles were supported.

V. Jesus Teaching (vv. 4-21).

Jesus was not only a gospel preacher but a great teacher. When the people from every city gathered unto Him, He taught them.

1. By the Parable of the Sower (vv. 4-15). (1) The sower was Jesus himself (Matt. 13:37). (2) The seed was the Word of God (v. 11). (3) The kinds of ground (vv. 5-15).

The kinds of ground show the condition of the human heart as the Word of God is preached.

a. The wayside (v. 5). The foottrodden path of the wayside pictures the hard-hearted hearers upon which no impression can be made. The word preached finds no entrance and Satan snatches it away as the birds pick up the grain from the hard-beaten path.

b. Stony ground (v. 6). This is not ground where stones are mixed with the earth, but a thin layer of earth in a ledge of rock. This pictures the hearer who receives the gospel with joy, but when persecutions and trials come, he gives up and deserts the company (v. 15).

c. Thorny ground (v. 7). The ground here is good, but it has thorns growing in it. This pictures those whose lives are fruitless because of being preoccupied with earthly cares, riches, and the pleasures of life (v. 14).

d. The good ground (v. 8). The seed here sprang up and bore fruit to the full measure. This is a picture of the honest heart which receives the gospel message and allows it to produce in its life a full harvest of grain (v. 15).

2. By the lighted candle (vv. 16-18). The Word of God is compared to a lamp or lighted candle. A lamp is of use only as it sends out light. One who hears God's Word and does not witness for Christ is as a lamp covered up.

3. Kinship with Jesus Christ (vv. 19, 20). Only those who receive the message of God's Word and render glad obedience to it can claim relationship with Christ.

VI. Jesus Performing Wonders (vv. 22-40).

1. Calming the storm (vv. 22-25). Jesus fell asleep while the disciples were sailing the ship. They were overtaken by an unusual storm and were affrighted. In response to their cry of distress Jesus arose and rebuked the storm, and likewise the disciples.

2. Casting out demons (vv. 26-39). When Jesus came into the country of the Gadarenes he was met by a demon-possessed man. Knowing their doom, the demons requested permission to enter a herd of swine. Jesus granted their request, after which the herd ran violently down a steep place into the lake. The effect upon the people was such that they besought Jesus to depart from them. The salvation of this man from demon possession ought to have awakened gratitude on the part of the people. The delivered man desired to be with the Lord. His request was refused because it was more important for him to make known to his friends at home the great deliverance which had come to him.

Only One Deliverer

No one into whose soul the iron of sin's bondage has entered can free either himself or others. Our emancipator must be one who is in fullest, uninterrupted communion with the Father, and comes, armed with his power, to break every yoke and bring liberty to the captives.—Alexander Maclaren.

Charming Outdoor Living Room Planted by Family of Spokane Wins Prize in Yard and Garden Contest.

The charming outdoor living room created with plants and flowers by Mr. and Mrs. Gus Ehrenberg and family, So. 1304 Cook Street, Spokane, Wash., has won first prize in The National Yard & Garden Contest (amateur division) according to word received today by Mrs. A. L. Lee, Chairman of the Oakland Yard and Garden Contest.

The national winner was chosen from hundreds of beautiful gardens, each a first prize winner in its own home town. Selection was made by photographs. All parts of the country were represented.

The Ehrenberg garden is striking proof that home grounds of surprising beauty and charm can be developed on the average sized city place. The lot has but a 50-foot frontage.

Really A Fairyland

In spite of its small area the Ehrenberg garden is a veritable fairyland of beautiful growing things. It is made colorful and interesting by almost every flower that blooms on the Pacific Coast. Perennial plants in exquisite variety, stately evergreens, shade and orchard trees, fruiting and flowering vines and a velvety carpet of soft green turf are all features of this prize-winning yard.

The Ehrenberg place is maintained with the most extreme care. One of the reasons why this is so is because the two sons of the family, Elliott and Allen, 14 and 12 years old respectively, are enthusiastic garden helpers. These junior gardeners are also Boy Scouts and they do their good turns daily in the yard, helping mother with her planting. They are healthy, stalwart lads, for they have been reared in the garden since infancy.

"The Lady of the Garden", pictured in the above illustration, is a talented song-writer as well as a garden lover. Her songs, over twenty in number, have been composed out in her beautiful garden, where the music of the birds is an ever present inspiration.

In spirit this prize winning garden is thoroughly modern. It was created in the first place because Mrs. Ehrenberg and her husband felt the need of beautiful home surroundings. Their comfortable and nicely furnished residence left them wanting more fresh air, greater freedom, and more soul-satisfying beauty.

And so they set to work, planting some trees for shade. They placed shrubs in masses along the lot borders and about the house foundations. They made an excellent selection of evergreens, utilizing their year-round decorative effect to nice advantage. They did not stint in their planting of flowers, finding how well the perennial varieties served their purpose. They left a sufficient open lawn area which Master Allen finds sport in keeping neatly trimmed and edged. Appropriately furnished, these home grounds provided the Ehrenbers with the outdoor room shown in the above illustration.

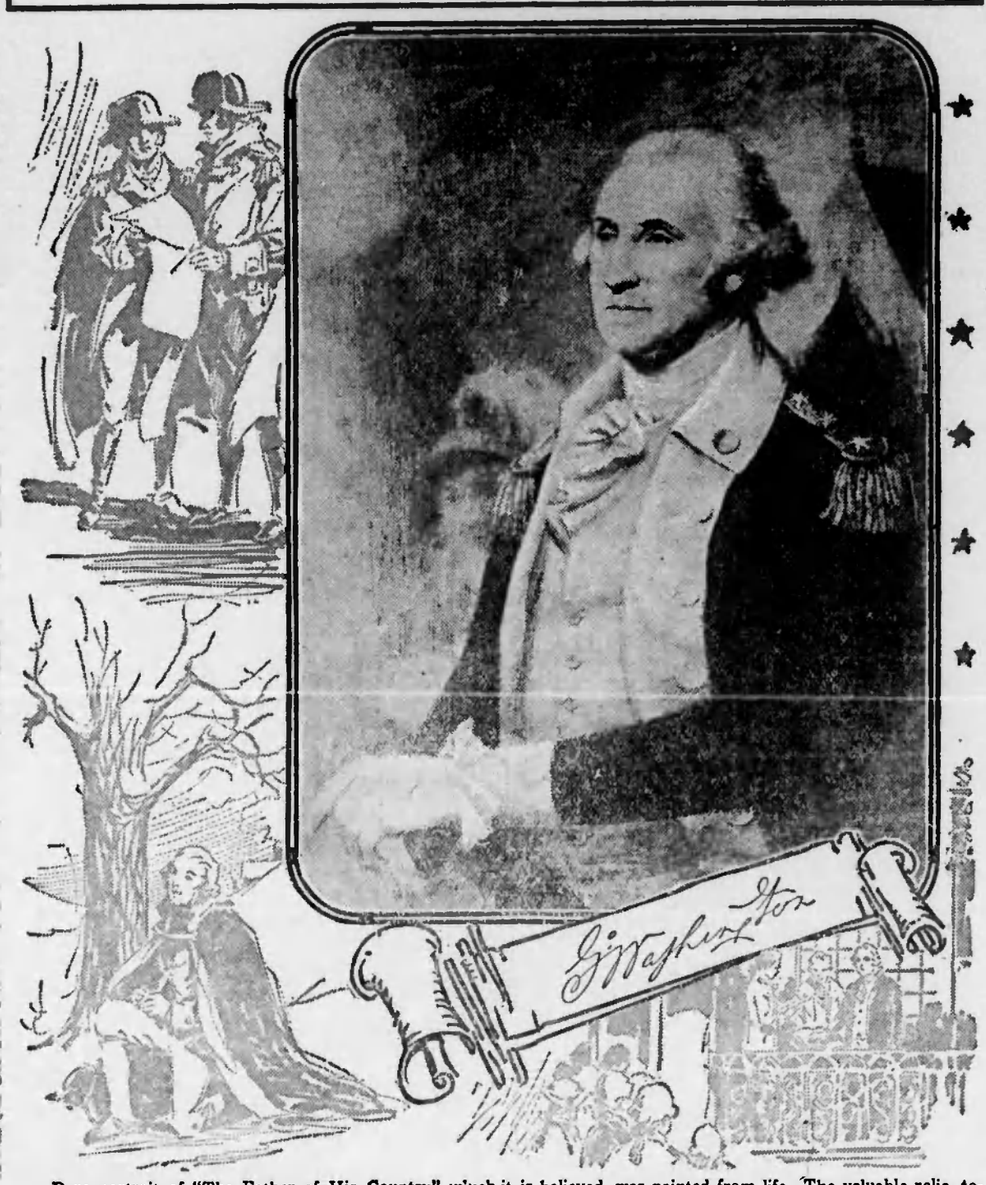
The BEST Gray Hair Remedy is Home Made

To half pint of water add one ounce bayrum, a small box of Barbo Compound and one-fourth ounce of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. It will gradually darken streaked, faded or gray hair and make it soft and glossy. Barbo will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.

INTERESTING PORTRAIT OF GEORGE WASHINGTON, IN MUSEUM OF THE UNIVERSITY OF VIRGINIA



Rare portrait of "The Father of His Country" which,it is believed, was painted from life. The valuable relic, together with several other portraits, is the nucleus of a museum at the University of Virginia, under the terms of the will of Mrs. Louis McLane Tiffany of Baltimore. The picture was owned for years by succeeding generations of the Custis family and until recently was kept at Mount Custis, in Accomac county, Virginia. Although it was originally thought to have been painted from life, by George Willson Peale, it is now believed to be the work of the latter's son, Rembrandt Peale.

A Star in the West

THERE'S a star in the west that shall never go down
Till the record of valor decay;
We must worship its light though it is not our own,
For liberty burst in its ray.
Shall the name of a Washington ever be heard
By a freeman, and thrill not his breast?
Is there one out of bondage that hails not the word
As the Bethlehem Star of the West?

OH, HIS laurels were pure! and his patriot name
In the page of the future shall dwell.
And be seen in all annals, the foremost in fame,
By the side of a Hofer and Tell.
The truthful and honest, the wise and the good,
Among the Britons have nobly confessed
That his was the glory, and ours
was the blood,
Of the deeply stained fields of the West.

Washington "Key Man" of Revolution

British officers and English civilians in America at the time of the revolution considered George Washington the "key man" of the war.

Letters in the collection of papers of Lord George Germain, recently brought to the William Clements library at Ann Arbor, Mich., by Regent W. L. Clements, contain many references to the American leader.

Many of the letters present to Lord Germain the thought that Washington might conclude to end the war if "properly approached," using that term in its modern meaning. No suggestion is made at any time in the letters that any of these suggestions were acted upon or that Washington was aware of their existence.

Monk Case Cited.

That Washington should be allowed to see the resemblance between his own case and that of George Monk, who, following the death of Cromwell, so maneuvered things that Charles II regained his crown as king of England, was suggested in a letter written in 1778 by Sir John Dalrymple.

'accounts of General Washington's character there is a resemblance in his character and General Monk's, for he is silent, keeps his mind to himself, has plain understanding, and is a man of principle," was Sir John's description.

"Besides this, he has no son, daughter, brother or sister, so that his ambition must be limited to himself. Charles II owed his kingdom to the personal application of Monk, delivered by one of Monk's own friends.

"Might not the ministers, treating by the king's command, or the king himself, write a private letter to Washington to remind him of the similarity between his situation and Monk's, desiring him to ask terms for America fair and just, and they should be granted, and that the terms for himself should be the dukedom that was given to Monk, and a revenue to support it in order to give dignity to the man who generously gave up his own power to save his country.

Go-Between Named.

"If the minister has not a man whom he can trust with such a commission, I can find one. I mean Mr. Lloyd Delancy, the bosom friend of General Washington, a man of fortune in Maryland, now in London; two of whose family are now with General Howe, and who has given proof of his secrecy, as he was one of those who knew of a scheme of mine relating to the paper money of America."

Monk's reward from Charles II, mentioned by Dalrymple, was the title of baron, earl of Torrington and the duke of Albemarle. The titles carried a pension of seven thousand pounds a year, a princely sum in the days of Charles II and also of Washington. The patent of nobility accorded Monk the honor of being "victor without bloodshed."

"Not Equal to Stratagems."

Honest but not equal to stratagems is the opinion held of Washington by Jonathan Boucher, Baltimore, writing November 27, 1775.

"I know him well and can say of him what I can of few of his compeers; That I believe him an honest man," says Boucher in a letter discussing the Colonies. "In a military line it is not possible his merit can be considerable. He will, however, atone for many demerits by the extraordinary coolness and caution which distinguishes his character. With but little personal experience and still less reading, a thousand difficulties must daily occur to him. He should be plied with these; I mean he should be perplexed and confounded with stratagems. In a regular action he may by his steadiness and extreme care acquit himself well, but against the maneuvers of art I am satisfied he is defenseless."

Urges Purchase With Honors.

Writing in 1780, when much of the War of the Revolution had been fought, Sir George Sidney, an admiral stationed at some port in the West Indies, suggested honors as a means of the purchase of Washington. He also makes a suggestion that a commission of civilians rather than of military men might have larger success in ending the war.

"The northern colonies should feel the fatal results of their treason," says the positive-speaking sea commander. "There and there only the war must be finished. I cannot conclude without being of the opinion that a new commission, with the same powers as Lord Carlisle's, taking care the majority of the commissioners are not military men, may have such an effect as to bring about peace. Washington is certainly to be bought —honors will do it."

Viewed as Dictator.

The final reference to Washington in the letters is unsigned, is dated 1781 and is in the handwriting of Germain. Its context indicates it was a discussion of the condition in the Colonies prepared for presentation either to the king or the ministry.

In speaking of the Colonies the memorandum says:

"They appear to be under the control of their general (Washington), who becomes every day more independent of the congress as he more closely connects himself with France; how long such a government can exist it is impossible to say, but the restless spirit of the people and the regret they feel for the loss of that liberty which they thought they were fighting for, their dislike of a military government, their natural aversion to the French nation, may incline them to return to their connection with this country, if we remain in a situation to receive and protect them."

GARRETT IS YOUNGEST, HIGHEST, AND ONE OF THE LARGEST MD. COUNTIES; YOUGH RIVER DRAINS COUNTY

Garrett county is among the three largest counties in the State of Maryland. It is also the youngest, having been erected with the territory taken from Allegany county in 1874.

The early settlers were mostly German, English and a few Irish, coming mainly from Pennsylvania. The present population is largely descended from these original settlers.

Few Foreigners in County

Due to cold winters there are very few Negroes in the county and very few people of foreign birth. The population is all classed as rural by the census, there being no town with 2,500 or more inhabitants.

The mountain sections are sparsely settled. The greater part of the population is engaged in farming, mining and lumbering.

Four Mountain Ranges Cut County

There are four prominent mountain ridges in the county, all having a northeast-southwest trend. The most prominent is Backbone Mountain, and its continuation as Big Savage Mountain, the two being separated by the gorge of Savage River. Meadow Mountain runs west of Backbone Mountain. Big Savage Mountain runs about half the length of the county and has an elevation of 2,800 feet.

Between Meadow Mountain and Big Savage Mountain there is a succession of irregular shaped hills. Near the southern end of Meadow Mountain these hills are rather rough and rugged, being covered to some extent with forest, but in the northern part the hills are not as rough and there good farm lands are found.

Winding Ridge, with its extention of hills along the Youghiogheny River, forms the fourth principal elevation in the county. This ridge is conspicuous because of its relatively low elevation and numerous breaks in which it contrasts sharply with the other mountains of the county.

Yough and Other Rivers Drain Co.

The county is drained by the Youghiogheny River, a tributary of the Monongahela; the North Branch of the Potomac, Savage and Castleman rivers and their tributaries.

The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, which was built through Garrett county about the middle of the 19th century, affords a good outlet east and west. The transportation requirements of the northwestern section are taken care of by the Confluence and Kendall branch of the B. & O. R. R., which follows the Youghiogheny River south to a short distance below Friendsville. The Preston Railroad crosses the southwestern part of the county and connects with the B. & O. at Hutton. The Western Maryland Railroad follows the North Branch of the Potomac River, furnishing transportation for the part of the county east of Backbone Mountain.

In Memory of My Father, J. W. McCullough

He walked life's pathway unafraid,
So calm in every test;
Cheerful always—ever giving
To his fellow-man his best.

His life was spent in service sweet
For fellow-creatures here;
His bounteous heart was filled with love—
There was no room for fear.

Still in the path of duty,
Still meeting every test—
His feet they grew so weary that
He laid him down to rest.

We need a courage like his own
To know as we go on
Through hours dark and lonely
That some time comes the dawn.

With wounded hearts, yet full of hope,
We'll trust in Him who said:
"He who loseth his life shall find it,"
And we know he is not dead.

JOHN W. M'CULLOUGH

Memorial Adopted by the Board of Directors of Friendsville Bank

At a recent meeting of the Board of Directors of the First Nationl Bank of Friendsville, the following preamble and resolution memorializing the late John W. McCullough, a director of the institution, were presented and adopted:

In the death of John W. McCullough the officers and directors of the First National Bank of Friendsville are again reminded of the uncertainty of human existence; that physical and intellectual vigor are but temporary gifts and that the time for achievement and beneficence must end.

It is comforting to reflect that though the builder may pass the building remains; the giver fade, but the gift is kept, and "to live in hearts we leave behind is not to die."

His associates in this institution recognized in him a valued counsellor of sound business ability, a real man, sympathetic and helpful; be it therefore

RESOLVED, That the Board of Directors of the First National Bank of Friendsville has lost an esteemed colleague, a faithful adviser and a true friend; that while we are loath to part with such a faithful and appreciative co-worker, we bow in humble submission to the Divine will; that a copy of this resolution be spread upon the minutes of this Bank, a copy be sent to the family of the deceased and a copy be sent to each of the county papers.

Mr. Geo. Williams

"For four years I suffered from sour stomach and constipation," said Mr. George A. Williams, 26 Orchard St., Cumberland, Md. to one of the Dreco Experts. My tongue was coated and I always felt tired out.

"My only relief came when I tried the Dreco treatment. Since I've taken the treatment I have almost forgotten what it is to feel badly.

"Dreco Hi-speed tablets regulated my bowels and did away with that tired worn out feeling."

The new Ford is an economical car to own and drive

Low first cost, low cost of operation and up-keep, and low yearly depreciation mean a distinct saving to every purchaser

THE NEW FORD is a splendid car to own and drive because of its attractive lines and colors, safety, comfort, speed, reliability and long life.

There are, in addition, three other features of importance to every far-seeing automobile owner . . . low first cost, low cost of operation and up-keep, and low yearly depreciation.

During the life of the car, the day-by-day economy of owning a Ford will amount to considerably more than the saving on the first cost. You save when you buy the Ford and you save every mile you drive.

The reasons for this economy are simplicity of design, high quality of materials and care in manufacturing and assembling. Many vital parts are made to limits of one one-thousandth of an inch. Some to three ten-thousandths of an inch. Throughout, the new Ford is an outstanding example of fine craftsmanship in automobile engineering.

The more you see of the new Ford—the more you talk to Ford owners and experienced mechanics—the more certain you become of this fact. . . . It brings you everything you want or need in a motor car at an unusually low price.

PNEUMONIA TAKES HEAVY TOLL IN MARYLAND

Only Two Causes Have Taken A Higher Toll of Human Lives

One of the most unwelcome visitors to any home—pneumonia—has been responsible for 20,000 reported cases of illness in Maryland during the last five years. During the same period, it has caused nearly 11,000 deaths—one out of every ten reported in the State, from all causes, and at all ages. Only two causes have taken a higher toll of human lives—diseases of the heart and of the kidneys, The latter have first and second places, respectively, as causes of death in the State. Pneumonia has third place and cancer fourth. Tuberculosis, which for many years had first place, now stands fifth.

"Pneumonia is like a huge giant that stands waiting to pounce down on human beings as soon as their powers of resistance are lowered", Dr. R. H. Riley, Director of the State Department of Health said, calling attention to the precautions that should be taken, following attacks of grippe, influenza, and other diseases that leave the system weakened and that open the way for even more serious ailments.

"Increases in pneumonia may be expected", he continued, "whenever we have serious outbreaks of influenza or grippe, unless precautions to prevent after-effects are taken by those who are ill, or who care for the sick. Measles and other infectious diseases, including neglected colds, open the way for it also. The neglected cold is one of the most treacherous diseases we can have.

"A recently published cartoon pictures the neglected cold as a tiny creature, an apparent weakling, crawling through a keyhole and unlocking the door of the wall of physical resistance for the giant of pneumonia. The picture tells the story we all need to learn.

"The best safeguard against pneumonia and the diseases that open the way to it, is physical fitness. To strengthen your resistance to diseases, keep your digestion in good trim by eating simple, wholesome food. Avoid indigestible combinations. Take [illegible] which you work, well ventilated. Avoid crowds and crowded places.

"Dress according to the weather. Keep well protected against the cold and wet. Avoid chilling of the body. A chill following exposure to the cold, lowers the resistance of the protective mucous membrane of the mouth, nose and throat, making it easier for the pneumonia germ to reach the bronchial tubes and the lungs."

Maryland Certified Seed Potatoes Still Available

Although the potato crop in the State was considerably shortened by the drought, particularly on the Eastern Shore where only about one-third of a normal yield was harvested, approximately 17,000 bushels of high-grade stock were certified in 1930, a considerable proportion of which is still available for spring planting, according to Dr. R. A. Jehle, assistant plant pathologist for the Extension Service of the University of Maryland.

Dr. Jehle reports that a total of the following varieties were certified: 5,073 bushels of Rural Russets; 1,115 bushels of Smooth Rurals; 9,750 bushels of Cobblers; 970 bushels of Green Mountains and a few McCormicks.

However, most of the Cobblers have been sold, or will be used by the owners for seed purposes, so anyone desiring this variety should get in touch with the growers as soon as possible. Sources of available seed may be learned from J. H. Carter, County Agent, for Garrett county, located at Oakland.

Dr. Jehle points out that tests have shown Maryland-grown certified seed to be just as good, and in some cases better, as any grown in northern States and that there is no necessity for going outside of the State for seed potatoes as long as the supply holds out.

EZEKIEL MERRILL

Ezekiel Merrill, aged 55 years, native of Oakland and son of the late William Merrill, died in a Cleveland (O.) hospital Sunday after a long illness. MT. LAKE PARK

Capt. James A. Hayden will be 89 years of age on the 20th of this month. Sometimes a phrase used in connection with citizens is over-worked and becomes shop-worn. But we can think of no better description of Capt. Hayden than to refer to him as "the Grand Old Man of Mountain Lake Park." In the years that have come and gone since he first made his home here in the Park, many changes have taken place. But the Captain has not changed, except physically. He has always been affable, courteous, kindly, a gentleman of the old school. For some months he has been confined to his home by ills incident to advancing years, but his many friends hope that they will again have the pleasure of tendering him congratulations on succeeding birthdays.

Rev. and Mrs. I. S. Middaugh have returned from a motor trip to St. Mary's West Va.

Mr. and Mrs. E. O. Fouch have both been ill the past few days with attacks of influenza. While Mr. Fouch has been off duty Mr. James Elliott substituted for him as operator at the B. & O. tower here at the Park.

Mr. Frank E. Baker, superintendent of the Park, was here last Thursday to attend a meeting of the committee recently appointed in connection with the proposition to change the form of government for the Community.

Mr. and Mrs. John O. Morgan recently spent a day at Fairmont, W. Va. On their return Mr. Morgan left for his lumber operations in Preston county, W. Va.

Mr. Jack Grimes was in the Park for a day recently.

Mr. Curtis B. Fleming was a recent visitor with his son, H. H. Fleming, who is ill.

Mr. Robert Shinn, of Lexington, Ky., stopped at the Park a few hours on Monday calling on relatives and friends on his way home from Washington where he was called by the death of his father, Charles M. Shinn, veteran telegraph operator of the Washington Star.

Miss Norma Welling, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wiley W. Welling, is quite ill at her home here in the Park.

Miss Kathleen Bishop has returned from a visit to relatives in Fairmont, West Va.

[illegible] of the Park, and Miss Opal [illegible] of Cincinnati, Ohio, spent a few days of this week visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Turney.

There were some few cases of mild attacks of influenza about the Park during recent days. We haven't felt very darn good ourselves, having been housed up for about a week. That goes for Mr. J. A. Enlow, too.

Now then, the weather. We are having some brand approaching the spring-like variety, with steady rains which is filling the earth and thus replenishing the springs that have held out notwithstanding the long continued drought.

The Ladies' Aid Society is offering a substantial dinner for fifty cents on Thursday evening, beginning at 5:30, in the basement of the M. E. church. Everybody invited.

Mr. J. A. Enlow passed the 81st milestone on life's journey last Saturday, the 14th. He is one of the pioneers in the location and establishment of Mountain Lake Park and has been closely identified with its community and religious life. Genial in disposition and kindly in his relationships with his fellowmen, he has a host of friends who wish him continued life, health and prosperity.

BUDGET ACCEPTABLE; THE OYSTER QUESTION UP NOW

der average. But there are at all times a sufficiency, and with care on the part of the authorities, with restrictions as to size, and with the proper enforcement of the law requiring shells to be returned to the places from which they were taken, there will always be plenty of oysters in the bay and its tributaries. All of these outcries about the destruction of the oyster crops are propaganda put forward in the interest of those who desire to gain possession of the vast areas of the bay and its tributaries for their own selfish purpose and to deprive the people, who have for centuries, inherited the common right of fishery, both for shell fish as well as for all other products of the bay and the rivers of the state. It is the hereditary right of all the people of the British Islands and their descendants from the dawn of history. It was a prominent provision of the charter granted by England to this and all other colonies—it is a sacred hereditary right, not only to the inhabitants of all English colonies, but also to all the colonies of other nations. It was a right granted by Rome to all her colonies in the days of the ancient empire of the Caesars. The French Crown granted the common right of fishery to her colonists and they have it this day. All the Spanish colonies were granted the common right of fishery all down the Atlantic and Pacific coasts of Mexico, Central America and South America, the old Spanish common right of fishery pres to this day. In fact wherever tide ebbs and flows in all parts the civilized world and even a the savage coasts of the seven the common right of fishery has killed, and with the exception of a isolated places in the United St prevails to this day. Monopolie fishing rights have been held c for war and revolutions, whe attempted, and except in this have never been tolerated. dawn of history the people shores of rivers, bays, sea all the oceans, in the islands, p sulas and coasts of Asia, Africa urope and North and South Ame and even in the Australian colo they have always protected the ellers on the shores in their comm right. And over the entire vast e se of the Seven Seas prevails to day the hereditary right to fish take from the waters the produ f the waves.

And the people who dwe n the shores of Maryland's great y and its tributaries have inher this right. It was granted to t fore-fathers by the English Kin harles I, on June 2, 1632. It has cher-ished as one of their mo sacred rights to the present day d all efforts to deprive them of or to abridge it, have failed and ld fail throughout the all future t

It gives the writer grea easure to say that the Garrett dele on has made an excellent impres here. The members have all t their places and are ready to do r duty as representatives of the g mountain county of Western Ma nd. Senator McComas is espe y popular with his associates. Thurs-day of last week at the gre Lincoln memorial banquet at th merson Hotel in Baltimore, he w onored with a seat at the table n Mrs. Broening, the highly ac olished wife of the Mayor of Balt e, who expressed to your corresp nt her pleasure at meeting the co Senator from Garrett county.

[illegible] of the [illegible] of the Maryland [illegible] the initial step was taken in the House of Delegates yesterday to lop off thirty days from the time and increase the pay of members.

Joint Session Held

The fight on the judges was shunted into the background in the House early in the afternoon, prior to a joint session to hear an address by John Stewart Bryan, Virginia editor.

The Senate session was listless, marked by introducing of several local bills, two of which carried authorization for aggregate bond issues for $1,000,000 for road construction in Somerset county.

The Senate passed three bills which reorganized the State Comptroller's in line with action taken at the last session of the General Assembly, revised the State militia act and making the State merit system apply to World War veterans and their families.

Would Cut Assembly Sessions

The Nicodemus measure introduced in the House would cut the biennial assembly session from 90 to 60 days and grant an increase from $5 to $10 in the daily pay of members and from $8 to $15 per day of the presiding officers.

It took the form of a Constitutional Amendment, which must be submitted to the voters of the State at the next general election. The slash in the session length was the first time such a move has been made, veterans of the Assembly said.

Another pay increase bill, which also was in the form of a Constitutional Amendment, was introduced earlier in the session by Delegate Alexander Goodman, of Baltimore City, and it boosted the members' pay to $15 per day and the presiding officers to $25 per day.

Would Amend Divorce Law

One of the five grounds for divorce in Maryland would be removed under provisions of a measure introduced by Delegate Melvin Farrington, of Prince George's county.

The bill, identical with one beaten at the last session of the Assembly, would remove as grounds for divorce unchastity of the wife before her marriage, unknown to the husband before the ceremony was performed.

Financial aid for churches, hospitals, asylums and charity organizations, in the form of tax exemption, is sought in a bill introduced by Delegate John T. Backman, of Baltimore City, by request.

In Philadelphia, William R. Crisley has quit his broker's job to try and win a bet made sometime ago that during 1931 he would dine with President Hoover, play golf with Bobbie Jones, Prince of Wales and John D. Rockefeller, Sr.

Baked Ham

Eight to ten pound cured ham, ¾ cupful brown sugar, 1 teaspoonful cinnamon, about 18 to 24 cloves.

Wipe off the surface of the ham with a cloth dampened in cold water. Make a small incision through the thickest section of the ham and insert a meat thermometer so that the bulb reaches the center. Place in a slow oven (300 degrees F.), and allow ½ hour for each pound. One hour before the ham is finished baking, or when the thermometer registers 168 degrees F., remove it from the oven. During the roasting the skin will looses, and it should now be slipped off. Mix the sugar and cinnamon, and rub them over the surface. Score the fat. In the center of each diamond which is formed stick a clove. Return the ham to the oven and complete the baking. Remove to a large platter, garnish attractively and carve at the table. Allow 25 minutes to the pound for a 10-12 pound one.

Ham and Pineapple Sandwiches

Grind any left-over portion of ham that has been cooked. Mix with mayonnaise and spread between two slices of pineapple. Cut the resulting sandwich in half and serve on crisp head lettuce leaf.

Scalloped Potatoes and Ham

Order about a 2 pound slice of smoked ham cut 1 inch thick. Place in the bottom of a well-greased bake dish. On it place a layer of sliced raw potatoes and sprinkle with flour, pepper and some chopped fresh green pepper. Repeat until about 2½ pounds of potatoes, and 3 tablespoonsful flour have been used. Pour enough hot milk over all to almost cover. Cover the bake dish, bake in a moderately hot oven (350 degrees F.) for 1½ hours, remove cover and continue baking about ½ hour until surface is a delicate brown. Serve very hot. Care should be taken to select a bake dish large enough so that the liquid will not boil over.

NIMBLE DOLLARS

When a person pays a debt to an individual or firm he starts a series of similar payments that are helpful to many people and to business generally. When he withholds payment his act has just the opposite effect in preventing others from meeting their obligations and thus impeding the activities on which the prosperity of everyone depends.

We all realize this in a general way, but it takes an actual example to drive home this lesson. An experiment of this kind was made recently by the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, which placed in circulation three $50 checks donated by a wealthy member of the organization. One check was turned over to the Salvation Army, another to a welfare society and the third to a widow who was out of employment. The only stipulation was that the checks be used for the purpose of settling financial obligations, and that they be not deposited in a bank but indorsed from one holder to another, so that their record might be kept. At the end of sixty days the three $50 checks will have cancelled a total of $15,000 of indebtedness, according to the sponsors of the plan.

Similar demonstrations are familiar to us. There is a man who prefers to be known as "Dollar Bill," who goes about the country showing what one dollar will accomplish. He was in Oregon a year or so ago and made a demonstration in Astoria and perhaps other cities, circulating a dollar bill, with paper attached for indorsements of all through whose hands it passed. The number of small accounts it settled and purchases it made was surprising.

Just now, when we are getting back on the road to better times, it is well to heed the lesson of such experiments. If all of us would determine not to stretch our credit beyond the due date, when we are able to pay, things would go into high gear very quickly. It is a program that can be regarded as selfish or altruistic and gets by either way. When we pay, others can pay, and the dollars eventually trickle back to us in debt payments or in the purchase of goods or in employment, as the case may be. Each dollar sent on its way legitimately is a round-robin of prosperity. —Portland Oregonian.

Beyond the County

From Washington, it is announced that the Rapidan river, in Virginia, on which President Hoover built his week-end fishing camp, has gone dry and even the supply of drinking water at the camp has failed.

In Baltimore the United States District Attorney's office is investigating eight deaths and the illness of several others as the result of drinking poison liquor.

At Richmond, Va., a delegation from Prince Edward county proposed to Governor Pollard that an extra session of the General Assembly be called to consider the immediate diversion of all highway construction funds to county feeder roads as a means of relief to farmers.

At Baltimore, at a Communist riot, to quel which reserves answered six riot calls, two policemen were badly beaten, four men and a woman were arrested, while thousands of spectators gathered.

In Washington, by a vote of 363 to 39, the House passed the Bacharach bill, raising the loan value of veterans' adjustment certificates from 22½ percent to 50 percent and limiting the interest rate to 4½ percent. The bill now goes to the Senate.

In Baltimore a still has been seized in an old warehouse having a capacity of 2500 gallons per day, one of the largest captured in that city.

In Baldwin City, Kansas, Helen Beauchamp, while looking from a window of her sorority house, was stricken blind by lightning, her optic nerves being paralyzed. She can now close her eyes.

At Springfield, Ill., J. H. Edgerly, 92, a spy for the Union forces during the Civil War, called by President Abraham Lincoln "The Flea", because of his ability to move quickly, is living and still active.

At Baltimore, King Prajahipok, ruler of Siam, will enter Johns Hopkins for the purpose of having an operation performed for the removal of a cataract.

In Chicago, in order to speed up traffic in and out of the down town section and to save motorists thirty minutes, the city has spent 20 million dollars in the last five years. Street fronts of office buildings have been sliced off, sections have been cut off of warehouses and pilings driven into the sands.

At Fairmont, in a moment of insanity, Berton N. Vincent (known to have been mentally unbalanced for several years) shot and fatally wounded himself and wife with a shot gun.

At Charleston, W. Va., the House of Delegates passed two measures to abolish the Dry Law Department, lodging the enforcement of the dry laws with the sate, county and local police.

In Marion county, W. Va., hydrophobia quarantine notices have been posted at Fairview and Ida May, by Dr. A. C. Traugh of the State Department of Agriculture, after the heads of dogs which had attacked children at the two places, had been examined and found to indicate rabies.

At Fairmont, a man half shot, pleaded with a policeman to be shot, was accommodated by being shot into a cell at the local police station.

What is said to be the largest collection of newspapers in the world has been opened to the public in a newspaper museum at Aix-la-Chapelle, Germany. Among its collection of 150,000 newspapers are curiosities from all over the world, including an Eskimo paper from the middle of last century.

TESTIMONY IN SEAT TEST GIVEN TO STATE SENATE

Wicomico Magistrate Transmits Documents In Tilghman-Ward Contested Election Case

NOW UP TO COMMITTEE

Annapolis, Feb. 24—The Senate late today received the testimony in the Tilghman-Ward election contest in which William B. Tilghman, Republican, seeks the seat in the Upper House of Senator David J. Ward, Democrat, of Wicomico county.

Delegate Jones, Wicomico, designated by S. King White, a Wicomico magistrate, to bring the sealed evidence to Annapolis, gave the document to Walter J. Mitchell, president of the Senate.

The opponent of Senator Ward, who was certified as having been elected by a margin of nine votes, alleges irregularities in the counting of the ballots and tabulation.

Twenty-Nine Witnesses Appeared

Twenty-nine witnesses, including election officials of both parties and members of the board of canvassers, testified before Magistrate White. The testimony was transmitted under seal to the Senate.

Counsel for both sides request the elections committee to set next Thursday for argument. Mr. Tilghman will be represented by William I. Norris, Baltimore, a former president of the Senate, and by Stanlyey G. Robins, Salisbury. Hooper S. Miles and Levin Claude Bailey, of Salisbury, are counsel for Senator Ward.

May Open Ballot Boxes

The elections committee will decide whether any of the ballot boxes shall be sent to Annapolis, opened and the votes recounted.

The elections committee is composed of nine senators. Senator McComas of Garrett, is a member of the committee.

Civil Marriage Bill Again Introduced

The civil marriage bill, again seeking the right for municipal officials to perform the marriage ceremony in all parts of Maryland, was introduced in the lower branch of the General Assembly tonight by Delegate Emanuel Gorfine, Democrat, Baltimore City.

Under the measure introduced by the Baltimore City delegate, any judge or clerk of court of record, or the mayor of any incorporated municipality in the State would be authorized to perform marriages, a right now vested in the clergy only.

The measure did not include the justices of the peace in that class of persons who would have the right to perform the marriage rites as they would have had under the similar measure introduced at the 1929 session of the Assembly. At that time the bill was defeated.

Delayed in action by the most heated and closest debate of the current season, brought about when the purse net bill was brought to the floor of the House, the general assembly yesterday passed a score of measures and saw twice that many introduced.

The House introduced measures which would limit and define the state liability of airplane owners engaged in commercial transportation, providing a pension for the family of an Annapolis man, killed by state game wardens, and a revision of the license fees charges for motor vehicles.

Would Provide Bridge Fund

The Senate, before both bodies adjourned until noon today, received measures providing for a spread of the gasoline tax fund for the construction of bridges and creation of a statewide criminal identification bureau.

The House passed measures authorizing an increase in the Baltimore City police department, a city loan for construction of a central court building and local laws affecting several of the counties.

An addition of one month to the open season on shad and herring was provided in bills reported by both House and Senate committees, and the purse net measure, designed to curb commercial fishermen in the Chesapeake Bay weathered a storm in the House on committee reports and was placed on the calendar for final passage in the House.

A measure introduced by Delegate Marshall T. Heaps, of Harford county, with the backing of the State Roads Commission, would change the system of making surveys for state highways.

COUNTY-WIDE DEBATE TO BE HELD AMONG SCHOOLS

Preliminary Plans For Contest Are Announced in Letter to High School Principals

DATE-PLACE NOT DECIDED

Preliminary plans for a county-wide debating contest among the high schools of the county was announced by F. E. Rathbun, superintendent of schools, in a letter addressed to county high school principals and assistant teachers.

Suggestion was made that the Wiekersham Report would present an excellent topic for discussion, and the present plan would be that a boy or girl representing a high school should have the privilege of taking either side of the question for a five or seven minute discussion. Other questions for discussion will be suggested by school principals.

The date and place of rendering the program has not been decided upon. Last year the contest was held at Grantsville, with representatives of the three northern schools of the county defeating the representatives of the three southern schools.

The cashiers of the Garrett National Bank and The First National Bank of Oakland, have sponsored the debates in past years, and will probably continue in this capacity.

Preliminary debates will be held in each of the six schools, Grantsville, Friendsville, Accident, Kitzmiller, Kempton and Oakland, to determine who the school representatives shall be. The contest will be open to both boys and girls, it was stated.

ROSA FELDA, CARRIE HARVEY HELD; ANALYSIS OF MAN'S STOMACH SHOWS EVIDENCE OF STRYCHNINE POISONING

Death of Michael Felda, At His Home On Sunday, February 8, Caused by Moonshine Liquor Which Contained A Large Quantity of Strychnine, Mrs. Felda and Mrs. Carrie Harvey Being Accused By The Coroner's Jury With Having Knowledge of Presence of Drug in Liquor

ARE IN OAKLAND JAIL CHARGED WITH MURDER

Mrs. Rosa Felda and Mrs. Carrie Harvey, the former of near Wilson Station, on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, ten miles east of Oakland, and the latter residing at the top of the mountain above Kitzmiller, three or four miles from Wilson, are in the Garrett County Jail at Oakland charged with the murder of Michael Felda, husband of Mrs. Felda, at their home on February 8, following a verdict of a coroner's jury of inquest, which reconvened yesterday morning at the office of W. A. Gonder, Justice of the Peace. Henry M. Speicher, of Accident, was foreman of the jury which was summoned by Sheriff Haenftling on Monday, February 9, and after viewing the remains of Felda recessed until yesterday. The two women will be given a preliminary hearing within the next few days should they demand it.

At the meeting of the jury on February 9th the stomach of Felda was removed and sent to Baltimore where an analysis of its contents was made by Penniman and Browne. The report of the chemists showed that it contained almost five grains of strychnine, or enough to kill several people, according to statements made by Dr. E. E. Sollars and other witnesses who were present at the autopsy.

One of the two bottles of liquor, which were found in the Felda home, was also said by the chemists to contain a very large amount of strychnine, while the second bottle contaained no poison at all.

The strychnine was purchased on February 6 at Sturgiss' Pharmacy in Oakland by Mrs. Felda, who signed her name to the register required by law to be signed by those purchasing poison as Mrs. Rosa McRobie, and who stated the drug was to be used for killing rats and squirrels.

Dr. E. E. Sollars Testifies

Dr. E. E. Sollars, of Deer Park and Kempton, was the principal witness before the coroner's jury when it met yesterday morning at the office of Justice W. A. Gonder, acting coroner.

Dr. Sollars testified that he went to the Felda house about 6:30 o'clock on Sunday evening, February 8, and found the man lying on the floor with Mrs. Harvey bending over him trying to talk to him and attempting to restore circulation by rubbing his arms.

He said the man's eyes were dilated and his mouth and throat in such condition that he was sure something worse than moonshine liquor had been the cause of his death. The expression on the man's face, Dr. Sollars said, showed that he had suffered the most extreme agony while in the throes of death.

Those in the Felda house stated that he had suffered violent convulsions just before he died.

Mrs. Harvey, the wife of "Western Bill" Harvey, is being held as an accomplice along with Mrs. Felda, because it is alleged by authorities and admitted by Mrs. Felda that she furnished the liquor and placed it, after the poison had been added, where the dead man would be sure of getting it.

Following the man's death, Dr. Sollars notified Walter W. Dawson, the State's Attorney of Garrett county, who with Sheriff W. H. Haenftling investigated the matter resulting in the summoning of a jury of inquest and the subsequent arrest of the two women.

It was brought out at the hearing before the coroner's jury that Felda, after he had swallowed some of the contents of the bottle realized that the liquor had been doctored, accused both women by saying, "Rosa, you and Carrie have poisoned me." He then took the two bottles of liquor, it is said, and gave them into the possession of Frank McRobie, his father-in-law, who was ill in bed, telling him to keep them until the authorities arrived, as he was sure he had been poisoned. Mr. McRobie is a Civil War veteran, and has reached the age of over 85 years.

Shortly after Felda had given the liquor to Mr. McRobie, Felda was taken with convulsions and frequently called for water. Dr. Sollars was then summoned, but Felda was dead when he arrived at the house.

An autopsy was performed by Dr. Henry W. McComas and Dr. Sollars on Monday, February 9, the day following Felda's death, when his stomach was removed and sent to Baltimore for the purpose of having an analysis made of its contents. The report of the chemists was received yesterday by State's Attorney Dawson and showed conclusively that Felda had died of strychnine poisoning.

The jury of inquest was recalled early yesterday morning and after hearing the testimony and reading the report from the Baltimore office, the jury retired to Coroner Gonder's office and made the report that after inquiring into all the circumstances surrounding the death of Michael Felda it was found that his death had resulted from strychnine poisoning, administered by Rosa Felda and Carrie Harvey.

Following the finding by the jury, warrants were immediately issued for the arrest of the two women charging them with murder. Mrs. Felda had been brought to the Garrett County Jail on Monday by Sheriff Haenftling and State's Attorney Dawson. At the time she was taken into custody as a suspect she was at Gleason, W. Va., visiting at the home of a relative, Jesse Paugh.

Mrs. Harvey was apprehended at her home above Kitzmiller yesterday afternoon by Sheriff Haenftling and was brought to Oakland and is being held in Jail along with Mrs. Felda.

Those in the house at the time of Felda's death were Mr. and Mrs. Frank McRobie, parents of Mrs. Felda; Mrs. Anna Hayes, daughter of Mrs. Felda, Mrs. Felda and Mrs. Harvey.

F. Luther McRobie, a brother of Mrs. Felda, was found dead in bed about eighteen months ago. The coroner's jury rendered a verdict that he died from acute alcoholism. Since the death of Felda the alleged cause of McRobie's death has been scouted and it may be that the body will be exhumed and an analysis made of the contents of the stomach if is deemed possible to do so by the authorities.

WASHINGTON'S WRITINGS SHOW RELIGIOUS ATTITUDE

Had High Regard For Religious Practices and Encouraged Recognition of God's Goodness

As a boy, George Washington probably thought as much about religion as did the average normal, healthy boy of that age. As he grew older, he steadily developed a deeply religious turn of mind, according to the Division of Information and Publication of the George Washington Bicentennial Commission.

At the age of twenty-three, he counted the bullet holes in his coat after Braddock's defeat and acknowledged, with common-sense practicality, that a power higher than man had saved him. The Revolutionary War taught him lesons he was too honest to deny, and as a result Washington's belief in God became the simple faith of a child, confirmed and strengthened by the actual living experience of a man.

The personal record of church attendance, his estimate of the value of religious practices among the people at large; his desire and effort to encourage and to inculcate in the peopel a spirit of gratitude toward the Deity, and his own expressions of opinion respecting God, give concrete evidence of his faith.

His religious record practically starts with the time when he was commanding the Virginia troops on the western frontier after Braddock's defeat. At Fort Loudon, Winchester, at the age of twenty-four, this Colonel of Virginia militia, on Saturday, September 18, 1756, ordered that "the men parade tomorrow morning at beating the long roll, with their arms and ammunitions clean and in good order, and to be marched by the Sergeants of the respective companies to the Fort, there to remain until prayers are over."

After his marriage, Washington attended Pohick Church at Pohick, Virginia, and later, Christ Church, Alexandria, Virginia. Both churches were distant from Mount Vernon, so that it was something of a journey to reach them by coach. An important point established by a close check-up of Washington's church attendance is that throughout his public life, in times of political stress and strain, he went to church oftener than he did in times of national calm and quiet.

On October 19, 1765, there is a record of his taking the oath to conform to the doctrines and discipline of the Church of England "as by law established," and during the year 1774, when political relations with the mother country were becoming dangerously strained, and no one in the colonies was able to foresee the outcome, he went to church twice, and sometimes three times a month. It was on June 1, 1774, the day the Boston Port Bill went into effect, that he "went to church and fasted all day."

In the hectic days of the outbreak of the Revolutionary War, Washington, in a letter to his wife, stated that he "relied confidently on that Providence which has heretofare preserved and been bountiful to me."

In the manly speech with which he accepted the appointment of commander-in-chief of the army he made no reference to God or to heaven; but one month after taking command of the army the matter of prayers and church service appears in the general orders for August 5, 1775, at Cambridge. These orders directed that "the Church be cleaned tomorrow and the Rev. Mr. Doyle will perform Divine Service therein at ten o'clock."

Then comes a personal note of soul humility in his letter to Joseph Reed in January 1776: "I have scarcely emerged from one difficulty," wrote Washington, "before I have plunged into another. How it will end, God in His great goodness will direct. I am thankful for His protection to this time." One thing that speedily became clear in the mind of George Washington was that the military and governmental difficulties of America were not, and could not, be properly met without the help of God. They were too great and America was too feeble, in Washington's judgment, to admit of their successful solution without help from on high, and certainly the verdict of history as to the magnitude of these difficulties has confirmed Washington's political judgment. And also, instead of becoming opinionated, instead of developing an ego, instead of becoming confident of his abilities as he succeeded in surmounting one difficulty after another, George Washington became more and more convinced that the hand of God was in those triumphs and greater and greater became his spiritual humility.

This humility in success and willingness to accept failure without complaint is exemplified at the end of the siege of Boston. The seizure and fortification of Dorchester Heights are recalled, and how the British prepared for another Bunker Hill, for they attempted to cross the bay in order to storm the works, and Bunker Hill would have been child's play to the slaughter that would have ensued. It is also recalled that the red-coats were prevented from crossing the water by a sudden and violent storm which lasted so long that by the time it was over Howe felt that the works had become too strong for him, gave over the attempt and evacuated the town.

Here is Washington's comment to his brother John on the occurrence: "That this remarkable interposition of Providence is for some wise purpose, I have not a doubt." And this was rather an extraordinary thing to say, for with the preparations made, all contingencies provided for, and with a sufficiency of ammunition, none of which things were present at the affair of Bunker Hill, it is quite reasonable to assume that Howe's attempt would have resulted in the complete annihilation of the British army.

The setting up of the actual machinery of religion in the Continental Army is important as a part of Washington's religious record. The Congress authorized the employment of chaplains, after Washington had urged it, and the general orders of July 9, 1776, when the army was in New York City, directed: "That Colonels or commanding officers of each regiment are directed to procure for Chaplains accordingly, persons of good character and exemplary lives. To see that all inferior officers and soldiers pay them a suitable respect and attend carefully upon religious exercises. The blessing and protection of Heaven are at all timea necessary, but especially so in times of public distress and danger. The General hopes and trusts that every officer and man will endeavor so to live and act as becomes a Christian soldier defending the dearest rights and liberties of his country."

In January, 1777, the Continental Army for the first time since the siege of Boston, established a permanent encampment base. This was at Morristown, New Jersey, and among the early things attended to was the practice of regular Sunday worship for the troops. On April 12, a Saturday, it was ordered that "All troops in Morristown, except the guards, are to attend divine worship tomorrow at the second Bell; the Officers commanding the Corps, are to take special care to have their men clean and decent, and that they are to march in proper order to the place of worship." Next week it was ordered: "All the troops in town (not on duty) to attend divine service tomorrow agreeable to the orders of the 12th instant." The convenience of a church building was an element in Morristown and the army paid due observance to Sunday. It may be noted, however, that only the troops in the town itself were ordered to church, for no building would have been large enough to hold the army encamped in the vicinity.

When the encampment was shifted to Middlebrook the well-known order against profanity was issued on May 31. Washington characterized it as the "foolish and scandalous practice of profane swearing," and added: "As a means to abolish this and every other species of immorality, Brigadiers are enjoined to take effectual care, to have divine service duly performed in their respective brigades." At Middlebrook, also, on June 28, the orders were as follows: "All Chaplains are to perform divine service tomorrow and on every succeeding Sunday, with their respective brigades and regiments, where the situation will possibly admit of it. And the Commanding officers of corps are to see that they attend themselves with officers of all ranks setting the example. The Commander-in-chief expects an exact compliance with this order, and that it be observed in the future as an invariable rule of practice. And every neglect will be considered not only as a breach of orders, but a disregard to decency, virtue and religion."

On the day after the surrender of Cornwallis, October 20, 1781, Washington's greatest military triumph of the war, he issued this order: "Divine service is to be performed tomorrow in the several brigades and divisions. The Commander-in-chief earnestly recommends that the troops not on duty should universally attend with that seriousness of deportment and gratitude of heart which the recognition of such reiterated and astonishing interpositions of Providence demands of us."

Here are Washington's words on the connection between religion and government as taken from his Farwell Address: "Morality is a necessary spring of popular government * * let us with caution indulge the supposition that morality can be maintained without religion. Whatever may be conceded to the influence of refined education on minds of peculiar structure, reason and experience both forbid us to expect that national morality can prevail in exclusion of religious principle."

On his deathbed, after nearly twenty-four hours' of struggle for breath, he placed his final seal of courageous manhood upon his life and went to his Maker with his brave faith unshaken. "I felt from the first," he whispered, "that the disorder would prove fatal * * * but I am not afraid to go."

The Card Sharper

MILTON, the Wall Street giant, had one special form of relaxation. This was poker. Every Friday afternoon, if the market was quiet enough to skip Saturday, he seaplaned down to Florida and joined a small group of his own cronies who were addicted to the same pleasure.

In Milton's subdued and massive Wall Street office Aurelius Smith heard that all might not be quite right with these poker games. One of the regular players had introduced, perhaps a little carelessly, a business acquaintance who had recently come to America from Europe.

Emeroch was a large and impressive man who seemed to have plenty of money and whose poker technique was superb. Milton did not object to the large sums of money which Emeroch was winning but his sixth sense warned him that something was wrong.

"It is possible that he is just a better player than the rest of you," suggested Smith.

Milton suggested that he take the detective down to Florida and let him sit in at a few games so that he might scrutinize the suspected man.

"I know the game very well," returned Smith, "but I never play cards for money. My memory is too good and I have trained myself to read faces too well. It would not be fair to my opponents."

Milton, insisted, however, and gained his point.

After dinner on the following Friday evening Smith and Milton sat down with two other financiers in the library of a palatial Florida mansion. A table was arranged for cards. As yet Emeroch had not arrived.

"Over a short length of time poker is a game of chance," Smith said, "but, when many hands are dealt, it becomes pure science and the best player must win."

At that moment Emeroch limped into the room. He stepped only upon the fore part of his right foot and leaned heavily upon a cane each time that foot came to the floor. He shifted his cane for a moment to his left hand while he shook hands with Smith. After that he sank painfully into a chair at the table, placed his cane between his legs and reached for a glass.

The play lasted until the small hours of the morning. From the first it was apparent that there was not a novice at the table. When the game ended there were only two winners—Emeroch and Smith. Emeroch had won $17,000 and Smith had won $800.

"Did you spot anything?" asked Milton of Smith when they were alone.

"He is the best poker player I ever met," returned Smith. "He knows exactly how to bet his cards and his face is a mask. I think he is honest—and yet—"

"Well?" questioned Milton.

"Most of his big killings were made on his own deal," added Smith, "and he never bet and lost on his own deal."

"I could detect nothing wrong with his dealing," commented Milton.

"There was no substitution of cards," said Smith emphatically. "By-the-way, you did not tell me that he was a cripple."

"He has been that way for ten years," explained Milton. "He told us that he had been injured in a riding accident."

The following afternoon the players met on the lawn in front of the house in which they were to play. Smith and Milton were somewhat in the rear of Emeroch as he painfully hobbled up the marble steps to the broad veranda where an early game was to be played before dinner. Suddenly Smith grasped Milton's hand and detained him under pretext of getting a light.

"I have caught him!" whispered Smith. "Don't be surprised at what I may do."

On the veranda the game was short and not very exciting. Milton shouldered the losses. Smith was about even. The rest were moderate winners. A servant brought before-dinner cocktails and the party relaxed aronnd the table.

"Beautiful stick you have," said Smith to Emeroch. "May I see it?"

Emeroch made a desultory remark about his cane but kept it between his knees and did not offer to pass it over to Smith.

"May I see it?" persisted Smith with a polite smile.

The two looked into each other's eyes for a few seconds and then Emeroch rose. Smith advanced. Emeroch turned and limped toward the marble steps. Smith sprang forward and snatched the stick away. Emeroch ran down the steps and across the lawn like an athlete.

Amid gasps of astonishment Smith swiftly examined the cane.

"This silver band is strangely placed top of the crook," he explained, [illegible] it to the table. "You see that [illegible] exposes a small mirror, [illegible] and between his knees [illegible] mirror. On his [illegible] card you hold."

The Small Flowering Tree

There are hundreds of beautiful small flowering trees from which the home owner may select types to grace his lawn or garden. Few sorts are carried by the average nursery, but they may be discovered by browsing through a number of catalogues.

The dogwood, both white and pink, the red bud or Judas tree and the Japanese cherry trees popularized by the planting around Washington, are well known. The average gardner, however, is not familiar with the many other beautiful forms which are available.

The Chinese form of the flowering dogwood and the Cornelian cherry are of considerable merit. The flowering crab-apples are varied and beautiful. Of these Bechtels double flowering crab with large, rose-like flowers of pale pink is the best known. In addition to showy flowers many forms have red and yellow fruits much liked by the birds.

The Shadblows are desirable flowering trees of graceful habit of growth. The small white star-shaped flowers are borne in abundance in early spring and the small edible red or purple fruits which follow in June furnish attractive food for birds. The Canadian and Allegany Shadblows are perhaps the best forms.

Among the thorn trees are many native and introduced species of great merit. Paul's Double Scarlet thorn is one that is well known and admired.

Two small flowering Magnolias blooming in early spring are stellata and Soulangeana.

The Japanese cherries are well known though not often seen in home grounds. A weeping form, Prunus rosea pendula, is particularly beautiful as a lawn specimen.

Some of the stronger growing shrubs can readily be trained into tree form. The white fringe, with showy racemes of fragrant white flowers is a choice specimen tree. The black haw grows eventually to 20 feet or more and is attractive both in flower and fruit.

The yellow-flowered golden chain, the purple smoke tree and the silver bell tree are showy. The so-called mimosa tree is popular in the warmer sections of the State where the crape myrtle is common. The latter may be trained as a tree if desired. It is particularly valuable because of its showy summer bloom.

The Wistaria may be developed in tree form if properly supported for the first few years.

Where on the home grounds is the small flowering tree to be planted? It is suited particularly as a specimen tree, and may be placed along the driveway or as a striking feature at the terminus of a walk or drive, or where boundary plantings of shrubbery extend out into the lawn. Often these smaller trees may, with advantage, be substituted for the larger tree on grounds of limited area. Some types are eminently adapted as a setting for the wild garden and furnish the needed shade and protection.

COMPETITOR PAID FOR IT—

The following editorial is copied from Meredith's Merchandising Advertising, and has been selected by the National Editorial Association as a worthwhile editorial, and is reproduced in The Republican:

There are several grocery stores in our town and one of them has difficulty in meeting its expenses. It is only a question of time until it will cease to exist.

Just two doors away is another store which does a very profitable business. When talking with the proprietor of this store, he said: "The weakest argument I know is for some merchant to tell the people that he doesn't advertise because it costs him too much money. I spend $180 a year in advertising. But I don't figure that it comes out of my cash drawer. I think it is paid by the competitors who do not advertise. I'm getting new customers right along through my advertising, and some of them are coming to me from stores within a block of here that brag about the fact they don't need to advertise because everybody knows them."

People like to see what articles can be bought and where they can buy them. An outside window display, or a counter display helps, but there is nothing so reliable as a consistent and sensible advertising campaign in the newspaper.

PRESIDENT SAVES NATION FROM DOLE

President Hoover, by a courageous leadership and a tenacity of purpose, has saved the American people from the blight of a Federal dole system.

Such a system was proposed by Senate Democratic leaders in connection with drought relief, but the President, with that quiet determination which has characterized his conduct of government affairs, resisted this effort to initiate here a system which news dispatches from London show is burdening the British people beyond measure.

As the Washington Herald well says the victory of the President was one "that entities Mr. Hoover to the thanks and congratulations of all of his countrymen because its benefits will be shared by the household of the nation."

Under the compromise plan which the Chief Executive fostered, there will be no direct distribution of the $20,000,000 farm loan fund. Money will be made available to farmers upon security in those regions where credit fecilities have broken down.

The result will be adequate relicf, supplemcnting that which the American Red Cross has been extending throughout the drought area through utilization of its reserve fund and the millions which have been reised in response to the appeal of the President.

In his resistance against any form of dole, the President had the support of the American people who are well aware of conditions in Europe under the dole systems set up there as temporary expedients for the relief of unemployed. Great Britain now is to borrow an additional $100,000,000 for payments to the jobless, making a total of $450,000,000. The unemployment fund is $335,500,000 in debt.

During debate on the measure to increase the dole fund, Chancellor Snowden made no effort to minimize the gravity of the situation that faces England.

"Our national position is so grave", he said, "that drastic and disagreeable measures will have to be taken. In the present condition of industry further taxation would be the last straw."

This situation certainly justified the wisdom of the struggle President Hoover made against the initiation of any form of the dole system in the United States.

The sanctity of the American home has been further safe-guarded by the administration's exclusion of convict-made lumber from Soviet Russia.

With Congress gone, the public will miss reading about those millions and billions of imaginary dollars that Democratic leaders always have been trying to spend.

Legislation by compromise at least has the virtue of forcefully reminding us of those principles of good government which are about to be side-swiped.

There has been much of the atmosphere of Lincoln about President Hoover during the past few months. Often harrassed when he should have been helped, he has gazed quietly out of the same windows that Lincoln looked through, and back from his lonely contemplation have returned many of the fundamental conclusions, the human truths and the fidelities to sound government that guided Lincoln in his own day of human misery and the eventual restoration of the nation to happiness and prosperity.

THE POLITICAL WHEELS OF WASHINGTON

By James L. West

Washington, Feb. 25—Appropriating that they are without any definite program, the Democratic hosts at their gathering on Washington on March 5, apparently will undertake to lay down a set of principles.

Gossip has it that the party leaders out of Congress are very much concerned over the record made by the party in this regular session of the 71st Congress.

Various proposals for raids on the Treasury and for the establishment of a Federal dole system have caused concern because of the expressed desire of Chairman John J. Raskob and others to convince business that the Democratic party is not inimical to its interests.

During the last campaign Mr. Jouett Shouse, National Executive Committee Chairman of the Democratic National Committee, in a radio address conceded that the party was without a program looking to an improvement of conditions in the country, and certainly no program has been developed at this session of Congress.

This is conceded by so staunch a Democratic paper as the New York Times which says: "The meeting is at the end of the short session of Congress, during which the Democrats have developed no program."

In advance of the meeting of the Democratic National Committee, there has been much speculation as to what will be the status of Chairman Raskob when the session is over.

Same political observers predict that he will resign, but others insist that under no circumstances would he quit under the fire which is being leveled against him by leaders from the southern and some western states.

Many are wondering whether the dry Democratic leaders from the south and west will make an effort to unhorse him, but the consensus is that such an effort would fail and, consequently, will not be made.

Even should Mr. Raskob relinquish the chairmanship he still would be the mortgagee of the party as few believe that any plan of refinancing that might be adopted could be carried out with success .

And, yet a very real feeling of discontent has developed because of the "mortgage" which Mr. Raskob holds on the party. Of more than $600,000 owed by it he has advanced more than one third and endorsed notes for most of the balance.

In connection with the meeting there is much discussion of prohibition. Some leaders in Washington predict it is the fixed purpose of those responsible for the calling of the national committee to put the party organization on record at the earlicst possible moment in behalf of a straigh out repeal provision.

Others assert with equal confidence that there will be no effort to commit the party on the prohibition question in advance of the 1932 convention.

Whether prohibition is injected the meeting is certain to be a lively one with probably much acrimonious discussion on a number of subjects.

IN DAYS OF OLD

FORTY YEARS AGO

The public schools will close for the term on Friday, March 6.

The Grantsville Mineral Developing company organized with J. S. Broadwater as president; Jonas E. Gnegy, vice-president; Dr. O. G. Getty, secretary; and Jacob S. Miller, treasurer. The question of developing the mineral intercsts of that portion of the county was discussed by Messrs. A. L. Gnegy, J. S. Broadwater, U. M. Stanton, C. A. Snyder, Dr. O. G. Getty, and others. Capital stock is $10,000. Their object is to sink a test well to find the depth of the fire clay, coal and othcr minerals.

The managers of the Girls' Industrial school of Oakland state that the school is flourishing and well attended, the only drawback being the lack of teachers. Mrs. Gen. George Crook and Mrs. Bowie Johnson were active in the school.

H. J. Mayers purchased the building he now occupies, the price being $3,750. Mr. Mayers will build a large wareroom to the structure where he will keep a large stock of paints, oils, wall paper, etc.

Mr. Daniel E. Offutt's saw mill, two miles west of Oakland, which burned last summer, is being rebuilt, Capt. J. M. Jarboe, being in charge of the work.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

A twenty-four piece band was organized at Jennings, with W. W. Morris, D. D., as bandmaster.

A rooster fight, which was held in the Kitzmiller opera house, was raided by Sheriff Shartzer and his deputies and many people arrested. A forfeit of $5 was exacted from each one for appearance at Oakland, and $185 was collected, but only one appeared. He was found guilty of cruelty to animals and fined $2 and costs, amounting in all to $7.91.

Probably the happiest man in Garrett county is our lifetime friend, William A. Sturgiss. He has just cause for being happy because of the arrival of a daughter at his home on Tuesday morning at 10:40.

Messrs. D. E. Offutt and Gilmor S. Hamill left Oakland yesterday for a point in Ohio where they will attend a meeting of the directors of a coal company in which they have interests.

An Interesting Fact

THE SURRENDER AT YORKTOWN BY CORNWALLIS NOT THE END

One of The Last Killed In The Revolution Was a Marylander

The historic ride of Paul Revere has been immortalized in story and song. From the time we first began to study the history of our country we have been thrilled by the account of how two men, William Dawes and Paul Revere, on the night of April 18, 1775, the movement of the British troops having becn observed, stole away from Boston in boats across the Black Bay, mounted horses and rode as the wind to warn the countryside of the impending danger.

While this deed was surrounded by the glamour of romance and heroism heralding the inauguration of the Revolution, that other ride by Lieutenant Colonel Tench Tilghman, a Marylander, six years later, although unsung, was of great importance. It heralded peace to the Colonies.

On the 17th of October, 1781, Cornwallis at Yorktown surrendered some eight thousand soldiers and sailors, the greater part of whom taken to prison encampments at Fort Frederick, in Maryland, and at Winchester, Virginia. When this momentous event occurred Lieut.-Col. Tilghman took boat and horse to bear the news to Congress at Philadelphia. Along the Chesapeake from Yorktown to Annapolis, across Rock Hill, then by relay of horses he arrived at Philadelphia after midnight of October 24th and immediately aroused the sleeping president of Congress and conveyed to him the glad news that Cornwaliis had surrendered.

While the surrender of the British commander at Yorktown marked the beginning of the end of the great struggle for independence, the war continued.

Troops from Maryland and Virginia were sent south to aid General Greene. When these reinforcements arrived Greene was greatly encouraged and took the offensive, forcing the British to evacuate Wilmington in January, 1782. In December following he marched on Charleston. Captain William Wilmoth, of the Third Maryland Regiment, was one of those engaged in an endeavor to surprise a British supply train at work in view of the garrison at Charleston. The Americans were repulsed. Capt. Wilmoth was killed and Lieut. Moore was seriously wounded.

"This," says Alexander Garden, an aide-de-camp to General Greene, in his "Anecdotes of the Revolutionary War," "was the last bloodshed in the Revolutionary contest."

So, it was approximately one year after the surrender of Cornwallis at Yorktown that a Marylander gave up his life for the independence of his country and bears the distinction of being one of the last soldiers killed in a battle of the Revolution.

Once a month the Bark adds a supplement of the outstanding work in the English department. The poem is as follows:

FEBRUARY

By Dorothea Sturgiss

February—the one month of the year—
Deserving more of praise than it has won.
Although the others have been held more dear,
It is the month of fame and month of fun,
In hearts of valiant patriots held most high:
As birthday keeper of our nation's best,
Men whose deeds and fame shall never die,
Tho' many scores of years they've been at rest.
It is the month of bob-sleds, skates and fun,
Of frozen ears and frosted finger tips.
A token of St, Valentine is done,
With hearts of lace and Cupid's jolly quips.
And so to other months you sing your song,
I'm glad to month of leap year I belong.

McClelland Dixon Is Honored At University Of Maryland

Under the heading of "Campus Leaders" in The Diamondback, student publication of the University of Maryland, McClelland Dixon, son of Mrs. Nina S. Dixon, of Oakland, is given the title of one of the most popular men on the campus.

The article follows:

"Darius McClelland Dixon, otherwise known as "Dickie", is one of the most popular men on our campus. He seems to possess that knack of accomplishment whatever he sets out to do, and it is to this quality that he owes his rise in favor and popularity among his fellow students.

"Dixon was born in Oakland, Md., and received his education at the local high school, gaining prominence as a cheerleader, treasurer of the senior class, and business manager of the year book.

"In the fall of 1927 this son of the Alleghenies matriculated at our University, enrolled in the College of Arts and Sciences. As is usually the case his freshman activities were limited to a few, lacrosse and the New Mercer Literary society being the ones to gain his attention. With the advent of his sophomore year, Dickie became interested in scrubbing for lacrosse manager, and in addition became a member of the Rossbourg club.

"It was not until his junior year that Dixon became president of the Latch Key Society, assistant manager of lacrosse, representative of his fraternity, Phi Sigma Kappa, to the Inter-fraternity council, representative to Student Congress, and a prominent member in New Mercer. As a result of these achievements he received that much sought after honor—membership in Omicron Delta Kappa.

"It remained for his senior year for him to show his real worth. One of the best gauges of a man's ability is his popularity and trust that is evidenced in him by his fellow-students. This fact is verified by his election to positions of the greatest importance and responsibility; which are treasurer of the Senior Class, president of Phi Sigma Kappa, and manager of lacrosse.

"After graduation Dixon is going to the Maryland Medical School."

Cloud-Hidden Air Pilots Converse With Field Men

This pilot, flying in a closed passenger plane, is wearing a Western Electric radio-phonette receiver and is using a "muzzle mike" transmitter which cuts out the motor's roar and other extraneous sounds.

Aviation travel in the United States is increasing rapidly, the Air Commerce Bulletin of the Department of Commerce for December shows. In six months more than 1,133,157 people rode as passengers in airplanes. This was four times as many passengers as were carried in planes during a similar period in 1929. In the six months of 1930, scheduled airlines carried 3,761,376 pounds of mail and 1,245,477 pounds of express.

This increase in aviation passenger travel was brought about by safer methods of operation. Nothing has done more to bring this condition about than effective communication, aviation officials say. Leading airplane transportation lines have now equipped their planes with two-way telephone apparatus so that the pilots are constantly in touch with dispatchers at landing fields.

Planes today, according to the Western Electric Company, are winging their way over the country side, talking from the clouds and getting their answers from the ground. Unknown to passengers and unheard by them, crisp business-like conversations are going on up in front where the pilot holds the stick, conversations that spell out the welfare and security of that precious human cargo.

Lesson for March 1

JESUS SENDING FORTH MISSIONARIES

GOLDEN TEXT—Therefore said he unto them, the harvest truly is great, but the laborers are few: pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he would send forth laborers into his harvest.

LESSON TEXT—Luke 10:1-22.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus' Helpers.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus Trying Out His Helpers.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Helpers of Jesus.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Our Missionary Task.

The sending forth of the seventy was for a special time and purpose. The missionary enterprise today has much in common with that of that day, but there are certain essential differences which should be recognized.

I. The Seventy Sent Forth (vv. 1, 2).

1. Appointed by the Lord (v. 1). They went forth not merely because of an inner urge but because of personal and direct appointment. Only those should go forth as missionaries who are appointed by the Lord.

2. Sent two by two (v. 1). The purpose of this was that they might mutually help, counsel, and support each other.

3. The reason for their appointment (v. 2). It was the greatness of the harvest and the fewness of the laborers.

4. The force back of missions (v. 2). The disciples were instructed to pray the Lord of the harvest to send forth laborers. Prayer indited by the Holy Spirit has been back of every missionary enterprise.

II. The Seventy Instructed (vv. 3-16).

1. As to the source of their commission (v. 3). "I send you." Everything depends upon the authority of the commission. No missionary should go forth without the consciousness of being sent by the Lord.

2. As to the dangers confronting them (v. 3). Missionaries thrust forth by the Lord will be exposed to deadly peril.

3. As to their support (v. 4). Being sent forth by the Lord, they were to look to him to provide for their need.

4. As to the speed of their mission (v. 4). So urgent was the need of the speedy evangelization of the Jewish territory that the distractions of social intercourse were to be omitted.

5. As to behavior in homes where received (vv. 5-9).

a. Offer the peace of the gospel (vv. 5, 6). This is to be done regardless as to whether it will be received or not. There is a reflex blessing in preaching the gospel.

b. Do not shift quarters (vv. 7, 8). Missionaries should remain in the home where they have been received, content with what is given them. They should not demand better food and more comfortable quarters than are commonly provided.

c. Heal the sick (v. 9). These disciples were given power to heal the sick. The ministers of Christ should seek to give relief to those in distress and use every opportunity to proclaim the gospel message.

6. The awful fate of those who reject Christ's message (vv. 10-16). Their case is more hopeless than that of Sodom. Those who reject Christ's messengers reject Christ and reject the Heavenly Father who sent him.

III. The Return of the Seventy (vv. 17-24).

1. Their report (v. 17). They were highly elated. They found that they could not only heal the sick, but cast out demons also. It is easy even in Christian service to be spoiled by our successes.

2. Jesus' answer (vv. 18-24). (a) He told them that it was no surprise to him (vv. 18 and 19). With prophetic eye, he saw their success as indicating that time when the prince of this world would be overthrown (John 12:31). By virtue of his mighty triumph over Satan, he assures them that they need have no fear of what should befall them. (b) Real cause for rejoicing (v. 20). He promptly rebuked them, telling them that their chief joy should be because of their heavenly relation, not because of these miraculous gifts. (c) Jesus' exultation (vv. 21, 22). The consciousness that soon the victory would be won because God had committed all things unto him and that only as men received him could they know the Father caused him to rejoice in what was being accomplished. (d) Congratulates the disciples (vv. 23, 24). He assured them that they were sharing privileges which had been denied to many of the prophets and kings.

By His Presence

When God possesses us we are possessed by his presence, and the Holy Spirit cannot be in us without purifying our thoughts, desires and motives and so equipping us for his service.—W. H. Griffith Thomas.

Boundless Possibilities

Oh, I am staggered as I think of the boundless possibilities that God opens before the man whose whole nature is filled with His Spirit!—Selected.

The BEST Gray Hair Remedy is Home Made

To half pint of water add one ounce bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and one-fourth ounce of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. It will gradually darken streaked, faded or gray hair and make it soft and glossy. Barbo will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.

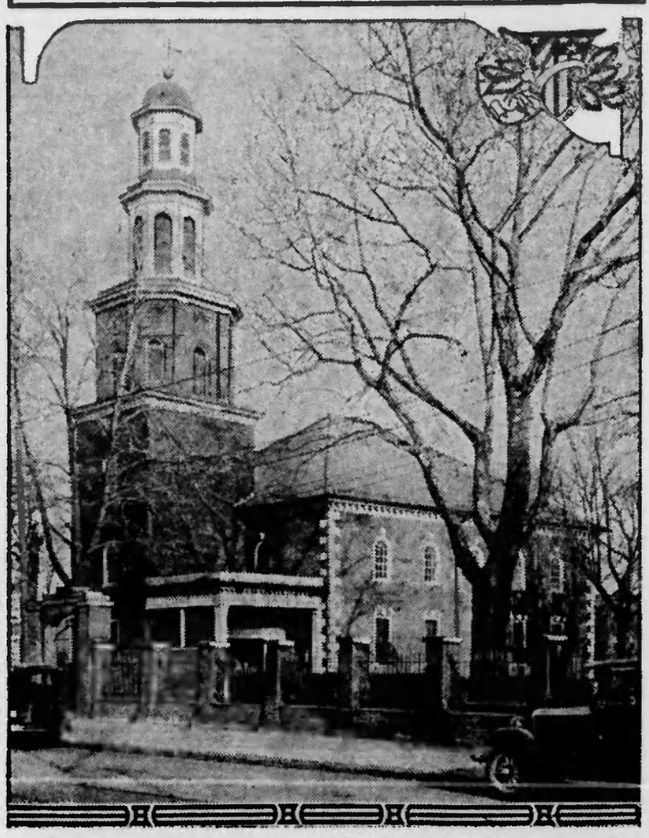
CHRIST CHURCH, ALEXANDRIA, VA.



Two momentous decisions were witnessed, at wide intervals, in the shadow of Christ Episcopal church. In the summer of 1774, Washington, surrounded by friends standing in the church doorway, advised renunciation of Georgs III and daclared he would fight for tha independence of America.

On the same spot 87 ysars later when intimation was made that he would ultimataly command the Confederate armies, Robert E. Lee knelt in prayer with heavy heart loyally determined to follow the fortunes of his beloved Virginia.

The Washington pew may still be scen in this historic edifice.

Women Saved Mount Vernon for Country

The nation is indebted to a gronp of patriotic women who restored Mount Vernon, the home of George Washington, to its original beanty and dignity. The organization, which by its devotion and spirit has been ahls to accomplish this, is known as the Mount Vernon Ladies' association. It holds its annual council session on the estate.

Back in the fiftles the last of the Washington family to possess Mount Vernon, exhausted hy the effort not only to keep np the estate, hut to endure the strain of entertaining a constant stream of visitors who wished to see the home of their first President, offered it for sale to the state of Virginia and the United States government.

When neither of these public agencies took advantnge of the offer Miss Ann Pamela Cunningham appealed to the women of the country to save the home where George Washington found his greatest happiness.

Raiss $200,000 Fund.

By her untiring efforts and with the help of Edward Everett and other enthusiastic workers, $200,000 was raiscd for the purchase of Mount Vernon. Under the charter from the state of Virginia hy which the Mount Vernon Ladies' association holds the property, their proprietorship lasts so long as it is fittingly maintained.

It is the purpose of the ladies of this organization to make Mount Vernon exactly as it was in the time of its famous proprietor. To accomplish this they spare no thought, effort or money. They are never extravagant, but they always require that the very best in equipment or service be employed.

Ever-Blooming Flowers.

In the flower beds, outlined by box hedges, are always blooms, from tha gaudy tulips of early spring to the equally striking dahlias of fall. Cuttings of hox and ivy and seedlings are on sale in order that all who wish may have some growing thing fiom Mount Vernon in their own gardens.

A great many of the original furnishings of the mansion have been found by these zealous women, and have heen placed in thcir proper setting. Although some furnitnre which did not belong to George and Martha Washington is used to add to the homelike atmosphere, relics which have not hcen authenticated as original after careful investigation are no longer accepted or purchased.

It is no effort to imagine the enjoyment that the gracious master and mistress of Mt. Vernon derived from their homc. By merely removing the grills at doorways, a perfectly appointed mansion is again ready for occupancy. Every detall is complete. Beds are made with snowy covers over hillowy mattresses, books are on the library shelves, a card table and counters await players, piano and flute are there, even knives are in their wooden cases on the buffet in the family dining room, and a clock ticks on the mantel in the hanquet hall.

In additions to the ancient, rare and valuable furnishings are the most modern protective systems, by their perfect concealment lending no discordant note. Hot-air heat is piped from a distant furnaca, portable electric fixtures are nsed when necessary, and equipment for fire pravantion that is the last word in ingenuity is nsed.

Danger of Fira Minimized.

Fire is the dread specter of Mount Vernon. Every known precaution against it is employed. Guards, expert hy training, fly to their posts at a second's notice, and chemicals and water are availahle for immediate nse. Even a mechanical fire detector is installed.

The ladies of the association, which has made Mount Vernon both what it is today and was in Georga Washington's time, by their monumental work earn for themselves a reward which in turn inspires them with lova of and devotion to their mission.

Esch State Has Member.

Each state is entitled to one member in this body. She is known as a vice-regent. Usually there are ahout thirty-five vice-regents, for as vacancies occur much time and consideration is given to the election of a new member, who receives the honor for life.

She must be a woman who will be in harmony with the ideals of the organization and imbued with the traditions of Monnt Vernon, and who, like her associates, will possess the proper esteem for her privileged position and show her devotion hy the accomplishment of her duties.

The work of the regent and vice-regents does not end with council session. During the year they distribute literature on Mount Vernon, speak to schools and organizations on the subject, and in every way spread the ennobling traditions of the home of George Washington among the people of America.—Frederic J. Haskin, in Chicago Daily News.

SCOOP'S COLUMN

By SCOOP—HIMSELF

Scoop is wondering how the big monguls on both sides of the fence of this Mt. Lake Park argument are coming out of their clinch.

Nels Miller is letting his mustache grow so he can be mayor of the Park when the new charter is granted, according to his sister-in-law's husband—but if A. D. Naylor and H. V. Leighton have anything to do about it, the whiskers will be longer than those of Bluebeard or Methuselah.

In Senator Naylor's letter published last week against the proposed charter he quoted a rather famous and well known speech about egg-laying, but when it came out in The Democrat it read "I fear that it will be the means of destroying the MEN that lays the golden egg."

* * *

After seeing this, Scoop immediately got in touch with Col. Bell who spent all day Sunday at Mt. Lake trying to get a picture of some of these men in their nests, but it was not until sundown that he heard a triumphant cackle in one corner of the Park, and upon investigation, discovered one of the treasures. By a peculiar arrangement Col. Bell was able to make a picture of himself testing it with his "miracle rod".

A Bad Egg

While speaking of Mt. Lake Park, golden eggs, and things, Scoop might say that although he believes firmly in the veracity of Editor Frame, his tale about Bob Moomaw's parsnips being three feet long, seems to be stretching things. Now, Scoop likes parsnips, and he will be convinced if a sample is brought to the Republican office. Arrangements can likely be made to get it over to Oakland by the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, as they would be glad to lend a flat car for that purpose, and there are usually four or five men hanging around the depot who would be glad to help load and unload the monster.

Bet Dawson Wins

The "true-story" contest conducted very early Monday morning in honor of George Washington's birthday, didn't bring out as many tales as there should have been. As happy Harned said, "They just knew they couldn't produce the witnesses to substantiate their statements.

Jim Kerins told about his trip to Canada. (no witnesses). Monk Stemple told about entertaining the mayor of Baltimore at the Fair grounds last fall, but everybody already had the goods on him on that story. Ikey Sincell wanted to tell about his trip to the Pacific coast and the sojourn in Boston (first "O" pronounced like "O" in cop), but everybody had heard them so often, he was excommunicated for the time being.

Harold H. "Headstrong" Betty Dawson, was awarded the prize (article will be named if reader will send two-cent stamp and plain envelope), and at that the judges told him his story wasn't so sensational as there have been thousands like it. However he had the witnesses in this case. He told how Lydia's compound had helped him when he strained his back several weeks ago as he tried to move 1500 lbs., more or less, of cement in the cellar of his home.

Short Essay on Pants

Thre are many kinds of pants, long pants, short pants, wide pants, narrow pants, loud pants, peg-topped pants, bell-bottom pants. A man's character is told by his pants.

Wasn't it the great poet and philosopher, Archibaldson, who said, "Show me a man's pants, and I'll tell you what kind of a man he is."

Pants are made for men and not for women. Women are made for men and not for pants. When a man pants for a woman and a woman pants for a man, that makes a pair of pants. Pants are like molasses—they are thinner in hot weather and thicker in cold weather.

Pants are also like dirty kids,—they shrink from water. Some of them are also like radios——they fade on you; while others are like dethroned boxing champs—"they fought a good fits in their day."

There has been much discussion as to whether pants is singular or plural. Seems to me when you wear pants it is plural, and when you don't wear them it is singular. If you want to make pants last, make the coat and vest first.

* * *

One 'Big Blow

The month of uncertainty is on its way
With its warmth, its wind and its snow;
And which of the three have the upper hand
Even Scoop and Archibaldson don't know.

Winter sometimes will seem to go
As spring triumphant nears;
Then a blast from the north and a flurry of snow
And it's just too bad for your ears.

This "Coming in like a lion, going out out like a lamb,"
Is just one great big guess
For March is a heller for blowing
And storming like nobody's business.

And if you really tbink you can write a better one, I'd like to have them sent in.

SOAP AND SUNSHINE ARE ANTIDOTES FOR ILLNESS

Has Recommendation of Maryland State Board of Health

Sunshine, fresh air, hot water and soap, liberally and conscientiously applied are recommended by the Maryland State Department of Health for the cleansing of rooms and of articles that have been used by a person who has been ill from an infectous disease.

"Two kinds of disinfectant—concurrent, while the disease is running its course, and terminal, at the end of the siege—must be carried on," Dr. R. H. Riley, Director of the State Department of Health, said, "to prevent the spread of infectious diseases from the sick to the well."

As instances of "concurrent" disinfection, he said: "The person who takes care of a patient who is ill with typhoid fever or with any similar disease, is warned by the family doctor or the health officer, that the discharge from the kidneys and bowels are a source of danger and must be disinfected or sterilized before they are disposed of. Various disinfectants are used for this purpose.

"For the same reason, the person who has a cold, or is suffering from influenza, grippe, sore throat, diphtheria, pneumonia, tuberculosis, scarlet fever, measles, whooping cough, infantile paralysis or any other disease that is accompanied by discharges from the nose and throat, is warned that these discharges are sources of danger, and is urged to use paper handkerchiefs or cheese cloth, or some other soft material that can be destroyed by burning or can be disinfected or sterilized by boiling. Sterilizing dishes and utensils used in the sick room, by boiling, after each use of them, and the disinfection of towels, sheets, pillow cases, gowns and other bedding or clothing used in the sick room, by boiling, are other examples of 'concurrent' disinfection.

"Terminal disinfection, as its name indicates, is the general cleansing and sterilization of the room, bedding and personal belongings of the patient, at the end of the illness after the patient is up and out or is released from quarantine. There was a time not so long ago, when it was felt that the best way to disinfect a room was to close all the doors and windows, stop up all cracks and burn some sort of disinfectant. Now we believe that even better results can be obtained by the use of the things that are within the reach of everybody—soap and hot water, sunshine and fresh air—by opening up the rooms to the air and sunshine; by sterilizing the sheets, blankets, and other bedding by boiling; and by a vigorous cleansing of the floors and all other washable objects with soap and hot water."

a revamping of the state license tag system for motor vehicles, with a downward revision of the horsepower tax from 32 to 25 cents and a graduated scale for operation of commercial trucks. The truck scale was started at $10.00 and continued upward, with weight of the truck, to $42 per year.

In the upper branch, Senator William H. McKindless, of Baltimore City, offered a measure providing for the establishment of a statewide criminal identification bureau, while Senator Emory L. Coblentz offered a bill to extend from the present limits of expenditure of proceeds from the state gasoline tax.

The House passed a dozen measures including those increasing to 14 feet the draught of vessels to be piloted by second calls pilots; authorizing the transfer of funds from the old board of game wardens to the board of game trustees of Allegany county, regulating payment of salary to the clerk of Hagerstown, and several others of local nature.

Delegate Howard Galbreath's bill changing the charter of St. Paul's Lutheran church, of Cumberland, was also among those passed by the House. This bill gives the congregation of St. Paul's the right to hold, buy or sell property of greater value than was provided for in the original charter.

Another bill passed by the House was that of Delegate Sleeman, giving the Allegany County Tax Collector the right to accept confessed judgments from corporations which are unable to pay their taxes "in cash."

The purpose of this bill is to enable such corporations to continue operations and keep their men employed.

To Elect School Board

A measure was introduced in the House yesterday by Delegate Albert Markley providing for the election of the Board of Education in Garrett county by the qualified voters. The bill was referred to the Garrett delegation.

Would Prohibit School Consolidation

Mr. Cullers, of the Garrett county delegation, introduced a bill yesterday seeking to prohibit the consolidation of any two or more schools in Garrett county except by the voters' permission. This measure was also referred to the local delegates.

Mr. Fike presented two measures in the House yesterday regulating the erection of fences in the county.

MT. LAKE PARK

The annual election for town officers will be held ln Loch Lynn Monday, March 2, in the council room. There is always keen rivalry among the several friendly factions of the village, and this year is no exception. Already there are two full tickets in the field, with at least, and possibly two more in the offing. There is the "Independent", the nominees being Lincoln Callis, mayor; August Killius and Charles P. Martin, councilmen; Hubert M. Weeks, tax collector and treasurer; Earl H. Sterling, clerk, and Wm. H. McRobie, Jr., baliff. The "Citizens" have nominated E. C. Hardesty, mayor; E. C. Hutchinson and G. M. Brown, councilmen; Warren Rathbun, tax collector and treasurer; Mildred Ford, clerk, and W. E. Simms, baliff. There are rumors of a Socialist and another Independent citizens ticket in the making.

We understand that there is another petition in circulation among the citizens of the Park and Oakland, opposing the change in the charter of this community. Evidently lt is not intended to give any one the chance to say they did not havo the chance to sign a petition.

There is a report current that the old "Briarbend", a landmark of the Park, is to be razed, a contractor from Keyser having secured the contract.

Capt. B. W. Hardesty, Oliver and Miss Opal Hardesty and Mr. Hostlerode, of Cumberland, motored to Morgantown, Sunday.

COST OF FUNERALS WAS DEBATED IN LOWER HOUSE

Bill Permitting $200 Increase In Estate Allowance Is Finally Approved

Opponents of a bill permitting an increase in the cost of funerals which may be allowed from the estates of deceased persons, took the floor of the house of delegates today in a prolonged fight on the measure, which failed when the proposal was passed without a single vote to spare.

The fight on the funeral bill was one of two which unexpectedly broke out in the lower branch while unexpected debate on the D'Alesandro blue law repeal failed to develop.

Meanwhile, the Senate was conducting an unruffled session receiving a trio of measures, including one calling for the construction of a permanent inlet to link Sinepuxent Bay with the Atlantic Ocean.

Debate Cost of Funerals

The fight on the funeral allowance bill, which asked an increase from $300 to $500 on the amounts which could be allowed for expenses from estates, started without warning when Delegate Oliver Metzerott, Republican leader, took the floor with the contention that the cost of funerals had not increased and that suitable obsequies could be accorded anyone within the present limit. After the debate had subsided, the bill was given a narrow majority of seven of a roll call, which showed 60 favoring the bill and 53 opposing it.

Garrett School Bill Killed

The second argument which prolonged Monday's meeting in the House arose from an unfavorable report on a bill introduced and championed by Delegate Cullers which asked that consolidation of any schools in Garrett county be prohibited unless a majority of the parents residing within the district affected, signified approval. When the measure was brought out by the Education Committee with a recommendation against passage, Delegate Cullers sought to have the bill substituted for the unfavorable report, but falled in his effort and the bill was killed.

In the House a two-man crew for street cars in Baltimore city was asked in a bill introduced by Delegate Hummel.

Authorization of a $45,000 bond issue for the construction of a school in Sharpsburg was contained in a bill initiated by the Washington county delegation in its entirety.

An extension of the jurisdiction of justices of the peace in larceny cases was contained in one of the measures House for final legislature action. The which the Senate passed on to the bill, which was sponsored by Senator Beck (Dem. Kent), was calculated, its sponsor said at the time of introduction, to relieve congestion in circuit courts caused by the great number of minor theft cases.

Markley Bill Killed

In the House last Friday the bill sponsored by Delegate Markley, of Garrett, providing for the election of the Board of Education by the voters of county, was unfavorably reported by the committee and the report was adopted, thus killing the measure. The disposition of the bill by the committee was expected. Home rule as a campaign issue by Maryland Democrats is a splendid platform plank, but when it is applied where those of opposite political faith have an opportunity of securing an advantage in public office over their opponents then this plea of home rule is all wrong.

Incorporation Bill for Mt. Lake Park.

Yesterady in the Senate Senator McComas threw four local measures into the hopper of the legislative mill.

The first of these Senate bills provides for the incorporation of Mountain Lake Park and sets up the machinery of government for that town similar to the laws applying to other municipalities.

Increasing the salary of Garrett County's State's Attorney from $1,500 to $2,100 per annum; changing the date of meeting of the Garrett county Commissioners and placing those officers on an annual salary of $1,200 instead of the per diem method of pay as now applying, and authorizing the town of Kitzmillersville to issue $15,000 street improvement bonds, were the three other measures introduced by the Garrett county Senator.

In the House, Delegate Markley introduced a measure increasing from $125 to $300 amount to be allowed for funerals under State Compensation Law.

Group of Education Bills

A group of educational measures, sponsored by Delegate Lindsay, Baltimore county, were introduced in the House yesterday in an effort to give strength to the schools of the State. They were sponsored by the State Board of Education.

The most important of the bills provided that all children complete the elementary grades of schools before being allowed to go to work. The measure repealed the clause which permitted children to quit school and go to work, and further provided that school should be attended at all times it was in session.

The second of the measures provided for the completion and making Statewide of the census of handicapped children, mentally or physically, with the reports to be made to the State Board of Education rather than to the county boards.

War Veterans to Hear Talk on Obtaining Benefits

Mr. Charles F. Sargent, regional director of the War Veterans Bureau, will be in Oakland on Monday, March 16, to discuss the world war veterans' laws and advise them of the benefits and proper procedure for obtaining them.

The discussion will be held at the City hall, beginning at 7:30 o'clock and all world war veterans and members of the American Legion are urged to be present.

To Organize Rifle Team

Major George Parker, a prominent ex-service marine, and holder of a distinguished service cross, will also be present at the meeting to assist the local legion post in forming a rifle team. All legionaires and other ex-service men are urged to attend.

FARMERS SLOW IN ASKING HELP FROM DROUGHTBODY

Five or Six Have Applied for Assistance from Garrett County

Maryland farmers have responded slowly to Washington's offer of drought relief loans, Dr. T. B. Symons, director of the extension service, University of Maryland, has stated.

Dr. Symons predicted that the response would grow in volume during the next few weeks, as the farmers in drought sections became acquainted with the Agriculture Department's proposition.

Five or six farmers of Garrett county have applied for the relief, according to John H. Carter, county agent, but no reply as to their acceptance has been received thus far.

Mr. Carter attributed the farmers' reluctance to being compelled to answer precise questions in writing concerning the size of his family, what crops he planted last year and their net yield in dollars and cents, what crops he plans this year, and what he wants the money for.

All county agents will help the farmers of the state in filling out the application blanks. Once approved by the county committee, the application is sent to the Department of Agriculture for its approval or disapproval. If approved, a check for the amount of the loan is mailed directly from Washington to the applicant.

The largest sum any one farmer may borrow, Mr. Carter stated, is $600, and money is being loaned only for productive purposes, such as purchasing fertilizer, seed, fuel and oil for tractors, and feed for workstock.

The object of these training camps is to bring together annually for a month's training, the best representative young American citizens from all sections; to give them the basis of military instrucion and physical and moral development that will fit them to become influential leaders in their respective communities in time of peace and leaders for national defense in time of war; to inculcate a strong patriotism and a wholesale respect for discipline and obedience to constituted authority; above all, to teach the young men of this generation their serious duties, responsibilities and obligations to home and country.

Locomotive Hits Empty School Bus

The Garrett County school bus, owned by Cecil Ramsey, collided with a locomotive of the Preston railroad company at Crellin last Friday. Little damage resulted.

The bus was empty except for the driver, Cecil Ramsey, Jr., and he escaped without injuries. It was immediately repaired and put in service.

REPORT SHOWS FINANCIAL CONDITION OF CITY GOOD

Net Assets Increased Almost $9,000 During 1930—Permanent Improvements Are Made

BALANCE OF $4,315.48

Showing the town of Oakland to be in a sound financial condition, the annual financial report was presented at the regular meeting of the Mayor and Town Council held Monday night at the City hall. While receipts as a whole were smaller, expenditures were also smaller, leaving a balance in the treasury of $4,315.48, approximately $75 more than last year.

The statement shows that the town now owes nothing except its bonded indebtedness, the amount of $8,000 as a balance on the street improvement loan, and $12,000 due on the fire trucks.

The assets have increased $4,500 during the past year while the liabilities have decreased approximately $4,000, making an increase in net assets of almost $9,000.

While the ordinary and necessary expenditures aggregate nearly $1,000 per month, the ones of special interest throughout 1930 included $6,500 as payment on the street improvement loan, the laying of 1,000 feet of new service lines for the water system, all copper; the laying of 3,090 feet of side water mains; digging of two new wells at a cost of $320 to take care of Oakland's water supply in any future emergencies; and the remodeling of the city hall at a cost of $852.

So much permanent improvement was made in the water lines on account of the laying of the cement shoulders along Third street and Oak street, Mayor Stemple pointed out.

A number of streets were oiled at a cost of $1,054.73, and other streets improved with macadam construction.

Listed among the assets were unpaid taxes for the years 1927, 1928, 1929 and 1930, amounting to approximately $20,000, enough to pay the indebtedness on the street improvement loan and the balance due on the fire trucks.

The report will be found on another page of The Republican today. The financial statement was presented by A. G. Ross, clerk, and was passed by the council and approved by Mayor Stemple at the monthly meeting Monday night. Monday evening's meeting was the final session of the present council as the annual election for members of the body will be held on Monday, March 9. The new council will organize on April 6.

To Hold Forest Wardens' Conference in Oakland

The annual Forest Wardens' conference will be held in Oakland on Monday and Tuesday, March 9 and 10, at the Court House, according to A. L. Sincs, district forester.

All forest wardens in Garrett county are requested to be present and take part in the discussions. There will be speakers from Baltimore and Washington, and members of the State Forestry department.

Green St. Quint Beats Friendsville High School

Green Street Junior High School, Cumberland, defeated Friendsville High School, Tuesday night at Cumberland 37 to 16. The Junior High passers held the upper hand throughout with the score standing 15 to 10 at half time.

Jenkins and East divided the high scoring laurels for Friendsville.

For the second time this season the Friendsville High girls defeated the Green street girls 11 to 8.

Grass Fire Extinguished

The Oakland Volunteer Fire department was called yesterday morning about 10:30 o'clock to extinguish a grass fire at the east edge of town which had burned over several acres of ground and was spreading rapidly, endangering the homes of Paul McIntire and A. G. Ross.

The blaze was brought under control in a short time.

Rev. W. B. Brock, pastor of Garrett Memorial Presbyterian church, preached the sermon at the Union Lenten service in the M. E. church last evening. The next service will be held in St. Matthew's Episcopal church Wednesday evening at 7:30, and Rev. C. A. Shilke will preach the sermon.

Alumni and High School Quints to Play Friday

As the final home game of the season the Oakland High School basketball team will meet the alumni of O. H. S. at the school auditorium on Friday evening at 8:00 o'clock.

In a game played last Friday evening the alumni were barely able to nose out the school quint, an extra period being required to gain an 18-14 victory. This week, however, the high school five are determined to give the old grads a setback, according to Foster Speicher, coach, and an interesting game is promised.

Admission will be 15 and 25 cents. The alumni will line up with McComas at center; Nally and Hanst at the guard positions, and Stanton and either Pollock or Sanders at the forward posts.

The high school will present its usual lineup of Maroney and Glotfelty, forwards; Sollars, center, and Graves and Rice, guards.

STATE BUYS 6,000 ACRES OF GARRETT FOREST LAND

Purchase of Tract In This County Brings State Holdings Up To 32,000 Acres

LAND IN POTOMAC VALLEY

Purchase of a 6,000-acre tract of woodland in Garrett county by the State Forestry Department, was announced yesterday in the office of the Department at Baltimore. The area is nearly a quarter as large as the present State forest preserves.

The land is situated on Backbone Mountain and is said to be heavily timbered. It slopes from the mountain to the Potomac River, where there is a wide water frontage. The purchase raises the total area of Maryland's forest preserves to 32,000 acres, F. W. Besley, chief forester, said.

Three smaller tracts are now under option, and their purchase would bring an additional 3,000 acres under state control. Mr. Besley said that the State hopes to have 200,000 acres of forest preserves by 1940.

LEGION TO AID VETERANS WHO DESIRE BONUS LOANS

Proctor Kildow Post to Cooperate With Veterans' Bureau

Proctor Kildow Post, No. 71, American Legion, has arranged to cooperate with the Veterans' Bureau by assisting former service men who desire to borrow money on their adjusted service certificates. A Legion member will be at the Legion Hall on Third street, Oakland, on Saturday, March 7, from 1 until 4 p. m., and on Monday, March 9, at 7 p. m., to assist those desiring to convert their certificates into cash.

The proper form of application blanks, the same as used formerly, will be kept there and no charge will be made by the Legion for assistance in filling out these applications. Ex-service men not personally known to officers of local post are requested to arrange to have themselves identified at the time they make application. They should bring along their discharge certificate or similar means of identifying themselves or their signatures.

Where no loan has previously been made the adjusted service certificate itself is required to accompany the application. If a loan has already been made the veteran should bring along the receipt slip from the Veterans' Bureau showing the amount already advanced.

The American Legion calculates that if veterans borrow up to the full amount available and do not repay the loan, the principal and compounded interest will about consume the balance of the value of the certificate by the end of the twenty-year period.

To Hold Mission Study Classes

The combined missionary societies of the churches of Oakland have planned for a mission study class, to meet for its first session in the Sunday School room of St. Mark's Lutheran church on Thursday afternoon, March 12, at 2:30 o'clock. Mrs. W. W. Grant will teach the first chapter in the book, "India on the March," which is the text the class will use.

The class will continue for six weeks, devoting an hour each week to each chapter of the book. All who are interested are invited to attend. There will be no financial requirements.

TO NOMINATE CANDIDATES FOR MUNICIPAL OFFICES

Citizens' Meeting to be Held Tonight at 8 o'clcok—Election to be Held on Monday

TO OPEN POLLS AT EIGHT

Nomination of candidates for three councilmen and a treasurer of the town of Oakland will be made at a citizens' meeting to be held this evening in the City Hall at 8 o'clock, G. C. Stemple, mayor, has announced. Election for these offices will be held on Monday, March 9.

Mayor Stemple is requesting that a representative group of citizens be present and take an interest in the municipal affairs by nominating responsible men on the ticket. The meeting will be called to order by the mayor, after which a chairman will be named to conduct the business affairs.

No candidates have as yet appeared openly in the field and there is uncertainty as to whether or not the retiring councilmen will be candidates to succeed themselves. It is felt that several will appear at the meeting tonight. In case of more than six candidates for councilmen, it was undecided whether or not names would be placed on the ballot or cut down by vote of the citizens present at the meeting. The latter method has been used during the last several years.

At the election on Monday, March 9, the voters will elect three persons as members of the Town Council and one person for the office of treasurer, the councilmen to serve terms of two years, and the treasuruer a term of one year.

The polls will open at 8 o'clock a. m. at the council chamber and will remain open until 6 o'clcok p. m.

White Way Uncertain

The question as to whether or not a person is in favor of the White Way for Oakland, will not be placed on the ballot, according to Mayor Stemple. Upon investigation it was found to be illegal to place anything on the ballot except the names of candidates for the municipal offices.

To place such a question on the ballot, it would have been necessary to pass a bill through the legislature, it was stated. Since the motion for a White Way was tabled some time ago by the council, the question will not come up again unless requested by the new council, or by a number of citizens.

Noted Musician Coming to Oakland

The examination for promotion of students of the music class taught by Sister Augustine in the Parochial School in Oakland will be held during the third week in March.

Mr. Otto Ortmann, of the Peabody Conservatory, formerly came in person for this examination, but now that he is a director of the Conservatory he has appointed Sister Adelaide Norwood, a Peabody graduate, to come in his place. She will examine according to Peabody standards.

This Sister is in charge of the music department at Mt. St. Agnes College, Maryland. She is the daughter of the well known opera singer, Madame Adelaide Norwood. For her early music study she was sent to Germany. Later she continued at Mt. Saint Agnes under the Sisters of Mercy and her finishing work was done at Peabody Conservatory.

While in Oakland, Sr. Adelaide will give a recital in St. Peter's Hall. The music pupils and their parents will be invited. Her program will be:

F. Chopin...Scherza in C sharp minor
MozartBachaus .....Serenade
F. Liszt.....Au Bord d'une Source
F. Liszt.....La Campanella

Winchester Boys' Band to Give Concert Here

Plans for a concert to be given in Oakland on April 17 by the Hanley High school band of Winchester, Va., have been made by R. R. Gilbert, director of the Gilbert-Brown Boys' Band of Oakland.

A concert will be given in the afternoon in the school auditorium, and the night entertainment will be given in the Maryland theatre. The proceeds will go for the benefit of the Oakland Boys' Band.

A meeting of the Oakland Boys' Band and the Band Auxiliary will be held on March 10, at 7:30, in the City hall, to arrange for accommodations for the members of the visiting band.

Her Manuscripts Were Duds

By DOROTHY DOUGLAS

(Copyright.)

WHEN Jean Barry returned home after collecting a number of rejected stories from editorial offices she had so settled it in her own mind to give up story writing that she didn't really mind the fact that she had left the bundle of "dud" manuscripts somewhere.

"I don't know and I dont care," she told herself defiantly and swished a sudden tear from her eyes. She wondered vaguely if she had left them in the subway and whether the person who found them would return them.

John Winter, who found the packet on the subway when he went home from the office, glanced through them for an address, found the name, Dudley De Voe, and a street and number in the West Sixties, and wondered what to do with them.

"I'll just take them along to old Binks; he'll know what's best and may give him a plot as well."

Old Binks happened to be St. John Binks, a writer of no small fame and Winter's best pal.

"Picked up some poor chap's ravings coming home tonight," he told Binks, and handed over the packet. "Thought you might like to give them the casual before sending them back."

"Look's as if he had shopped them all over the place," was Binks' interested comment.

Consequently, a day or two later, Jean Barry received a letter that first enraged, then amused, then interested her.

It began, "Dear De Voe," and Jean laughed as she habitually did when addressed as a man. "Your stories have come into my hands. I am going to rewrite and sell them for you. You must be very young and inexperienced in women's wiles. Your women characters are feeble—women aren't like that nowadays. Your plots and manner are splendid but characterization awful. I don't want to meet you yet as it would perhaps weaken my conception of these characters or you might try to talk me into something I could not see. These stories are quite unsalable as they are, and I see they have been rejected, so feel confident you won't mind my collaboration. Will post on half the check to you as each story is published. Yours, XXX."

"Well, of all things! Nerve! Conceit! I don't know anything about women, don't I? Oh, well, I should worry anyway. There may be nothing in this letter but the ravings of a slightly demented old thing or—better still—I might get some checks."

Then one sunny morning Jean opened a letter in which was a check so big as to make her gasp and clutch her hair and cry and then sing. After all that she glanced through the short note.

"Watch Post week of ninth."

Jean scarcely ate or slept until that Friday morning dawned when she could get the Post.

There it was with her own title, "Triflers," by Dudley De Voe and St. John Binks.

"St. John Binks—seems to me I know that name," muttered Jean as she rushed home to read the story. There was no slightest doubt of it being an extraordinarily good yarn now that it was masterfully written.

Jean's next act was to write a short note to Binks, care of Post.

"Have reserved third table on left at Golywog, Thursday evening. Please don't disappoint. Will have magazine lying on table. De Voe."

When Binks stood in the low doorway of the Golywog to survey the human contents of that quaint dining place of upper Bohemia he fell to a sudden wish that some one sitting across the room could be his dinner partner. She was very, very alluring.

Then, Binks turned hot, then cold, was possessed of a wild desire to escape and a still wilder one to be dragged to his fate.

Suddenly she smiled. St. John Binks knew that in some purely feminine way she had recognized him as her collaborator. He went swiftly over and before sitting down opposite her had felt the warming glow in her finger clasp.

"You have been perfectly wonderful to me," she was saying, and little sparkles of electricity seemed to be snapping all about her. "If there is that much-talked-of place called a Seventh Heaven you have certainly put me there. I do want to thank you."

St. John Binks finally found his voice and to very good advantage. "You are thanking me—there was only one thought that entered my brain when I stepped through that door and it was that I might be sitting right here—and here I am. Isn't life great—sometimes?" He was gazing unbelievingly right into Jean's intelligent eyes.

"Sometimes," responded Jean, alias Dudley De Voe. And there was something about the manner in which she cast down her eyes that augured well for the future happiness of Binks.

Indians and Maple Sugar

The Indians taught us to make and enjoy maple sugar, says the American Tree association. In northern Minnesota one tribe still continues this ancestral industry, selling pure maple sugar in birch bark containers, much the same as their forefathers made before the coming of the white man. Today the chief center of production is in the northeastern states.

RECORD FOR MARRIAGES IN FEBRUARY IS BROKEN

Clerk Grants Eighty-nine Permits During Past Month

The all-time record for marriage licenses issued during the month of February was surpassed during the past month when eighty-nine permits were issued. This number is 16 more than were issued for February of 1930, which was the largest total up to that time.

For the first two months of 1931 there have been 11 more licenses issued than in 1927 when the all-time record for the year was established with a total of 1,300.

Sixteen marriage permits were granted during the past week, according to E. Z. Tower, clerk. The small number was said to be due partly to the period of Lent. Four of the licenses were marked "don't publish," while four applicants were refused. Saturday, as usual, was the busiest day for the clerk, eight being issued on that day, and three applicants refused.

"Let's call him up!"

WHEN plans of any kind are afoot nowadays, the first thing people turn to is the ever-ready, ever-faithful telephone. It's the natural thing to do.

Telephone service has become a vital necessity in the management of our daily affairs. Why? Because this is the day of speed—of rapid transportation, and above all of quick communication. Things must be done at once and by means of the telephone we can get them done at once. It serves a thousand and one useful purposes requiring quick action.

One of the most important reasons for the wide-spread use of telephone service is the extreme reasonableness of the charges. There's a class of service to fit every need and a price to fit every pocketbook.

It is our policy to furnish the most telephone service and the best at the lowest cost consistent with financial safety.

MEN OUTNUMBER WOMEN IN MARYLAND BY 10,000

Men Have No Need to Fear Losing Their Present Preeminence

In spite of the fact that there are three women in the Maryland Legislature this season, and that women are taking an increasingly active part in business, professional and other affairs, the Census of 1930 showed that there are over 10,000 more men than women in this State. The men, therefore, have no need to fear that they will lose their present position of preeminence.

Preliminary reports of the census of 1930 sent to the State Department of Health by the U. S. Bureau of the Census, show that in April, 1930, there were 1,631,526 persons living in Maryland, of whom 821,009 were males and 810,517 were females. Beginning with the babies less than a year old and continuing through each age group, up to and including persons 64 years old, there were fewer females than males in each group. the staying quality of women were manifest and from that onward to 75 years old and older, the women exceeded the men in each age group. There were 96,778 persons in the group from 65 years and upward—45,949 men and 50,825 women.

Division of the population according to color, nativity and citizenship, showed the same excess of men over women in the State, 1,354,193 or 83.0 percent were white and 277,333 or 17.0 percent were colored. Of the total white population, 679.713 were males, and 674,480 were females. Of the total colored population, 141,296 were males and 136.037 were females.

In the total white population, 1,259,078 were native-born, and 95,115 foreign-born. Of the native-born, 629,428 were males and 629,650 were females—or 222 more women than men. In the foreign-born group, 55,059 were naturalized—29,739 males and 25,320 females; 8,100 had taken out their first papers—6,034 men and 2,066 women; and 25,359 were not naturalized and were listed as aliens. Of this number, 11,500 were males and 13,859 females. Another exception to the prevailing rule of more males than females in each group was shown in a total of 6,597 among the foreign-born whose citizenshiu was not recorded. In this group were 3,012 males and 3,585 females.

SCOOP'S COLUMN

By SCOOP—HIMSELF

Things are extremely quiet in Garrett county tbis week. There hasn't been any murder suspects for at least 168 hours. Can't the men do something to regain their reputation?

* * *

Scoop received a letter during the past week from J. E. Moomaw, of Princeton, N. J., who is advocating the installation of a Walker-Gordon milker for cows. The letter follows:

Mr. Scoop. Dear Sir:

I am sending you a picture of the Walker-Gordon milker. Perhaps the dairy men of Garrett county can get together and install a milker like this one, in or near Oakland, and bring their cows to it by truck. I am sure you can work out a plan for this that will be satisfactory to all. Perhaps Mr. Towler will allow you to build it on his lawn instead of Baby Golf. Please take this matter up with your staff engineers.

Also tell Bill Browning and his band of big game hunters to bring their hounds and come out to New Jersey as the Coyotes are big and tame here. One of them carried off two of my old hens Friday morning, coming right up while I was watching him the second time.

All dairymcn are requested to write to Mr. Moomaw for particulars.

Sorry we can't show a picture of the milker.

Nominations in Order

The combination of Whorton Stuck Little will come to an end on March 9, when three other councilmen will be named from the municipal ballot. These three have finished their two year term of harmony, (council meeting are always harmonious), and now time will hang heavy on their hands. Horse Power Stuck won't have any waterworks to inspect, and Bill won't have any street committee to look after.

An ordinance against roller skates, bicycles and Austin's is being prepared for the next council meeting by Mayor Monk Stemple, following an episode on Tuesday afternoon in front of Harned's Drug Store, the hangout for the members of the Amalgamated Society for the Prevention of Work.

Of course no one seems to know exactly how it happened. Scoop looked out of his window and saw an Austin parked in front of the office. He looked again, five minutes later, and the Austin was up on the sidewalk, line up with a baby carriage.

A puff of wind may have lifted it to the sidewalk, but more likely it was about four big puffs of hot air. When Mel Keller, of Kingwood, the owner, appeared, he took the affair very nonchalantly and drove to Dixon's corner on the sidewalk before returning to the street. Luckily the foot traffic was not heavy at the time.

Investigation proves that the "parsnip" story from Mounatin Lake was a true one. This morning I went down where Bob Moomaw was working and found him digging parsnips. The ground was frozcn and I lingered but thc air was too cold for me. When I left he was down five feet and still had not come to the end of the tap root. Will report actual length next wcek.

SAVE YOUR EYES

By
Dr. J. F. Andrae, Secretary Maryland State Board of Optometry

"Childhood Eye Infections"

It would be improper to leave the subject to the care of the eyes in childhood without some reference to the contagious character of the forms of eye infections to which children are especially liable to suffer. There are several different types of infections some of which are quite serious and all of which may, if neglected, prove serious.

Any form of eyeinflammationoreye infection should receive early professional attention. The sufferer should be extremely careful about communicating the disease to other members of the family or school through the use of a common towel, the interchange of handkerchiefs and clothing, and similar forms of communication. The child should be excused from school work during the period of the inflammation and should remain quietly at home being careful to undertake no work requiring active use of the eyes.

Tinted glasses may be necessary to permit comfort or to relieve the eyes from the dazzling effect of light brought about by the increased sensitiveness of the infected eyes. Cleanliness should be practiced thoroughly and every precaution taken to prevent the spread of increasc of the disease.

The BEST Gray Hair Remedy is Home Made

To half pint of water add one ounce bayrum, asmall box of Barbo Compound and one-fourth ounce of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. It will gradually darken streaked, faded or gray hair and make it soft and glossy. Barbo will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.

Run-Down, Weak, Nervous?

To have plenty of firm flesh and the ability to do a big day's work and feel "like a two-year-old" at night, you must relish your food and properly digest it. If you can't eat, can't sleep, can't work, just give Tanlac the chance to do for you what it has done for millions.

Mrs. Fred Westin, of 387 E. 57th St. North, Portland, Ore., says: "Tanlac cured my stomach trouble completely after three years suffering. It built me up to perfect health, with a gain of 27 lbs."

Tanlac is wonderful for indigestion—gas pains, nausea, dizziness and headaches. It brings back lost appetite, helps you digest food, and gain strength and weight. No mineral drugs; only roots, barks and herbs, nature's own medicines. Less than 2 cents a dose. Get a bottle from your druggist. Your money back if it doesn't help.

LENTEN AIMS

The observance of Lent is as old as the Christian era. A practice that has lasted so many centuries is a very remarkable thing. It must be based somehow on human needs, and it must have supplied some human want, or it would have died out long before this.

In these materialistic times, a great portion of the people give scarcely a thought to such a custom. The ideas for which it preeminently stands are those of reflection, penitence, self sacrifice and abstinence. These ideas are not popular today. The world is in too much of a rush to do much reflecting. It is too busy anticipating the future to spend time in regrets. It is too selfish for much self sacrifice. And it prefers physical satisfaction to abstinence.

And yet these four principles are all vital. People who do not reflect, make mistakes they bitterly regret. Those who do not regret their follies are not developing anything worth while in human nature. Those who are not capable of self sacrifice will never attain any nobility of character. Those who are incapable of rational abstinence spend their lives in mere coarse self pleasing.

Any custom that turns people's aims in the direction of reflection, repentance, self sacrifice, and abstinence, should draw people out of their absorption in selfish aims. It suggests that life is not given us wholly for pleasing ourselves, nor for indulging our animal natures.

It is extremely easy for people to settle down into self centered habits of life. Getting money, having a good time, pleasing our senses, these seem to be the ends that satisfy the majority. But human nature gets nowhere when it seeks simply those ends. People are not very far removed above the animals when their impulses are confined within these narrow rounds.. The Lenten custom tells its devotees that life is more than all that.

WHY RUSH?

Two doctors, in two different cities, recently had something to say about the rush of modern life. Dr. Charles H. Mayo, of Rochester, Minn., in an address before a group of doctors, expressed the opinion that the speed of life presents a greater problem today than disease. Most of today's physical ailments are transient, running a course and vanishing. But the proportion of insanity is twice what it was before the automobile arrived.

Dr. Ernest L. Hines, chief medical director of the New York Life Insurance Company, in a recent address said that heart disease ranked first in 1930 as a cause of death among the company's policyholders in the United States and Canada. It caused 18 per cent of the deaths. The heart disease rate was 17 per cent in 1929 and 13 per cent in 1920.

"One of the primary reasons for the increase," Dr. Hines said, "is the fevered rush of modern life. The combination of overworking, overeating and overplaying drives the circulatory machinery at top speed without allowing for rest periods which the body needs for its proper functions."

The strange thing about this rush of contemporary life is that it is unnecessary. It would be much easier to prune our activities down to a reasonable and healthful amount than we flurried ones seem to realize. After such pruning we'd enjoy the things we chose to do more than ever and would get more fun out of life than we do by trying to keep up with everything.

TOLERATION FOR CORRUPTION

One of the worst features about the corruption that disgraces the politics of many cities, is the easy going and cynical way in which the citizens of these communities view it. They laugh at it, and say, "Everybody's getting it." Many of them do some quiet figuring as to how they can obtain their share of it.

What a terrible contrast that appears to the pure and lofty sentiments of the founders of our republic who were above thought of dishonest acquiring. They believed in the honesty of the common people, and felt that most persons could be trusted not merely to be honest themselves, but to war with righteous indignation against all who abuse the opportunities of public life.

The average American citizen does not approve of corruption today, but he feels it is too much trouble to war against it. If he can see that a certain type of graft costs him $50 annually, he considers that it might cost him several times that amount to take part in some effort to fight it. He does not want to be bothered, or take his time for political work, or incur the antagonism of anyone, so he just submits to it and smiles cynically.

Furthermore, there is a large class of people who will vote for people whom they have reason to know are not above corrupt practices, provided such ones will make promises to favor the particular element to which they belong.

Our government is going to be extremely costly, if the people allow this spirit to rule. This easy going attitude toward dishonesty is one result of the money chasing spirit of the times, which makes the acquisition of wealth the most important thing. It is also encouraged by the tendency in America's educational system to lay stress on the acquiring of mere knowledge and ability to earn a living, without due emphasis on fundamental virtues like common honesty.

IN DAYS OF OLD

FORTY YEARS AGO

James W. Bell, who removed from Oakland to Frostburg a few years ago, was in town Saturday. He has rented the building at the southwest corner of Main and Oak streets and will occupy it in April where he will engage at his trade as saddle and harness maker.

Messrs. Filbert and King, who erected the electric light machinery and wires in Oakland, went to Wheeling where they are erecting a plant for lighting Mt DeChantal, a school for women near Wheeling.

The coldest day this winter was Sunday when the thermometer registered 16 degrees below zero at Sturgiss' pharmacy, and 22 below at the Glades hotel.

Messrs. George O. Miller and company are now in the storeroom lately occupied by John Shartzer.

Miss Lillian Turley is visiting relatives in Keyser this week.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

The tanning mill at Hutton, which was closed several weeks ago for extensive repairs, has resumed operating at maximum capacity.

The Oakland hotel was purchased by the Oakland construction company, composed of Messrs. Truman West, D. E. Bolden, Henry Lauer, and G. Semmes Hamill, Jr., who will tear down the building. The company has already secured plans for a model hotel to be erected on the corner of Alder and Third streets.

The board of directors of the Oakland Dairy association decided to start the creamery and ice cream plant in operation on March 27.

The lecture on Monday entitled "How to court, when to marry and how to have a happy home," delivered by Rev. Gay in the Presbyterian church, was largely attended.

REPUBLICANS HAVE SIX SENATORS AT ANNAPOLIS

Number Is Small But Representative and of High Personal Character and Ability

GARRETT SENATOR LIKED

By PAUL WINCHESTER,
Annapolis Correspondent of The Republican.

The Republican representation in the State Senate is made up of men of whom that party has every reason to be proud and not the slightest reason to be ashamed. All are men of high personal character, not only as to citizenship, but also as to their ability and real desire to do their best for the welfare of the State at large as represntatives of their local communities whose immediate agents they are, in the General Assembly of the State. And in the present session the minority members in both Houses, but especially in the Senate, are far above the average of former years, not only so far as their party is concerned, but also are on equality with the representatives of the majority.

In other words, all are gentlemen; all are men whose character and ability are such that neither their immediate constituents nor their party have any reason to be other than proud of them and well satisfied with any records they may make during the term for which they have been chosen.

Two of the gentlemen who make up the minority contingent have been here before: Mr. Andrews, of Dorchester, and Mr. Beauchamp, of Somerset. The other four are new members and are new to the public life of the State. All, however, are men of outstanding ability and reputation at home and the general impression among those who are familiar with Annapolis and the workings of the State Government is that Senators Beall, of Allegany, Baile, of Carroll, McComas, of Garrett, and Williams of Cecil, will size up in the final analysis with the best and most conscientious members of the General Assembly.

Mr. Andrews, of Dorchester, is the senior of his party here. He has an excellent record as an able and constructive worker, and in one of the sessions in which he served in years past he made the ablest argument presented in favor of the enlargement of the boundaries of Baltimore and not a few of those who were interested in that strenuous fight over the annexation of the large sections of Baltimore and Anne Arundel counties to the State's metropolis gave Mr. Andrews credit for more effective work in behalf of that greatly controversed measure than was performed by any other member of the Upper House on that memorable occasion.

Mr. Beauchamp, of Somerset, was here during the sessions of 1927 and 1929. He gained an excellent name for reliability and conscientious devotion to his work, and incidently much popularity among his colleagues of both parties in the entire Assembly. He ranks high as a lawyer, on the Eastern Shore, and is especially favored by the large contingent of oystermen along the shores of the Bay and its tributaries, whose cause he has at all times advocated with signal skill.

Mr. Beall, of Allegany, will undoubtedly be a great success in politice not only in his own county but throughout the state, should he desire it. His appearance and manner are striking, and all who meet him instinctively like him at sight. All of his colleagues are his friends, and it is doubtful if there is an official in the State House, from the Governor down to the pages and doorkeepers, who feel other than friendly to this strikingly handsome and magnetic young man who has come out of the hills of Allegany to represent that great mountain constituency in the law making body of his State. That he will be a decided success has already been demonstrated. He is attentive to all his duties and is one of the influential members of the committee on Finance, the most important of all committees.

Mr. Williams, of Cecil, is a hereditary member of the Senate, as his father, the late Dr. Frank Williams, represnted that county here for two sessions several years ago.

A sturdy, vigorous youth, with determination and fight in every movement, Mr. Williams is not unlike his honored father, who was a fighter in both sessions in which he was the cause of much trouble to the rather arrogant majority, which was made up of men who were allied to the customs of the old Democratic ring which no longer plays the part of dictator in the State House. There has been no occasion for fight, like those of the old days, when Frank Williams with his fiery and biting sarcasm scored the ruling powers, but should such occasion arise there is every reason to believe that young man from Cecil will prove to be worthy of his distinguished sire, who not only was famous as a political orator but earlier in life thrilled the Presbyterians of Baltimore, when, as a pastor of what is now the Northminster Church, at the corner of North Avenue and St. Paul Street, he preached the gospel of the lowly Christ and did not always interpret according to the strict rules of John Calvin.

Dr. McComas, of Garrett, is not only a worthy representative of his county but a most agreeable and cultivated gentleman of what is usually known as the old school. In appearance he resembles an old-time French nobleman and in manner he is not unlike a noted count of the old Napoleonic regime who passed his last days in Maryland nearly half a century ago. He has none of the bearing of a doctor, although his professional reputation and popularity among the people of Garrett county are of the highest,

He is highly esteemed by his colleagues in the Senate and is equally popular throughout the State House among the officials, including the Governor and all others.

An acquaintance with former Senators from Garrett, all of whom the writer has personally known for the past half century, warrants the statement that Dr. McComas is on a par with the best and superior in many particulars to several of his predecessors during that rather long period of time. It is a pleasure to know him, and in his care the interests of his constituents will be safe during the ensuing four years.

The Senator from Carroll, Mr. Balle, is one of the leading merchants of that prosperous and enterprising county. In fact it is not out of the way to say that he is not only popular as a busines man but also as a citizen to whom right and good will are of more importance than gain, for his reputation for square and honest dealing is such that people from all sections of the county, and not a few from the nearby sections of Frederick, often travel miles to deal with him at his large and well equipped storehouse at Medford on the Western Maryland Railway, a few miles beyond Westminster.

A characteristic act of Mr. Baile, during the period of the great war when prices were out of sight, was the fact that he kept on selling at the old prices and never raised his goods to his customers, in order to gain the extraordinary profits made by other merchants. He had on hand a large supply of sugar. As long as it lasted, and it lasted a long time, he sold it at the old before-the-war prices. As a result he became famous in that section of the State and is known today for his generous dealing with all.

He is a credit to Carroll and to the State, and his appearance, as he sits in the Senate chamber bears out his reputation. He is one of the kind of men whom Poe, the great poet, had in his mind when he wrote his celebrated line, two hundred years ago: "An honest man is the noblest work of God."

B. & O. Places Large Locomotives In Service

Following tests by the Motive Power department of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company on the Cumberland and other mountain divisions of the system, four jumbo locomotives, two freight and two passenger, have been put in service.

They represent the last work in modern locomotive designing for traction power, economy in operation and speed with safety. They were built by the Baldwin Locomotive Works, and are huge monsters with a boiler pressure of 250 pounds, twenty pounds in excess of any other locomotive in service.

The freight engines are Nos. 7400 and 7450, known as Mallet improved mountain type. While the Mallet is regarded as two-engines-in-one, the new type closely approximates three-in-one. They carry every labor saving and economic gadget known to the locomotive builder.

The passenger locomotives are Nos. 5510 and 5550. They have what auto builders call streamline.

The two new Mallet freight locomotives are now in service between Brunswick and Keyser and New Castle and Willard. All records for long trains and tonnage have been broken and smashed by the two engines, and it is declared that yardmasters are kept busy trying to find enough loads in terminal yards to stick on the trains. The old day of the familiarity of the head brakeman on the engine of such trains with the flagman or conductor in the caboose on the rear is gone, and they talk by telephone enroute between stations.

As for the new passenger locomotives, they have been placed on "crack" B. & O. trains between Washington and Pittsburgh, and negotiate the mountain grades without any helper. At a recent test the 5510 was put on the head end of a passenger train leaving Cumberland, steam was shut-off the regular engine at Baltimore street, and the 5510 never knew "nothing" about it but dragged the "supposed dead" locomotive and the regular passenger train up the mountain to the top of the grade without any apparent effort and keeping up schedule speed.

In this connection the Motive Power management on the Cumberland division anticipating larger locomotives, installed huge electrically operated turn-tables at Keyser and Cumberland last year.

The Cumberland Back or Erecting shop is the exclusive home station for all Mallet type locomotives, and they are repaired and re-conditioned there for all over the system.

COUNTY AGENT'S COLUMN

J. H. CARTER,
Resident County Agent,

More complete information will be available for those who desire to keep in touch with Maryland crop and farm conditions than could be obtained in recent years, it is announced by the Extension Service of the University of Maryland. It is stated that Mr. Richard C. Ross, a trained statistician of the United States Government, will be located at the University in College Park and will devote his time to assembling and arranging information from all counties in the State, relative to agricultural conditions.

A number of years ago, it is said, Maryland had the benefit of a similar service, but in recent years had to depend for this important information upon the part-time efforts of a statistician located in Washington. The new arrangement, according to Dr. Thomas B. Symons, Director of Extension, who had an active part in bringing it about, puts Maryland on the same basis as most of the other important agricultural states and assures more complete and more up-to-date information than at any time in the past. He further points out that in seasons such as the drought year of 1930 it is highly essential that an accurate knowledge of farming conditions be available at all times, as knowledge of that kind is necessary as a basis for any emergency or relief measures that are undertaken.

It is advisable that all correspondence relating to crop reports should be addressed to Agricultural Statistician, Maryland Crop Reporting Service, College Park, Maryland.

A Surprise Party

Mrs. Harold Georg, Accident, entertained at a birthday dinner on last Saturday in honor of her husband's 25th anniversary. The following guests were present: Mr. and Mrs. Alex. The birthday cake was presented by Miss Anna Georg and was decorated with twenty-five candles. The dinner and evening's entertainment were equally enjoyable.

At Lakewood, N. J., a cemetery known as the Clara Glenn Cemetery for Animals, is located on the outskirts of the city, in which are buried hundreds of dogs, numerous cats, monkeys, mice, parrots, and guinea pigs in 600 well-kept graves, over some of which handsome monuments have been erected.

CHANGES TO BE MADE IN GAME LAWS OF THE STATE

Only Buck Deer With Two or More Points To One Antler Would Be Killable

Elimination of the bounty on hawks, changes in the open seasons on upland game, and additional restrictions on the use of traps were three of the principle points in a bill providing changes in the Maryland game laws prepared for introduction in the General Assembly this week.

Despite agitation by sportsmen and their organizations, no restrictions were placed on wild fowl in the measure which was drawn by E. Lee LeCompte, State Game Warden inconjunction with the members of the fish and game committees of both the House and Senate.

Administration Measure

Mr. LeCompte said the bill would carry out the recodification of game laws undertaken by the 1929 season of the assembly. He said it would be placed in the hands of Governor Ritchie early this week for introduction in both Houses as an administration measure. He appeared before a joint session of the game committee of the two Houses last week, to explain its provisions.

One of the chief sources of individual revenue of some persons, particularly in Dorchester county, would be taken away under the repeal of the hawk bounty. In 1929 the State Conservation Department paid out more than $7,000 bounty funds, at 50 cents per hawk. More than $5,000 of this was collected in Dorchester county.

Delegate Roger V. Laynor, Howard county chairman of the House Fish and Game Committee, said the greater migratory hawks, which would pause in the shore counties, sometimes not more than 24 hours, on their trips north and south, whereas the purpose of the county was to wipe out resident hawks.

The open season on water fowl, including all varieties of duck, would be left unchanged, running from November 1 to January 31.

Sportsmen, actuated by the scarcity of ducks during the current season, had advocated either a closed season for one or two years, or at least a reduction in the hunting time, to allow re-propagation of the depleted flocks.

One clause in the bill made it unlawful for the placing of traps of any description on the property of another person without written permission from such property owner.

Deer Laws Changed

The deer hunting season in the three counties where it is permitted, Allegany, Garrett and on a game preserve in Washington, was left unchanged, but the descriptive clause regulating buck deer which may be killed was changed, raising the age of permissible deer. Instead of the six inch anthler, the clause was made to read "deer with two or more points to one antler."

The closed season in Garrett county on woodcock, pheasant, ruffed grouse, rabbit, wild turkey and partridges would be extended for two more years, and the hunting of the female English ring-neck and mongolian pheasant forbidden at all times.

Nearly a month was slashed from the squirrel and dove season, five days being cut from the first part of the season in September and 21 days from the latter part in November and December.

Under the bill, the season would open September 20, instead of September 1, and close October 15, instead of September 30. After the closed period between the first and second part of the open time, the season would open on November 15, for one month rather than opening November 10, and running to December 31.

Restrictions as to hunting of squirrel and doves in Harford, Howard, and Baltimore counties would be removed, while the Allegany and Garrett county season, now open from October 1 to November 9, would open November 15 and close a month later, cutting ten days from the hunting period in those two counties.

Limit Days For Dead Game

The new measure also contained a clause making it unlawful to possess dead game during closed seasons, except three days after the end of the hunting period. Deer, however, killed in another state or county, could be brought into the state under permit.

The protective season on raccoon and oppossum was made to fall one day later than under present laws, and a clause was inserted which would allow the training of dogs by tracking and running of the two animals, provided they were accompanied by their owners who were not to be armed or molest the animals after they were treed.

The two new measures designating antler description in the deer law was accompanied by a clause making it unlawful to use any trap, pitfall, salt lick, snare, net, or artificial light in the hunting of bucks. It also was provided that the slaper of any deer must notify the state game warden within 24 hours, including in the notification his name, address, hunter's license number, and county or location where the deer was killed.

Mr. and Mrs. John Michael and Mr. Samuel Butt motored to Akron, Ohio, on Saturday, returning to Oakland Sunday.

In Memory of the Late Charles S. May

Members of the Bible class of the Mountain Lake Park Methodist Episcopal church adopted the following in memory of the late Charles S. May and request its publication in these columns:

Since an all-wise Father in His provdence has seen fit to remove from our midst our esteemed brother and friend, Charles S. May, we, the members of the Bible class of the Mountain Lake Park Methodist Episcopal church, bereaved by the passing from our midst of this esteemed class member and president, desire to express our appreciation of his splendid influence for the better things of life.

His church was so real to him and in the Bible class he found an avenue for the expression of this devotion. Tireless in duty, brotherly in fellowship, optimistic in his hope, he led the class in laying those foundations upon which we hope the class of the future will be built.

We have faith to believe that "God finishes the work by noble souls begun."

Lesson for March 8

THE GOOD SAMARITAN

GOLDEN TEXT—Thou shalt not avenge, nor bear any grudge against the children of thy people, but thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself: I am the Lord.

LESSON TEXT—Luke 10:25-37.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus' Story of a Real Friend.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus' Story of a Real Friend.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Serving and Sharing.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Stewardship of Life.

I. How to Inherit Eternal Life (vv. 25-38).

1. The lawyer's question (v. 25). The term "lawyer" here means one versed in religious law—the Scriptures, not lawyer in our modern sense of that term. It would more nearly correspond to our theological professor. The lawyer's object was to trip Jesus, to induce him to take such a stand as would weaken his influence as a teacher. He expected Jesus to set forth some new ceremonies which would conflict with or disparage the law of Moses.

2. Jesus' question (v. 26). Though Jesus knew the motive of the lawyer, he did not evade his question. He sent him to the law, the field which was familiar to him. He thus robbed him of his own weapon.

3. The lawyer's reply (v. 27). He made an intelligent answer, declaring that the entire content of the law was embraced in love to God and man. This expresses the whole of human duty.

4. Jesus' reply (v. 28). The straightforward answer went to the heart of the lawyer. Perfect love to God and man is truly the way of life. No man has yet had nor can have such love. His sinful condition precludes its possibility. Man's failure to measure up to this requirement is his condemnation. The lawyer keenly felt this thrust. He was defeated on his own grounds and convicted of guilt.

II. Who Is My Neighbor (vv. 29-37).

1. The lawyer's question (v. 29). This question reveals the insincerity of the lawyer. Christ's answer had reached his conscience, and now he seeks to escape the difficulty by asking a captious question. Lawyer-like he sought to get off by raising a question as to the meaning of words.

2. Jesus' answer (vv. 30-37). Jesus' reply more than answered the lawyer's question. In the Parable of the Good Samaritan he makes clear who is a neighbor, and also what it means to be a neighbor and what loving a neighbor means. Christ's answer had a double meaning. He not only made clear who is my neighbor, but made it clear that the lawyer was not playing the neighbor.

a. Who is my neighbor? This destitute and wounded man, left on the wayside by the robbers, is a man who needs a neighbor. My neighbor, therefore, is the one who needs my help, whether he lives next door or on the other side of the world. It does not regard locality, nationality, or blood relation.

b. What being a neighbor means. Our supreme concern should not be "Who is my neighbor?" but "Whose neighbor am I?" To be a neighbor is:

(1) To be on the look-out for those in need of our help (v. 33). It is keen to discern the needs of those with whom it is brought into contact. (2) To have compassion on the needy (v. 33). Christ's compassion was aroused as he came into contact with those who were suffering and in need. (3) To give to those in need (v. 34). Love does not calculate the cost of its actions. Whenever there is calculation of cost, there is the expression of selfishness. Many are willing to give money to help the poor and needy but are unwilling personally to minister to them. The true neighbor gives himself as well as his money.

(4) To bind up wounds (v. 34). If we have eyes to discern, we shall see many wounds about us that need attention. (5) To set the helpless ones on our beasts while we walk (v. 34). This is the proof of the genuineness of our love. Those who are like Christ will deny themselves in order to have something to give to those who are in need. (6) To bring to the inn and take care of the unfortunate (v. 34). Genuine love does not leave its service incomplete. True love follows up the needy. (7) To give money (v. 35). It costs a good deal to be a neighbor. Love is the most expensive thing in the world. It cost God his only Son. It cost Jesus Christ his life.

This parable has been through the centuries the classic illustration of true Christian neighborliness.

Born of God

"He that loveth is born of God," therefore let us "keep our friendships in repair." Let us cultivate the spirit of friendship, and let the love of Christ develop it into a great love not only for our friends but for all humanity! —Henry Drummond.

God's Errands

Difficulties are God's errands; and when we are sent upon them we should esteem it a proof of God's confidence.—Henry Ward Beecher.

Billy Was a He-Man

By GENEVRA COOK

(Copyright.)

IT WAS an exciting day for Billy Burton when his father came home. Billy was standing in the middle of the roadway in front of Grandmother's, lifting with the sturdy strength of an eight-year-old the frail body of little Lou Ellen, and swinging her high over his head, while she made trills of delighted laughter. A breath-taking man in a khaki uniform with a shiny silver on the front swooped him up in strong arms, and called loudly: "Mary! Mary!" Then Mother came running with a funny crying sound, and Billy jumped up and down and shouting, "My father's a captain in the army. He's come home from China. My father . . ." and little Lou Ellen sat forlornly on the sidewalk, quite forgotten.

After that they went to the Fort to live. Lou Ellen, who was a sort of second cousin of Billy's, and whose Daddy was only a lieutenant, went there to live, too. One night, when he was lying awake, he heard his father saying his name.

"It's a shame, Mary," Father was saying, "the way you've been bringing that boy up to be such a sissy! Why, he doesn't swim, or play football, or anything! Just plays hour after hour with a three-year-old baby—and a girl, at that!"

Mother's voice was low, and Billy couldn't hear her answer, but Father said, "Well, I'll take hold of him, and before long teach him to be a regular he-man!"

It was the next Saturday that Billy's father took him over to the riding hall and began to give him lessons in horseback riding. Billy went without question or comment, but he understood that this was the beginning of his being made into a "regular be-man." He watched wistfully for every sign of approval from his hero, his sober face brenking out into a delighted smile when Father would look down from his horse Ginger and say briefly, "Good!" On the way home, when he saw Lou Ellen waving at him from her front steps, he pretended to be busy with a button on his jacket, and he did not make any reply.

All summer Billy worked hard at his riding. And finally he was allowed to ride Chesty, and to learn to jump! And only when Father had gone away from the Fort did he swing Lou Ellen over his head, or play tag with her.

He felt a little guilty about Lou Ellen, she was such a plucky little sport about it. When he saw her playing all alone on her front porch (she was the only child at the Fort under seven) he felt like a deserter. But he hardened his heart. He knew his father wanted him to be a "regular he-man."

At the end of the summer there was a big horse show. Billy's father's eyes shone as he told Billy about it! "Look here, Son," he said, "if you get to be a really good horseman, I'll let you ride with me in the Pair Jumping!" And when it came time for the entries there were their names posted together: "Pair Jumping: Captain Lester, Captain Drummond; Lieutenant Glenn, Miss Rowen; Captain Burton, William Burton."

Day after day they put Ginger and Chesty over the fences, over the post and rail. And it was up to Billy to win, really, for of course Father would easily be the best! Up to Billy to win, for his father!

Every one at the Fort came out to the horse show. When the six horses in the Pair Jumping came into the ring, every one applauded and shouted, especially when they saw Ginger and Chesty, with Captain Burton and Billy up. Billy sat proud and intent; he had to win for Father, to show Father he was a "he-man."

They had to take four jumps, two going away from the wide, open door that led to the street, two going back toward it. Riding easily side by side, they cleared the first! The second! It was just as they turned to face the door that Billy, eyes for a moment lifted from the course, saw through the open door Lou Ellen come dashing down the street, clinging wildly to the mane of a running pony. Just as they came opposite the door, the pony gave a lurch, and Lou Ellen spilled in a little white heap on the road.

Billy's mind working wildly. He would lose the race for Father! He would be a sissy to stop being a he-man to pick up a baby! The crowd gasped to see Billy Burton's horse make a sudden smooth dash for the door.

Without pausing in his stride, Chesty reached the still figure in the road, hesitated just long enough for Billy to dismount (he was too small to reach down), gather the limp Lou Ellen in his arms, and mount again, and went off at a smooth canter toward the Fort hospital.

Twenty minutes later Billy Burton came slowly out onto the hospital steps to face his father. He had not heard the doctor say: "Five minutes later, Captain Burton, and it would have been too late to operate. Your son. . . ." Billy, raising his brown eyes bravely to face the consequences, was surprised to see tears in his father's eyes, and to hear an unsteady tremble in his father's voice, as he grasped his hand, and said, "I'm proud of you, Billy. You won a race that shows you are a regular he-man, my son!"

WASHINGTON LEARNED WAR IN CUMBERLAND

Took His First Military Command There When He Went To Fort Necessity

George Washington is more closely connected with Cumberland than with almost any other place ouside his own Mt. Vernon.

Over a period of forty-one years, beginning with his first visit there as a youth of twenty-one in 1753, until his last visit as President of the United States in 1794, Washington was a familiar figure in Cumberland, then only a frontier fort.

It was there that the successful leader of the War for American Independence first learned military operations on a large scale; there he first saw the methods of training of a formidable British army, and also had his first lesson in disciplined warfare.

Learend War There

In a letter to his brother, John Augustine Washington, dated from Fort Cumberland, May 14, 1755, while the Braddock expedition against Fort Duquesne was being prepared to strike, Washington wrote as follows:

"I now have a good opportunity, and shall not neglect it, of forming an acquaintance with military rules which may be serviceable hereafter if I find it worth while to push my fortunes in a military line."

Fort Cumberland had been erected in 1750 by the Ohio Company, a land and trading concession chartered by the British crown in 1749. Christopher Gist, the famous pioneer guide, was its agent. Among those interested in the company were Lawrence Washington and Col. Thomas Cresap.

As a surveyor for Lord Fairfax, Washington had penetrated that section and beyond into West Virginia. His first visit after establishment of the fort there was in 1753.

Surveyed French Strength

Governor Dinwiddie, of Virginia, had learned that the French were invading the Ohio region and erecting a chain of forts southward from the Great Lakes. To ascertain the exact extent of French actlvities along the Ohio and to warn them that Great Britain would not consent to their occupation of that terriory, Gov. Dinwiddie commissioned the twenty-one year old Washington to penetrate that area and bring back a complete survey of the situation.

On his way to the Ohio and enroute back, Washington stopped at Fort Cumberland. The fort, by the way, occupied the site where now stand Emmanuel Episcopal church, the Masonic Temple and Dr. James T. Johnson's home.

Washington's report to Gov. Dinwiddie was that the French were already well entrenched and determined to hold the Ohio territory by force of arms. This report was transmitted to the British government, and resulted in the decision to send a British army to Fort Cumberland to prepare for a drive against the French invaders. In the meantime, Gov. Dinwidlie was ordered to take steps to repel the French advance with Colonial troops until the British Army could reach America.

Col. Joshua Fry was put in command of 300 Virginia soldiers with Washington as his assistant.

His First Command

On April 20, 1754, Washington (then 22) arrived in Cumberland with half of the troops. Col. Fry, leading the other 150 men, was fatally injured when his horse stumbled and fell on him. He was brought on to the fort by his men and was given medical attention by Dr. Craik (afterwards surgeon general of the Continental army) but he died May 31 and was buried in Cumberland. The location of his grave is not definitely known.

Col. Fry's death left the youthful Washington in command of the Colonial troops at Fort Cumberland.

Washington had left before his Colonel's death for the invasion of the French territory. He got no further than Great Meadows where he built Fort Necessity, about fifty miles west of Cumberland. His defeat there forced his return to Fort Cumberland, and there he remained long enough to see that the wounded were given proper attention before he returned to Virginia to report to Gov. Dinwiddie.

Braddock's Headquarters

Cumberland was selected as the base of operation for the veteran British Army that arrived in America early in 1755 under the distinguished General Braddock, former commander of the Coldstream Guards, then regarded as the model regiment of the English army.

Washington was named by Braddock as one of his aide de camps. The General arrived in Cumberland on May 10, 1755, in great pomp and ceremony. There were salutes, a great reception and considerable feasting. More than 2000 picked soldiers of the British army were augmented there by a great force of Colonials and a small body of friendly Indians.

It was at this time that Washington wrote his broher that he had never had such an opportunity to learn military tactics.

Good News From Cumberland

After the Braddock defeat in July, Washington was reported among the 800 killed and wounded.

It was from Cumberland that the future leader of the Continental army and Father of his Country wrote to his family that he was alive and well. The letter acquainting his home of his safety was dated in Cumberland on July 18, 1755.

Washington remained there a long time, until he was ordered back to Virginia by Gov. Dinwiddie to assume command of all Virginia military forces.

From January until March, 1757, Washington lived in Cumberland at the fort.

The next time Washington came to Fort Cumberland was in July, 1758, at the head of 2000 soldiers sent there to join Gen. John Forbes in the second campaign against Fort Duquesne (now Pittsburgh). Col. Washington stayed there all summer, leaving there on September 20 to join Forbes at Bedford, Pa., for the successful march against the French at Duquesne.

Last Appearance In Cumberland

Fort Cumberland was abandoned as a regular military post in 1765 and it is doubtful if Washington was there any more until he came there as President of the United States in 1794 to direct the troop movement against the so-called Whiskey Rebellion in Pennsylvania. Three years later he retired from office and lived only two years in the peaceful surroundings of Mt. Vernon, dying December 14, 1799, in his 68th year.

It has been pointed out often, and should be a matter of local pride, that the greatest American of all began and ended his military career in Cumberland. His campaign from there to Fort Necessity, at the age of 22, was his first military adventure, and his direction of troops against the Whiskey insurrection, at the age of 62, was his last.
